

Limitations: The adverse event and product problem reports contained in this record are not necessarily causally related to (caused by) the reported product, nor do they mean the product was defective. Consumer complaints involving animal foods are received by FDA through voluntary reporting systems. Not all reports undergo follow up actions by FDA; however, each report received is important to FDA as part of our ongoing surveillance efforts related to pet food safety. Trends in reporting can provide an early warning of emerging safety issues of concern.

Other limitations:

- For any given report, there is no certainty that the reported pet food caused the adverse event. The adverse event(s) reported may be more related to an underlying disease, condition, or concomitantly administered medication.
- The report narratives are provided in the form in which we received them, the quality of the information provided about the adverse event/product problem is dependent on the quality of the information received from the veterinarian and/or pet owner.
- Adverse event report numbers should not be used to calculate incidence rates or measures of relative risk. It is not data from a controlled study, and there is no accurate way to know the true size of the population exposed to a product, nor the true population affected with an adverse event.
- Adverse event data should not be used to compare the safety of different products. Many factors can influence reporting, and products that are more widely distributed or sold in greater volume may have more reporting than those with limited distribution or sales. Products for which there has been recent publicity may experience more reporting for a period of time afterwards. Underreporting is also common with adverse event reporting systems.

EON-206410	4/30/2015 14:28	Blue Buffalo for Seniors	(b) (6) developed severe diarrhea and vomiting the evening of Monday, April 27, followed by severe lethargy the morning of Tuesday, April 28. He refused food and water so I called our veterinarian at (b) (6) (b) (6) in (b) (6). He was seen later that day and diagnosed with Pancreatitis following an exam and blood tests. One of the first questions they asked me was about (b) (6) food. Two weeks prior I had switched all of our dogs to Blue Buffalo. (b) (6) ate the dry product for Senior dogs. The Vet said to stop use of Blue Buffalo immediately for all of our dogs as they have seen many animals recently with stomach issues who had been eating Blue Buffalo. They also stated that another hospital they speak with frequently was having the same experience. Another of our dogs experienced some vomiting at the same time but not as severe as (b) (6). I threw away about $80 of food immediately. Because it was two weeks following purchase of the food, I had thrown away the packaging so unfortunately I do not have any codes or lot numbers for you. It was purchased at Pet Valu in (b) (6) I realize we cannot say conclusively that Blue Buffalo is the cause of (b) (6) problem, but it seems like a very strong coincidence given what our veterinarian reported to us, and I wanted you to know. (b) (6) initial treatment cost $226.00.	10	Years	Dachshund - Miniature	Dog	15.6	Pound
EON-206397	4/30/2015 13:08	Eukanuba Adult Maintenance Premium Dog Food	On 4/24/2015 (b) (6) woke up and was about to go outside when he suddenly jolted and ran across the house. He then flipped on his back and began convulsing. He was incontinent of urine and feces during these episode, and when he stopped convulsing he was disoriented. I brought him to the emergency vet and he received blood tests and was monitored for several hours. He was started on Keppra XR 1000mg bid in order to prevent future seizure incidents. On 4/29/2015, (b) (6), a retriever mix who also lives in the house and was fed the same food experienced a similar incident. EON-206396	4/30/2015 12:48	Blue Buffalo Homestyle Chicken Dinner with Garden Vegetables	I have bought Blue Buffalo Homestyle Chicken in the can for years. Approximately 2-3 months ago I went to open a can and noticed the top was bulging. As I touched the top, was going to through the contents out, the lid BLEW off and sprayed HORRIBLE smelling dog food all over the kitchen. I was foul and obviously I had opened hundreds of these before with no bad smell. I called Blue Buffalo to report a problem as well as PetsMart where the product was purchased. All they seemed to care about was refunding my money, exchanging it, and sending me coupons. As I told them all, I AM NOT INTERESTED IN MONEY for this, I want the problem fixed so some idiot doesn't feed bad food to their pet! They assured me they would fix the problem. Night before last THE SAME THING HAPPENED!!!! Apparently NOTHING was fixed or investigated!! I did save, by accident, the numbers on the first can and I also have the actual can from night before last. PLEASE help me or tell me who can. I am NOT going to let this go.... someone is not doing their job at Blue and it MUST be corrected. Thanking you in advance. The date of the first occurrence is approximately as I have tons of receipts from PetsMart for Blue Buffalo and don't know which ones had the bad cans on them. However, I do have the recent receipt.

EON-206048	4/28/2015 10:24	Milk-Bone Brushing Chews	I gave her one Milk Bone Brushing Chews (mini) Sunday morning (4/26/15) around 9:45 am. Sunday evening (around 10:00 pm) she started behaving very abnormally. She was panting/wheezing uncontrollably and acting very weirdly in general. She was much more clingy than usual and quite apathetic and lethargic. She sat on my lap, and when I tried to stand, she stayed. She felt like a deadweight, when normally she bounds up with much excitement. It reminded me of when we had her neutered, and she was still on anesthesia. When I finally got her off of my lap, she lost complete control of her bladder. She knew something was off, but clearly couldn't control it. I tried to rush her outside, but she was moving very slowly (again, she normally runs outside). There was a long stream of urine leading to the back yard. Once outside she urinated many, many more times. She defecated, too, multiple times, and her stools appeared to be loose. She then rolled around in the mulch, which was abnormal behavior, too. Yesterday, she slept all day (Monday, 4/27/15), and was generally lethargic. As a two-year-old schipperke mix, she normally has boundless energy. She also seems to have phantom itches. She'll go to bite her tail, then realize what she is about to do, so she stops. She also randomly sits down for no reason (not because her legs are buckling out from under her, she just seems compelled to sit). This has continued today. She is having trouble defecating, too, and it is liquidy when it happens. She is continuing to sleep. I've alerted (b) (6) and my vet as well. Here are reviews on Amazon: http://www.amazon.com/Milk-Bone-Brushing-Chews-Dental-Treats/product-reviews/B00INTTDQW/ref=cm_cr_pr_viewopt_srt?ie=UTF8&amp;filterBy=ad	2	Years	Schipperke	Dog	21	Pound

EON-205847	4/26/2015 10:52	9 Lives Daily Essentials	She has always been fed either Meow Mix or Kit &amp; kaboodle dry food. I always get large bags as they are overall cheaper. Well our local WalMart was out of most large bags except the real pricey ones or 9 Lives. So I decided to get the 9 Lives Daily Essentials and she how she liked it. I started giving it to her and everything was fine. She went through the first bag then I grabbed a second bag figuring she must of really liked it. Well about a week ago I noticed she hasnt been as sociable as she always had. She usually would come in my room and wait for me to go to bed. Well she stopped doing it. Then I noticed her water hasnt been getting dirty or drank at all and her food hasnt been touched. When she finally came over I noticed she was alot more skinny then normal. She barely jumped onto the couch and all she wanted to do is lay there. Since then I have noticed she is either throwing up liquid or she is urinating on the floor which she never did before. At first I blame my daughters dog but hes been upstairs. I gave her some time figured she just wasnt feeling good. So I started giving her canned food and she seemed to be eating that. But that was on top of her dry food. I started looking around online and came across this site http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/9lives_cat_food.html with similar problems. EON-205655	4/24/2015 16:12	Purina Beneful	Used Beneful for months straight, 1 dog could not gain weight. 1 dog 2 months ago had what looks like a seizure. Switched food, 1 still have one husky. Since switching food (b) (6) can gain weight and much healthier. Really concerned this is happening to other dogs and even more concerned more people are complaining about this, and have seen so significant action from Purina other than denying it is occurring. I do not know exact dates where we had to euthanize (b) (6) and date we had taken to vet, but I can provide if necessary after digging more into this. EON-205227	4/23/2015 10:32	Freshpet Select Fresh From the Kitchen Home Cooked Chicken Recipe	There has been a significant uptick in mold reportings on Freshpet products. As quick background, Freshpet is refrigerated "fresh" pet food. In the attachment, you can see that there is a number of reportings of new unopened packages where the food is covered in mold. While in the attachment it is obvious that these products have a mold problem, my biggest concern is invisible mold, where the consumer is not aware that there is mold growing on the problem. I think there needs to be a recall and the problem needs to be fixed. A dog should not have to die before this is investigated.

She refused to eat the food and her initially just soft stools became violent diarrhea with bloody mucus, which she had several times a day, later added vomiting of bile because she had no more food in her stomach. Extensive X-rays have shown she has no blockage and the barium passed through her intestines fine. Stool samples did not show parasites or worms which was what we first suspected as only one dog seemed to have symptoms. Her regular diet includes Nutrisca Chicken and Chick Peas. There is currently a recall for Nutrisca Chicken and Chick Peas due to a Salmonella issue. The recall is for the 4-lb bag; our suspect bag was 15 lb.  Our Veterinarian thinks the symptoms were consistent w/ Salmonella; extensive tests have not turned up an alternative diagnosis.  Her worst symptoms generally coincided with the times that we tried to re-introduce her regular food (Nutrisca). Her symptoms eased with a diet of rice and chicken or Hills ID. Earlier this week we successfully broke this cycle by re-introducing a different commercial brand (Science Diet).	7	Years	Schnauzer - Miniature	Dog	20	Pound

EON-203819	4/12/2015 14:20	Whiskas Temptations (Salmon Flavor)	I have two 3-month old kittens (b) (6) and (b) (6) - brother and sister). On April 3rd some friends gave us a bag of "Whiskas Temptations - Salmon Flavor" cat treats. They each ate a few treats (maybe 3-7) between April 3rd and April 7th. On April 7th, the female kitten (b) (6) began throwing up. On April 8th she was throwing up bile every hour and couldn't keep food or water down. We had to take her to the emergency vet 3 times, and eventually hospitalized her overnight with an IV and medication. She is finally recovering. Stomach exams, blood work, an x-ray, and an ultrasound all came back normal and the vet couldn't figure out what had caused the reaction. On April 10th, the male kitten, (b) (6) began showing similar signs. He stopped eating and drinking, has vomited continuously, and also has diarrhea. He is currently being seen by the emergency vet as well. We are hoping that he will pull through on his own, but may have to hospitalize him as well. After the kittens got sick I checked online for any recalls on their food/treats. There are no recalls out on anything, however, I found a number of people asking via online blogs whether there was a recall out for Whiskas Temptations. Many people are reporting very similar cases (non-stop vomiting after eating the treats, some even reporting that their cat died of liver failure). I will put the link I found below. The Whiskas Treats were the only change in the diet of both kittens, and their reaction started in close proximity to the treats. Both kittens were seen by their primary care vet prior to the event and were in great health. I haven't yet reported the issue to the manufacturer, but plan on doing that as well. This experience has been horrible, especially seeing such small kittens in pain. Please call or email me with any questions. I hope that you can investigate these treats so that they can be recalled if necessary. I don't want any other pet owners to have to go through this. Thank you. http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/whiskas-cat-food.html	3	Months	American Shorthair	Cat	3.7	Pound

So on March 9 I bought a new bag of Healthwise Cat Food and began transitioning them back to Healthwise over a 2 week period. The transition was complete on March 23, 2015. On Tuesday, March 31, 2015, Lily had full blown diarrhea and was also vomiting. By Friday, 4/3, Murphy (who weighs 3 lbs more than (b) (6) also had diarrhea and was vomiting. By Sunday, 4/5/15, Finch (who weighs as much as (b) (6) but who doesn't eat as much of the dry food as the others) was also vomiting and had diarrhea. EON-202628	4/5/2015 12:36	Blue Buffalo Wilderness Salmon Recipe	In the past the dog had been prone to food based allergies that presented as hot spots which immediately became infected. He had been on a meat, chicken, and grain free diet and was fed Blue Buffalo Salmon which later was re-branded as Blue Buffalo Wilderness Salmon food for over five years without any incidences or adverse effects. This past Fall, over the course of several months, he had numerous infected hot spots, was lethargic, and was treated with three separate rounds of anti-biotics. Additionally, anecdotal as this may be - the food which had a very discernible pungent fishy smell, smelled different- there was absolutely no fishy smell. The vet concluded it must be the food that was making him ill. I was slow to change the food as we had been using it for over five years and could not imagine that would be the problem. Poly something Glycol. Never knew about this till I read about it on Facebook and websites and all the dogs becoming sick, seizures, etc. Plus I researched things after my dog had his first seizure on 3/14. since had 4 more, 3 were in one day. I had to bring him on the weekend to an ER hospital for animals and paid $562, next day my vet for $63 but prior I also paid $159 to my vet after that 3/14 seizure. No cause was determined and of course we simply don't know but I will tell you friends are having problems with seizures now too and I threw all my products away with those ingredients and those I can I am trying to get a refund from my store where I purchased them, if possible. I would think nothing of spending $30 a week on treats. My dog is a big boy and my husband would feed him 3-5 treats a day, too much. But my point is that over the 6 years, this last year and now too many, these treats have built up in his system. Thus did this ingredient cause him to get seizures now where he was fine till 3/2015. That is why I put unknown. He was in excellent health throughout his 6 years but my husband was paralyzed for 18 months and since walking since 2014 he has been over treating (b) (6) and thus could this have built up in his system. Simply don't know. But want to stress the FDA should be ashamed of themselves for allowing this ingredient. It was banned in cat food and shouldn't it be banned in dog foods too and treats. First we had to deal with china killing our pets and now this? I just want to be on file in case a class action goes forth and the consumers win. EON-201692	3/30/2015 16:00	FLYDOH	I am in the hobby of raising amphibians. I called a company (USAFrog in Tennessee) to inquire about the food they sell to culture fruit flies (FLYDOH). The ad can be found here ( http://usafrog.com/SAFE-Media.aspx ). I asked the owner, Rick Wascher, if he could tell me what the ingredients were in their FLYDOH media. Rick was very rude and would not provide any information or any labeling to answer my question and I am under the impression that withholding information on animal feed products is illegal. I don't want anyone to purchase a product from them that doesn't have a proper list of ingredients that could potentially cause problems and wipe out expensive collections of amphibians. I was mostly concerned about the mold inhibitor, but a list of all ingredients should be required anyways. I would like to file a complaint that USAFROG is not in compliance with pet food labeling laws. I read in the regulations that anything being consumed by one animal that is intended to be consumed by another animal falls into the category of requiring these items listed.

He was having kidney failure, low blood cells, anemia, & liver lesions. In January, the veterinarian gave him 24hrs-1 week to live. At this point, he was weak, lethargic, not eating, vomiting & etc. I decided to try and make him as comfortable as possible. I stopped feeding him the Beneful that he has been eating for 2 years, and started to give him human food or whatever he would eat. I figured it couldn't hurt. EON-201590	3/28/2015 20:44	NUTRO® Lamb & Rice Small Bites Adult Dog Food	We have been buying Nutro food for years for out dogs. On 3/2/15 we bought a new bag of Nutro lamb and rice natural choice small bites for our Yorkie-poodle mix. She is 8 years old and had to date had no health problems. On (b) (6) we woke up to approximately 12+ piles of her vomit, one being very bloody. We took her to the vet that morning for treatment, she didn't get better so we took her to the emergency vet the next day where she stayed overnight for treatment. The next morning she passed away. We are devastated by her loss but we had not suspected the food. However, we recently mixed her left over food with a new bag of Nutro which is the same (lamb and rice) but large bites for out border collie/husky mix to eat. On our walk home yesterday evening she threw up four times. She never throws up. I couldn't help but to wonder if it was the food. Then I read this website http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/nutro.html and now I'm concerned it was the food and feel that it should be looked into.	8	Years	Terrier - Yorkshire	Dog	6	Pound

EON-201521	3/27/2015 17:12	Beneful Playful Life	We started feeding our dogs Beneful in December thinking it would be better for them since they were getting a little older. In January we noticed (b) (6) was not acting like herself , she wasn't eating much and seemed to just lay around. She started urinating on our bed, and the kitchen floor which was unusual she was panting and her nose was dripping clear fluid. We took her to a local vet cause her original Vet did not have an appointment soon enough. The vet took her temp and said she had a very high Fever and an ear infection she was given a shot there,and we were given an antibiotic,and ear drops. The vet suggested we give her Health science diet dog food so we bought that there also. Once she was finished with the medicine she seemed like she was slowly getting better. We ran out of the dog food and went back to the Beneful about 3 weeks later( which we still have the rest of the dog food). We had seen on Facebook that Beneful dog food was killing dogs so we stopped feeding it to our dogs. Although (b) (6) was still showing signs that she wasn't feeling well we tried everything we could to keep her eating and drinking , We stopped the Beneful About a week and a half ago. Last Friday we noticed she was getting worse she started to not eat and she had yellow goop coming from her eyes. By Monday she wasn't able to get up at all, she would just lay and whine. Due to not having the finances to take her to a vet we spent the day using a medicine giver to feed her water .We found that she had had a bowel movement and it was pure blood. On Monday evening I was able to get a line of credit through care credit , by that time all regular vets were closed so we drove 45 minutes from our home to take her to an emergency vet . We had to carry her in because she was to weak to walk. They did blood work that showed she had a very sever infection somewhere , her temp was 105.1 , she was kept overnight given fluids , antibiotics and other meds. we had to pick her up the next morning because they do not hold dogs there after they close at 7 am. We brought her home and gave her the 2 antibiotics and pepcid Ac that they gave us. My husband and I took turns staying by her side giving her water and ground up food and made it into liquid and fed her through a medicine giver on Wednesday and Tuesday. she just continued to get worse. By Thursday morning she could no longer lift her head her one eye was sunken in and matted shut and her other one just shook back and forth, every time I would talk to her she would just cry out. I knew that she was suffering so I made the hardest decision of my life and called the vet and set up an appointment to have her put to sleep. Before she got sick she weighed over 80 pounds when she died she weighed only 66. We would like to request that you do an autopsy on her and prove that the dog food killed her. She is currently being kept frozen at the vets office . I thank You for you time and I am praying that we can get this dog food off the shelves so no one else has to watch there fur baby die.

EON-201348	3/26/2015 6:00	Purina One SmartBlend Chicken and Turkey Flavor	(b) (6), (b) (6), and (b) (6) have been vomiting quite often in the last couple of days. We first attributed the vomiting to possible hairball issues with the onset of spring, but the vomit does not contain hair. The vomit tends to be a clear, thick, sticky secretion. We've witnessed these three cats vomiting, but that's not to say one of the other five aren't contributing to the ever-growing vomit piles around the house. I noticed when I scooped our litter boxes and filled-up the food bowl in the last two days that barely any of the food has been touched. This got me wondering if the food could be the culprit. Nothing else in our cats' lives has changed in the last couple of days, but we just emptied a brand new bag of Purina One into our storage bin in the last couple of days. This seems to coincide with the onset of the vomiting. I went online to see if anyone else is having problems with this product, and have found MANY instances of animals getting sick (with vomiting being the early sign) from Purina pet food products.	4	Years	American Shorthair	Cat	10	Pound

I opened a new bag of this food last week and both dogs started getting very sick. Symptoms are: throwing up, diarrhea, lethargy, glassy eyes, anal glands infection causing very offensive smells. I checked the Consumers Affairs website to find out that there are a about 250 similar complaints written within the last couple months. Same food causing the same symptoms. How many more dogs need to get sick or die before a recall? I can understand mistakes and human errors but cannot understand why Costco hasn't recalled this batch of food yet. I do most of my shopping at Costco. I love the place and the way employees are treated but I'm considering not going anymore. Can I (and all my friends) seriously trust Costco with our own food safety when they obviously know something is wrong with their dog food and don't do anything about it? I hope both my dogs make it. They are on a special diets now and seem to be getting better. I am so disappointed and angry at Costco for their lack of ethics in this case and I feel for all the dog owners whose pets got very sick from feeding them food from a source they thought they could trust. He is a very healthy 9 year old lab with no prior medical problems. All of a sudden he became very sick. I took him to the vet and found his kidneys are failing. The vet put him on medication for kidney failure. 2 weeks later we had to take him back to have his kidneys retested. The vet was speechless because he couldn't believe his kidneys were still failing. The vet said he is so healthy I just can't believe his results aren't any better. We changed his food immediately however kidney failure is something that is normally irreversible. Please don't let others lose their pets to this food.	9	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	68	Pound

On the evening of March 18, she seemed to be a little slow moving. By the next morning (19th), she could hardly move. She was unsteady when she walked. She could not walk up steps. She refused to eat. She refused to drink. I got her in to my vet that morning. I had to lift her in to the car to get her there. Blood work and X-rays were done. Showed dehydration, enlarged spleen, beginning of infection, low red blood cell count. She was put on antibiotics and an anti-inflammatory. Received IV fluids. I chose to take her home. No progress over the evening. I took her back in the next day. She received a steroid injection, more IV fluids, and a prescription for steroids at home. She started showing improvement later that evening. She has been showing gradual improvement since. I would like to say that I have used Purina products for years. I have always had faith in their products. I do not know if it was the food that caused the problem. But I think someone needs to dig a little deeper. I still have the dog food bag. EON-200893	3/21/2015 13:52	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Natural Chicken and Brown Rice Recipe Puppy	In early January we rescued a 4 month old GSD mix. Based on product labeling and pet store recommendations and the high price of the food we chose to feed her Blue Buffalo Natural Chicken and Brown Rice for Puppies. She vomited her first serving. We wrote this off to her being in a new home and anxiety. She had loose stools. We wrote this off to her teething. She began displaying allergy symptoms and secondary infection: digging in her bed, licking floor, pawing at face, conjunctivitis, chewing at herself as if she had fleas (she had none), licking her lips and swallowing hard. She underwent antibiotic therapy which helped with conjunctivitis but nothing more. She incessantly ate grass, had excessive thirst, and frequent urination. Last Sunday she was lethargic. When she did get up she was limping (diagnosed by vet as Pano). At that point I researched her food and found the plethora of complaints. I took her off the food and began feeding her Turkey and Rice. Within 24 hours all symptoms except limping were gone (the limping had improved by 80%). By day four off of the Blue she was no longer limping at all.	6	Months	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	37	Pound
EON-200834	3/20/2015 16:12	Kirkland Natures Domain	In February I decided to switch dog foods. I purchased Costco's Kirkland Natures Domain. I noticed in March my dog started getting sick. Her symptoms were vomiting, diarrhea, lethargy. I was very concerned and had brought her several times for medical treatment. I couldn't understand how a healthy do who is extremely active could have gotten so sick so fast. The doctors really couldn't find anything and suggested that it might be IBD. I tried to think what might of happened to get her so sick and realized that I just purchased this new brand of dog food just around the time she was getting ill. I am totally convinced that this is the reason for her illness and also for all of my medical expenses.	2	Years	Schnauzer - Giant	Dog	52	Pound

EON-200821	3/20/2015 15:52	BFF Tuna & Lamb Luv Ya Recipe in Gravy Cat Food Pouches, BFF Tuna & Beef Baby Cakes Recipe in Gravy Cat Food Pouches	I fed the BFF cat food pouches to two of my indoor-only cats. Within the following hours they became vomiting which did not stop for hours. One of the cats ate more of the food and fell ill more than the other. The cat with more severe reaction stopped eating, became lethargic, would not move and developed 106.4F fever. I rushed him to the local ER hospital, where unfortunately he got misdiagnosed, and the conditions did not improve in the coming days. The cat spent 3 days in the initial hospital and got discharged after receiving antibiotics, spent time in an oxygen chamber, had lung x-rays and heart ultrasound, along with extensive blood work. The antibiotics and steroids only helped to lower the fever and within a few days he relapsed. I rushed him back to the same er, only to be sent to the specialty er hospital. A week later he was finally diagnosed with a severe form of pancreatitis, which the abdominal ultrasound and blood work confirmed. He spent another 4 days in the hospital and slowly began to recover. He has began to eat and he is done with his second round of antibiotics, pain meds and appetite stimulants, but this whole ordeal cost us over $6,000. In addition, after his final follow-up exam the senior vet at the specialty er hospital said for the first time that he was the worst case of pancreatitis that she has seen in years. The cat is not even five years old yet and apparently, it was a surprise to all that he survived this ordeal. In the meantime, the other cat that ate less of it, continued to vomit for days, but she did not develop fever and has slowly recovered. I could not afford to take both to the er hospital, so I picked the one that was in more severe condition, with the life-threatening symptoms. I still have the box full of pouches that I fed them, but I have not fed them any more since.	4	Years	Domestic (unspecified)	Cat	14	Pound

About a week ago I went to buy her more dog food and her normal brand was out so I bought Purina's "BENEFUL" brand. Now, approximately 8 days later (b) (6) is showing symptoms of severe lethargy, not eating/drinking, and pale gums. All of these signs coincide with the symptoms of the 3,000 dogs that are involved in the lawsuit against the Purina Beneful brand. The switching of dog food was the ONLY change in Harley's lifestyle in the last few months. I have contacted 2 different Vets in the area and I must monitor her overnight and over the next day or two. If she worsens or does not get better she will have to go in for full-body blood work. THIS IS NOT OKAY. I purchased this brand thinking it was safe because it was on the shelves. I cannot believe Beneful is still being sold while this lawsuit is pending. It should be removed from the shelves or the dangers of it should be better advertised.	3	Months	Terrier - Boston	Dog	20	Pound

EON-200706	3/19/2015 17:52	Beneful Healthy Weight	This is a very sad but true story about BENEFUL DOG FOOD. (b) (6) our largest yorkie had gotten to where she wanted to eat all the time probably because of the cold weather and we were visiting my husband's brother a lot and was gone more. We saw a small bag of Beneful Healthy Weight at (b) (6) for $3 around the first of the year so we bought it and (b) (6) loved it so when she finished it we bought a large bag. Right after this we noticed all the dogs had been getting sick a lot taking turns throwing up and again we thought since we were gone a lot visiting (b) (6) brother they were nervous so we let that go too. On Wednesday Feb. 4th (b) (6) was just out of it. Larthargic and walked around like she was drunk all day. Thurs (b) (6) she didn't seem any better so we took her to the vet where we were told her red blood count was down to 12 and they don't live if it gets down to 6 and she needed a blood trasfusion so we had this done and left her over night so they could give her blood thinners and steroids and other things. We picked her up Fri. (b) (6) and she seemed so much better was walking normally drinking and going to the bathroom but not eating which was ok and she kept improving so Sat (b) (6) (b) (6) was told to buy her baby food chicken and get her to eat and he did and she eat. Late Sat. eve she was acting strange again. Shaking and acting nervous. I went to take my shower and (b) (6) came in and said, "I'm taking (b) (6) to the garage , she's dying and the others just told her good bye!" WHAT?? I hurried to get out of the shower and dried and put my hair in the towel and was getting dressed when he comes back in and says, "She's gone!" She died from a blood clot in her lungs, only took about an hour so we wouldn't have made it to the vet anyway. Two vet's had run blood tests on her and thought it to be like lyme disease or another tick bite illness which there are numerous ones. EON-200673	3/19/2015 15:12	Iams Proactive Health Adult	I switched from Purina One hairball food to Iams thinking maybe it was better for my cats. Upon switching, slowly, I immediately had three that vomited and all but a couple got diarrhea. I did not think it could be Iams food so I brought one of the cats to my vet for blood tests and all came back normal (this was my elderly female with a prior history of intestinal infection when I got her in 2009 as a stray but had been healthy since). My vet also ran a fecal which came back negative. I tried acidophillus supplements, dewormed them all because I had gotten a new family in around three months prior to switching to Iams, purchased a 5-stage reverse osmosis system for the water thinking maybe it was from the water although it tested normal, tried pumpkin and various all natural "runny-poo" relief meds. I even tried Albon on the elderly female. Nothing worked. I took away the Iams and put them back on Purina One and within three days all but the elderly female returned to normal. The elderly female has been treated with penicillin for a week and seemed to cleared up. After 2 weeks without penicillin she is starting to show signs of getting diarrhea again so back on the penicillin for another week. She may not have been on it long enough last time. When we started trying to find what the cause was we contacted the Lifes abundance customer care and inquired about the ingredients in the treats. Specifically Lecithin they add. It is not specified as to the source, we finally got a reply it was infact Soybeans. This is really a mislabeling of a product, SOY should be on the label we never would have fed this product to the dog. We thought at first it was a stomach virus and waited two weeks or so and then took him to the vet and even had blood work done. The doctor gave us medicine for vomiting and nausea which we gave him. Around (b) (6) he was not feeling any better so we had X-rays taken. The vet said his stomach was displaced and his liver was so small it was practically non-existent. The vet could offer no explanation on what happened to his liver. Although we can't know for sure, we believe the dog food destroyed his liver. We only began to suspect this when some people my wife works with mentioned it. When we looked up the symptoms, (b) (6) had most of them: Nausea, loss of appetite, throwing up green bile, diarrhea and lethargy – all symptoms of liver failure. After the (b) (6) it looked like he was bouncing back, but then he started to fade again. On Saturday, (b) (6), we tried Thistle Milk and we did a lot of force feeding and he looked like he was bouncing back in the afternoon, but Sunday morning came and he was down and not moving much. On Sunday afternoon, he began throwing up even the special dog food from the vet. On Sunday night, (b) (6) became very lethargic and could not get up to go out. He weighed in at 72 pounds and had normal temperature. On February 14, we went for a 1 mile walk and (b) (6) seemed to be a little sore around the hips, was given 3 doses of Rimadyl, one per day. Around February 20, 2015, (b) (6) stopped eating his Blue Buffalo Salmon and Sweet Potato food and began drinking excessive amounts of water with frequent urination and suffered several bouts of urinary incontinence. Laboratory work performed on February 24, 2015 showed increased WBC (20 K/uL) with increased neutrophil and monocyte populations, BUN was low at 4 mg/dL and liver enzymes ALT (307 U/L), AST (84 U/L) and ALP (232 U/L), lipase was low at 86 U/L. Urinalysis indicated a 1+ bilirubin. A course of Metranidazole, Tramadol and Denamarin was initiated. Follow up bloodwork on March 5, 2015 showed continued elevations of ALP (237 U/L), ALT (227 U/L) and low lipase (96 U/L), albumin (2.6 g/dL) and BUN (5 mg/dL.) WBC count was still high at 18.7 K/uL with high neutrophil and low lymphocyte/eosinophil counts. Rectal temperature of 103.7. Bile acid tests on March 6, 2015 were high at 48.6 umol/L and 51.1 umol/L (post prandial). (b) (6) was still not interested in his dog food and weight dropped to 67 lbs. A liver ultrasound and core biopsy was performed on March 12, 2015 and the pathology report indicated moderate portal and random chronic suppurative hepatitis with pyogranulomas, sinusoidal leukocytosis, moderate hepatocellular vacuolar degeneration (glycogen type), mild single cell necrosis, mild intrahepatic pigment and mild bile duct hyperplasia. (b) (6) weight is now 65 lbs. and he suffers from diarrhea and lethargy, lameness. He has been on a diet of baked unseasoned chicken, rice, cottage cheese and baby food.	12	Years	Retriever (unspecified)	Dog	65	Pound

By Thursday afternoon he began having diarrhea which became uncontrollable. By Friday, he was also throwing up and unable to keep anything down including water. By Saturday morning, he refused all food and water, was badly dehydrated and was failing quickly. Our veterinarian was very concerned that he would not make it through the night. EON-200223	3/15/2015 20:32	Hills Prescription Diet d/d Canine Skin Support Venison Formula	I am a retired FDA investigator. My Chow can only eat Hills Science Diet d/d canine skin support venison formula. He is allergic to all other meats and fish which cause severe vomiting and bloody colitis. I am forced to use Hills prescription product that was ordered by a canine gastroenterologist specialist. Every winter, Hills allows their food to be frozen at their distributors' warehouses. Once it is frozen it becomes dry and crumbly and my dog will not eat it. This happened last year and had it not been for the ability to supplement in their dry food, my dog would have not eaten much. I called them and asked them to send me fresh food that hadn't been frozen but they said they couldn't direct ship to me. I asked them to send me cans from a distributor in a warmer part of the country but they refused. I tried to buy from Pet Food Direct but they couldn't promise it wouldn't be frozen. Then I would have paid extra for shipping for the same substandard product. Hills justifies their frozen product by saying they tested it and it has the same nutritional value as what they manufacture, but I would like to know how they can prove this with so many variables that they do not take into consideration (length of time being shipped, time in storage, storage temps, etc). Last year, I purchased 20 cases of unfrozen food to last me through this winter, but due to the long time of subfreezing temps this year, I cannot get that food yet. I finally asked my vet to prescribe me Royal Canin from another vet, which my dog likes but is much more expensive. I would like for you to determine how Hills is testing this frozen food and PLEASE ESTABLISH CFR Regs that would protect pet food. Hills knows there is nothing the FDA can do to them without these regs and don't seem to care about complaints. I think it is unfair that they can charge extra for prescription food, which FDA gives them the ability to make, and not assure that the food stays consistent from the manufacturing line to the pet's food bowl. Hills says they put "thermal blankets" on their food when it leaves the factory, but they cannot help how the distributor stores it. I find this a ridiculous excuse. They say they have a money back guarantee, but when I return the freezer burnt food, the distributor just sends me more of the same. Please help in this matter. My dog, as other dogs, are the ones suffering.

EON-200158	3/14/2015 13:36	Friskees Salmon Dinner Pate	On 3/7/2015, we gave our 6 cats 3 different flavors of Friskees canned foods. (b) (6) ate most of the Friskees Salmon Pate. She was healthy and fine before feeding her this food. The next morning, she vomited white foam, and became very ill. My husband took her to the veterinarian and she was diagnosed with a Urinary Tract Infection. Today, she is much better after a round of antibiotics. I researched online to see if anyone had any issues with Friskees and found the stories about the Allentown plant and the Salmon Pate cat food. Also, September 21, 2014 (b) (6) became ill, vomited foam the morning after eating Friskees (possibly the Salmon pate.) She was diagnosed with a mysterious infection and we came close to losing her. We had to treat her with strong antibiotics and the cause of her infection was never determined. One of our other cat's, (b) (6), age 8, came down with a severe ear infection on December 16, 2014. He was very sick and had to be given strong antibiotics. Our other cats were vomiting every day or every other day from October to recent and we thought it was hairball issues. Last week, I did not feed any of the cats Friskees. Instead they ate their dry food (I-Vet, and Royal Canin.) I gave them canned chicken (for human consumption) instead of the Friskees. Monday, 3/9/15 was the first day of stopping the Friskees Diet. No cats have vomited since this date. Coincidence.. or something to it? I have 2 cases of Friskees cat food in my pantry (assorted flavors) and I'm afraid to give them to any cats. EON-200012	3/13/2015 8:48	Purina Beneful Original	About a month ago on a Thursday our 8 1/2 year old (b) (6) suddenly began vomiting everything he ate. He then stopped eating entirely over the following days, but continued vomiting until blood and tissue were coming up. On (b) (6) we came home from work and found him bordering on unresponsive. We brought him to the emergency vet, bloodwork and xrays were done and found excessive gas in his intestines and elevated wbc, but no definitive cause. They gave us a 7 day gas script and sent us home. He continued to decline and by day 5 of the meds I rushed him back to the emergency vet when I came home to find him basically choking on his own bloody vomit, unable to move. More xrays and bloodwork were done, revealing higher wbc and extreme gas in his intestines. Emergency surgery was done which included palpating his entire intestines, and removal of his stomach, opening and exploring his stomach looking for potential blockage. Nothing was found blocking but his entire digestive system was severely inflamed and his stomach and intestinal lining were sloughing off. He spent the next week being transported between our Vet during the day and the emergency vet at night, since neither are staffed 24 hours. He was surviving on IV fluids and nutrition, and lots of meds. About a week and a half ago he was able to lift himself and began responding to his name and wagging his tail again. We had some hope finally. He came home but we have been tube feeding him since. He has been unable to eat at all, and has continued to vomit and lose weight. Earlier this week we began what the vet has called a 'last ditch effort' of strong antibiotics and steroids. Today was our D-day. There has been no improvement and tube feeding has become literal force-feeding that his body rejects each time. He is down to 40 pounds from the solid 78 he was not long ago. He has no will to go on, and we are out of medical interventions. Tomorrow we will say goodbye.	8.5	Years	Terrier - Bull - Staffordshire	Dog	75	Pound

			About two weeks into this I happened to read a shared newspaper article on fb about Purina Beneful. The stories others were sharing mirrored ours, but most of them (thousands of pet owners across the US) had already lost their dogs. Ours was still holding on. I brought it up with the vet and after consulting with his vet connections he told us that although he couldn't say definitively, it appeared that feeding (b) (6) was what had caused this. I called Purina on their "We Care" line and explained everything, begging them to not accept fault or admit to anything, but to review our records and offer any suggestions we might have overlooked. They said their Veterinarians don't speak to consumers but they would call my Vet directly. They then said I could confidently continue to feed Beneful to my dog, and hung up. They never called my Vet. Yesterday I spoke with the attorney out of California who is handling this mounting class action lawsuit against Nestle Purina, Susan Brown. We were connected with the FDA through her, and she indicated that when (b) (6) goes, we need to have arrangements with the FDA for preserving his body and transporting it to where an autopsy can be performed on him. We've spent over $3000 and endless hours and tears trying to save him over the last month, and we have failed. We meet with our Veterinarian later today for our final decision. I have retained all of the visit notes, blood work, testing results, bills, etc but I am having a hard time attaching them to this report for some reason. It may be easier for me to fax them in or email them. Please provide me with info on how I can best due this. Thank you.

Regardless of how I purchased the cans (in the case or separately) I know for a fact I bought 24 of them and I have almost gone through them all and that has been the only one with any discoloration/issue. The can with the issue smells foul. Nothing like the food normally smells. I have the bad can in my refrigerator with the food still in it. I have photos to compare the food in the cans (defective and regular). I hope all of this makes sense. I know Purina has been under fire lately for a variety of reasons and I am aware that the FDA contacted them about factory issues which is why I decided to contact the FDA about this problem. EON-199967	3/12/2015 16:44	Beneful Original and Beneful Healthy Weight Dog Food	(b) (6) became ill approximately 3 weeks ago after. She passed away 5 days later from kidney failure and internal bleeding. She was a happy, healthy dog until she became ill. Two days after her death, our 12-year-old lab became ill and is now suffering liver failure. So two sick dogs in one month. One passed away and the other is very ill. The common element is their food - Beneful Original and Beneful Healthy Weight. It has now been brought to my attention that a class action lawsuit has been filed regarding this product that has sickened and/or killed many dogs. The product contains a chemical used in antifreeze which is interesting because my vet was concerned when my Corgi became ill that maybe she somehow got into antifreeze. We do not have a drop of antifreeze anywhere in our home, garage or yard. Purina claims that the amount of the chemical is not harmful, but I disagree. Both of my dogs have been in excellent health. There are dozens of articles online regarding this product and sick dogs. Purina should be forced to remove it from shelves. I truly believe this is what killed my Corgi and has made my Lab very, very sick. I don't care how much is in the food, a chemical used in antifreeze should never be used in any pet food. It's extremely disturbing that my sweet dogs became ill because I bought a readily available dog food made by a respected company. Please, please, please don't let any other pet owner suffer. We took her right away to the vet and was told she had a 104 F fever and was dehydrated. White blood cell levels were elevated and an xray showed her gallbladder seemed to be slightly enlarged, but the vet set that could be normal with a sever infection. She was given IV fluids with antibiotics and spent the night in the hospital. She was able to come home the next day and was given meds to take. Rimadyl 75 mg, Ciprofloxacin 500 mg and Keflex 500 mg. After 5 days with no real improvement - she was lethargic and would not eat anything, we went to another vet for a 2nd opinion. Here she again had a 104 F fever. The dr noted white gums in addition to the other previous symptoms. Another Xray was done, this time, the vet thought there were some nodules in her lungs. They thought it was likely she had cancer. We took her home that night to continue the meds as the dr said it could be a slow growing type. At about 2 am she was up vomiting, could not stand up straight. When up right she kept going in circles and could not walk straight. We took her back in and based on the fact that the antibiotics previously did not help her and cancer was likely and the fact she was completely disoriented and seemed in pain we painfully decided to put her to sleep. Days later i read about the Beneful, which she had been eating for a few weeks previously and the symptoms sounded identical to what she had gone through.	9	Years	Shepherd (unspecified)	Dog	65	Pound

Monday morning, (b) (6) we noticed that he'd been vomiting and having severe bloody diahrrea during the night. We cleaned him up and we had to go to work. We came home that afternoon, and found him sitting in a puddle of his own blood. He was bleeding out of his rectum. We rushed him to the emergency vet and they put him in intensive care. The vet came in and said he was very ill. Without a whole lot of money and luck they weren't going to be able to save him. We had to put our Fred to sleep. EON-199752	3/10/2015 9:08	Purina Beneful Original	My puppy has been fed Rachel Ray's Nutrish dog food since we rescued him from a shelter, until January 2015, when we switched to Purina Beneful dog food we purchased from a local Costco. A couple of days after changing to Beneful we noticed that he was very hesitant to eat the food, but we assumed he wasn't hungry and as that was the only food for him in the house, continued to feed it to him, despite his objections. About a month later he had a light brown/yellowish diarrhea in his crate and after i let him out, vomited all over the rug in the living room and the deck outside. He had not had a problem like that previous to this. The only thing that changed for him was the food, so I stopped feeding the Beneful to him, went out and bought another bag of Nutrish, gave him rice and chicken stock for a couple of days and began feeding him the Nutrish again, and he hasn't had a problem since. I saw the recommendation to report to the FDA on NBC News this morning and that you were looking for dog food samples and I figured I would be proactive. I have the huge bag of the Beneful still hid away in my basement. Thank you for your time.	10	Months	Crossbred Canine/dog	Dog	35	Pound
EON-199747	3/10/2015 1:36	Purina Beneful Original	I just saw on the local news about the concerns of Purina Beneful, which is prompting this report. (b) (6), my mature Chow German Shepard was a relatively healthy dog in the care of a licensed veterinarian, suddenly fell ill and died on (b) (6) He has for years been on a diet of Alpo caned for the AM meal and PURINA BENEFUL ORIGINAL for PM meal. On (b) (6) (b) (6) had a typical day that included a brisk walk around the neighborhood. When I woke at 7:00am of (b) (6) (b) (6) came inside the house via the dog door and promptly went into the bathroom and laid on the floor. When he attempted to stand could not control his hind quarters. I lifted him on to his dog pillow. At that time I noticed dog vomit on the kitchen floor. He again attempted to stand and basically fell to the floor and laid there. He shortly there after died. I have moved all of his things into storage; which includes the remaining bag of Purina Beneful Original. EON-199745	3/10/2015 1:16	Beneful Original, Beneful Prepared Meals Savory Rice & Lamb Stew Beneful Prepared Meals Beef Stew Beneful Prepared Meals Chicken Stew	Our purebred Pomeranian was 6 six years old and a picky eater. He would eat one food for a while then we would have to change to another one. We started feeding him Beneful by Purina dry about 8/2/14. On 9/17/14 we noticed that he was losing his hair. We kept brushing and brushing him, thinking it was the regular shedding process, but the hair did not quit coming out. About this same time, we also noticed that he was starting to lose weight. He was also chewing on his toes to the point he was biting his nails off. We took him to the vet on 9/22/14 and the vet said he had a bacterial infection in his feet and gave us Prednisone and Gentocin spray to treat it. He was at the vet again on 9/30/14 because there was no improvement in his feet, and he was starting to throw up. Through blood tests it was determined that he had liver disease and was put on Hills Science Diet l/d. He ate this for a couple of weeks, then refused to eat it. On October 2, 2014, the vet gave him Cerenia for the vomiting and Chlorpromazine tablets and Loperamide Hydrochloride for the diarrhea that he had started having. On 10/07/14, he was seen and given Antirobe/Clindamycin drops for his feet which were not improving and a shot of Cerenia for the vomiting. Throughout (b) (6) and (b) (6) of (b) (6) his health continued to decline. He would get better for a while, then go back downhill again. (b) (6) he was seen by the vet and he determined that (b) (6) was diabetic. He was started on Novolin insulin, 2 shots per day and 4.5 units per shot. He was also diagnosed with conjunctivitis and given Antibiotic/Steroid eye drops. On (b) (6) we took him to the vet because he had started coughing. He was given Clomipramine, Antirobe/Clidamycin drops,, and Prednisone. The vomiting and diarrhea had been so severe that on (b) (6) he was given 100cc of subcutaneous fluid by the vet. We were told by the vet to administer 100cc of fluid subcutaneously every day. On (b) (6) he was having difficulty breathing. The vet gave him Torbutrol tabs and a Depo Medrol injection to help him breathe. It didn't help and we took him back	6	Years	Other Canine/dog	Dog	14.8	Pound to the vet on (b) (6) where he was put into an incubator with 3.5-4 liters of oxygen, and given a Diphenhydramine injection, Dura Pen/Baytrl/Dexal injection and a Lasix injection. None of the medicines helped and when we took him out of the incubator and he was on room air only, he was a great deal of trouble breathing, gasping for air. We could not see him suffer any longer and had the vet euthanize him to end his horrible suffering. We didn't realize what had happened until the end of (b) (6) when I saw on Facebook that other people had pets that either got seriously ill, had to be euthanized, or died after eating Beneful. When I read the symptoms that were being reported (chewing on feet, liver disease, weight loss, losing hair, difficulty breathing, etc.) I realized they were the same symptoms (b) (6) suffered from. Beneful was the only food he would eat, except for home cooked chicken and rice. When he got sicker and wouldn't eat the Beneful, we fed him the chicken and rice and he would improve. Then we would start feeding him Beneful again and he would get worse. Even our vet commented on how strange it was that he would go through these "spells" of getting better and then getting sicker than he had been before.

He was in perfect health until he stopped eating a few weeks ago, then started vomiting and diarrhea. He quickly became lethargic and weak. I have taken him to the vet several times and they could find nothing wrong with his blood test. After I insisted that something was wrong, they did an ultrasound and found that he has a massive lymph node in his intestinal tract and concluded that he has lymphoma. Because I cannot afford the treatment and tests, he is on steroids and anti nausea medication to try and make him as comfortable as possible for as long as we can keep him alive. He has never gotten into anything else to eat and is an indoor dog. EON-199690	3/9/2015 14:00	Milk-Bone Brushing Chews	Two months ago I started (b) (6) on a daily "mini" Milk Bone Brushing Chew (a relatively new product advertised by Milk Bone, now a company bought by Smuckers &amp; known as Big Heart Pet Brands). I just phoned their Customer Relations line &amp; gave a report of a very scary health incident which occurred due to daily ingestion of Milk Bone Brushing Chews (recommended feeding on box) by my 7 yr. old Jack Russell Terrier, (b) (6) over the last 2 month period. She has experienced 2 seizures which I now can attribute to their product. I have trusted Milk Bone products for years &amp; was also giving her your mini biscuits (which I now learn have BHA--a cancer causing ingredient in them). The Mini Brushing Chews contain Propylene Glycol which I am reading all over the internet &amp; there is a Facebook page detailing the sickness, seizures &amp; death people have reported after giving their dogs your Mini Brushing Chews. Yes, Propylene Glycol replaced Ethylene Glycol as being "less toxic" to animals...but it still is considered toxic:  http://www.petpoisonhelpline.com/poison/propylene-glycol/ Yet because of its proven ability to cause a serious type of blood disease in some animals — Heinz body anemia — propylene glycol has been banned by the FDA for use in cat food. But unfortunately, it can still be used to make dog food...and your company is using it. I am still VERY upset that these 2 incidents occurred &amp; hope that stopping the brushing chews and Milk Bone minis will restore her back to the healthy dog that she was. The FDA waits for deaths, etc. to stop this nonsense - why do we need to allow this in human or animal foods??? BHA in the Milk Bone biscuits is also a carcinogen but it's okay too. Appalling.	7	Years	Terrier - Jack Russell	Dog	12	Pound

EON-199688	3/9/2015 13:56	Purina Beneful	My dog, even though a senior dog, was very healthy for her age - still running in the yard after my children daily. Due to financial hardships - over the past year - I've changed my dog food and have been buying whatever I have coupons for. Lately, I'd been buying more Beneful - regular, Healthy Diet, Healthy Radiance, Fiesta - changing the kinds to give her a varying taste. I noticed she was losing weigh, but she was still eating and drinking normally, then started drinking more - but her other activities were the same. The weekend of (b) (6) - she started acting really funny - not eating, lathargic, etc. She didn't eat all weekend and by Sunday evening started to act back to normal - eating again, resuming normal activities, etc. I was not home the evening of Wed, (b) (6) and my sister called and said the dog wasn't acting right. She had been fine, then started to vomit and my sister let her out in the yard. The dog came back in, laid down and within minutes - was back up to go out to vomit again. It quickly turned from just vomiting - to violent vomiting and my dog was in distress. I got home and she was really bad and I rushed her to the 24hr animal hospital - where I found out her stomach had now turned from the violent vomiting and she had to be put down. They weighed her and she had lost almost 10lbs. We did not blood work since it seemed to be a case of bloat. The following week, the story came out about Beneful and I called the animal hospital and they said it could have absolutely been the cause. Being a senior dog, her body may not have been able to process the poisons that are in the food. Not only did my dog suffer, but there were FOUR dogs in (b) (6) alone in a week's time - that started with violent vomiting - and ended up losing their lives. All four were eating Beneful dog food purchased locally. There is yet another dog in town - who was lucky and survived their attack. Something needs to be done. Our dogs suffered violent, painful deaths that didn't need to happen. My family is heartbroken over such a sudden, horrendous loss. We spent alot of money that night - and nothing will bring back our beautiful fuzzy family member and bring those images from mine and my children's minds from what we went through that night.	12	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	66	Pound

EON-199685	3/9/2015 13:00	Beneful hard dog food (I threw away packaging)	On February 22, 2015, my dog (b) (6) had a seizure at 7am. It was violent, he was shaking violently and frothing at the mouth, and he evacuated urine and feces. I spoke with my sister who has an epileptic dog, and she told me to keep a close eye on him and keep a log, and if it happened again to bring him to the vet. I hoped it was a one-off and would bring him the next day for a checkup. Later in the middle of the night on February 23, (b) (6) had another seizure. I took him to (b) (6) (b) (6) on Monday, and they kept (b) (6) in over night for observation. On February 24, 2015, I picked (b) (6) up, the vet said he hadn't had any further seizures and to closely monitor him. Last month, our local Ralph's stopped stocking or ran out of the pet food we normally buy Pedigree. So we have switched to Beneful, and that was the food (b) (6) was eating when he had his seizure. I didn't make the connection until I read in the British newspaper The Daily Mail today that many dogs were having seizures and dying after eating this food! (b) (6) is a part of our family, we love him and our son would be devastated if anything were to happen to him again. Please look into the safety of this food immediately. I understand that Pedigree makes both brands of food that my dog ate before (Pedigree) the seizures and during/after (Beneful) the seizures. As of today, I will never risk feeding my dog this poison. Beneful is the common demoninator, the only thing different that my dog had or was exposed to during his seizures, and the most likely reason he had these seizures. Please investigate this fully and promptly. Also, please notify Ralph's regarding this complaint. Thank you and I look forward to hearing from you on the status of this investigation. Please note, that while I am indicating on this report that he has recovered completely because he has not had another seizure, the damage that was caused has not been determined. Also, the vet bill was almost $600!	5	Years	Terrier - Jack Russell	Dog	25	Pound

EON-199681	3/9/2015 12:16	Purina Beneful - Original	It never occurred to me that Beneful could be the culprit behind his illnesses. (b) (6) has been eating Purina Beneful his whole life and is fed 2 2 1/2 cups of dog food each day. Possibly, the amount of food intake of smaller dogs has a quicker detrimental effect than that of larger dogs. I never made the connection that his diet may be the culprit. This last episode happened about 4 weeks after his vet appoint for his annual shots and checkup. I had purchased a new bag of Purina Beneful about 1 week before this last episode. For 3 days (b) (6) was lethargic, consumed no food and very little water, yelped at times, more than normal loss of hair, and very possessive over a blanket &amp; pillow (not for his use; but I caved when I noticed how attached (b) (6) had become to the objects)--if it gave him comfort.... (b) (6) could have had anything he wanted. He refused to go outside to conduct any amount of business without me &amp; his blanket present. His behavior was completely out of the norm. You could you see it in his eyes that he was not feeling well. This is about the 4th time this has happened and he progressively gets worse and stay ill longer with each occurrence. The most recent illness, he growled and snapped at a family member just for walking past..... (b) (6) has NEVER done this before! (b) (6) has personality and a wonderful demeanor about him; he even smiles when taking his picture. She started trying to eating hunks of the wall, digging and licking the cement floor. She also starting showing aggression toward other animals in the household and then began to have severe seizures. The Vet did blood work, X-rays, but did not find any reason why she would have the behaviors or seizures. The vet placed her on Diazepam, prednison and phenobarbital. The medicine appeared to lesson the seizures for about four days and then the seizures became worse to the point where the seizures were constant. EON-199666	3/8/2015 23:04	beneful original formula in about a 15 lb bag but i don't have the bag.	I had been feeding taste of the wild but, around Christmas, thought I could save a little money and still treat him well by buying Purina Beneful regular. the third day after heating the new food he did not want to eat it but, eventually, did and vomited it up and did not want to eat that day again. I put him on boiled rice and chicken breast for a few days and he perked up so I put him back on Beneful and up it came a few hours after eating and he refused to eat dinner. Because I had a dog that was very sick after the Melamine dog food fiasco about 8 years ago I decided to stop feeding any Beneful and put him back on chicken and rice, then Taste of the Wild in a few days. I tossed the bag of beneful and he is fine again on taste of the wild. I called Purina then and again last week when I heard about the possible problem (35 minute wait on phone) and was stonewalled both times.they did not even offer to replace the bag and the customer service rep was cold and would not take my name.	7	Years	Terrier - Jack Russell	Dog	15	Pound

She wasn't sure the cause but thought it could be age. Suddenly in 2014 after moving to california and buying the food there exclusively, (b) (6) health plummeted. She began bleeding from her rear end, vomiting, and loosing weight. I took her to the ER and the vet said her bowel was inflamed and her kidneys were not working the well. We got the bleeding under control and she was on a rice and egg diet until we moved back to (b) (6). Once we arrive I took her back to our old vet who asked what food we were feeding her. EON-199527	3/6/2015 14:24	Natural Balance L.I.D. Cat Food (Green Pea and Duck Formula), Natural Balance L.I.D. Duck and Green Pea Formula	I have been feeding my cat this food (canned and dry) along with fresh prepared meals for many years with no problems. It is marketed as a food for animals who cannot tolerate grains and certain proteins. Duck is supposed to be an easily digestible meat. The company has been purchased by Del Monte and they have most definitely changed the formula or something has happened with their manufacturing or quality control. In early December, my cat developed a terrible rash on his stomach. It was treated by his vet with a steroid cream, but took 6 weeks to clear and he lost a lot of hair on his stomach.. He does not go outside, so it was nothing environmental. I did not associate this problem with the food until other developments. I first discovered something different about the food when I purchased a bag February 17th and it was visibly different (color, size and shape of kibble). It actually resembled chicken dog food instead of the usual small, brown pieces. The company claims that they have not changed the formula, but a visual inspection will confirm otherwise. When given this food, he vomited quite violently, so I requested a refund and purchased a bag from a different supplier. The new bag looked like the usual product. However, this dry food along with the canned has caused my cat to become ill with vomiting, diarrhea and weight loss over the past couple of weeks . I am also concerned because his last physical indicated elevated kidney values (BUN and Creatinine). He has never had problems with kidney values in the past. I discontinued the food March 1st and each day he seems a little better (stopped vomiting and is eating and energy improving). His veterinarian will repeat the blood analysis next month and I will update you with the results. Please note that he has not completely recovered, although a recovery date is required below. I notified Natural Balance and they asked me to send in samples, which I will do. If you read the consumer affairs reports, you will find similar reports (vomiting, liver problems, rashes, etc.). Even if their in-house testing doesn't show specific toxins, it could be making animals sick because of how/where it is produced. LID is specifically for animals with allergies, so if chicken or certain starches are getting into the food, this is a big problem. The consumers of this product are animals with skin allergies, inflammatory bowel disease, food sensitivities and other conditions. If the manufacturer has intentionally changed the formula without updating the packaging, this is totally unacceptable because they should be well aware of their client base. I do hope you will look into this and I will be happy to send samples of food for you to test.	12	Years	Abyssinian cat	Cat	9	Pound

EON-199524	3/6/2015 12:44	The Honest Kitchen Turkey Recipe	The owner had a 12 year old Schnauzer named (b) (6) that had issues with back pain, vision problems and weight loss and diarrhea. She had an extensive workup including bloodwork, abdominal ultrasounds and aspirates etc. During the process of trying to control her GI signs the owner had switched to The Honest Kitchen Turkey diet. Within a few weeks of being on this diet (b) (6) began to have seizures. The seizures became more violent and unresponsive to treatment and with her age and other underlying issues the owners eventually elected to have her euthanized. They were feeding this diet to both of their Schnauzers. Approximately 1 month after (b) (6) was euthanized, their other dog (b) (6) had a grand mal seizure. In retrospect she had likely been exhibiting petit mal seizure activity for a few weeks before the grand mal event. She has had a CT of her brain that showed no abnormal findings and a CSF tap that was normal. These 2 dogs are not genetically related and neither had shown any seizure activity prior to this new food. This is the only change that affected both dogs before the noted seizures. While we do not know conclusively at this time that the diet is to blame, it is concerning that 2 dogs in the same household would start exhibiting seizure activity within a month of each other when the only common factor was the new diet. (b) (6) is continuing to exhibit petit mal activity to the point we have recommended changing the diet and starting phenobarbital	8	Years	Schnauzer - Miniature	Dog	22	Pound

EON-199518	3/6/2015 10:48	Purina Beneful Healthy Weight	We fed our dog Purina Beneful. (b) (6) who is a worker at the vet asked us what we were feeding (b) (6) and when we told her it was Beneful she advised us this dog food was being investigated regarding making dogs sick or dyeing after eat the food. We advised her that we were unaware of the situation however stated that we would look into it. We went to the pet store where bought the food which is (b) (6) in (b) (6) and they did advise us that Purina sent a notice on February 25, 2015 stating that there has been complaints about their dog food however they were not going to take it off the shelf and they were standing behind their dog food. My dog was overweight but had been tested in the past for diabetes, thyroid and other illnesses and was found to be fairly healthy besides his weight. I began feeding him this food either that night or the next evening and he had received about a cup a day. With a fairly rapid onset, he began to drink excessively like he couldn't get enough to drink and he became incontinent, laying in his bed in his urine, not eating and was evidently uncomfortable therefore I got him in to the vet on Saturday (b) (6) and learned that he had diabetes and kidney failure (advanced stage) and his life would not be the same therefore we decided to put him to sleep to prevent him from further suffering. Today, someone brought to my attention that they were feeding their dog this same food and their dog was losing hair, this led to further inquiry on my end and I did a google search were I found that in 2012 there was a recall on this brand of food for salmonella. I called the tractor supply to report my concern and Nell, store manager called district manager and they were going to follow through with my concern and get back to me. I then called the 4health number 1-888-376-9601 and spoke with "Glen" at 6:21pm today and took my information and said that someone would be in touch with me within 48 hrs and that if I have some of the food they may want a sample. I do have a sample of both brands of food. EON-199490	3/5/2015 17:44	Kirkland Turkey meal and sweet potato	I have given my dogs Kirkland brand pet food for some time now with no problems. Starting in November (b) (6), my Great Pyrenees, began exhibiting symptoms similar to allergies. We promptly took her to the vet as she has never before had allergies or any other health issue, and they gave her cortisone. It lasted for only about 36 hours and then the itching returned. Long story short, her hair started to fall out and she started to violently chew at her own hair and we went to the animal dermatologist only to be left with more unanswered questions. As it turns out, she was diagnosed with a staph infection and has almost lost all of her hair in an extremely quick decline of her health. We could not determine the cause of her staph until our other dog, (b) (6), began exhibiting the same symptoms with a rash on her belly and a swollen leg. We have deemed the cause of their illness to be the Kirkland brand dog food and do not want the same thing to happen to other pets and their owners. I have researched online and found out that I am not the only one with similar complaints so that bears the question, why have you not recalled this pet food?	9	Years	Great Pyrenees	Dog	105	Pound

EON-199477	3/5/2015 13:00	Cat Canned Wet Food	Hello there! My name is (b) (6) and I am a Pre-Vet student at the (b) (6). For a while I've been concerned about the feeding labels on canned wet cat food- specifically the serving sizes. This issue, to me, is a major one that should be fixed for the health of cats and the guidance of cat owners everywhere. Below I detail two examples relating to this issue. I'm sending you this to see if you have any recommendations about who I could contact to get this to change, if you can help, or what I should do. As an example, I have a 3 year old ragdoll. I had been feeding her 1 can of Blue Wilderness wet food and 1 cup of dry food a day, but she was becoming overweight, so I was recommended by my veterinarian to cut back to 1/2 can of wet food and 1/3 cup of dry food a day. According to her wet food's feeding label, however, her body weight (10 lbs) should be receiving about 3 cans of wet food A DAY! My other cat, a 24 pound maine coon gets 1.5 cans of Nutro Natural Choice wet food a day, but the label recommends his body weight receive 9 CANS A DAY! I've had cats all my life, so luckily I know that recommendation is unhealthy. However, this concerns me because a new pet owner would be feeding their cat an unhealthy level of wet food a day. Then, upon their cat getting obese, they'd likely ask a vet or look it up to see they should be feeding their cat drastically less, and then they may cut back too much at a time and send their cats system into shock.

She had partially pulled back the top of a can of Merrick's Purrfect Bistro Chicken Pate cat food, not realizing that under the other half of the lid was some mold, and had fed it to her cats. We withdrew the cans from the shelf. A few days later one of the local veterinarians came in telling us she had found mold in another can, but this time the Merrick Purrfect Bistro BEEF pate. We contacted our (b) (6) (b) (6) (b) (6), in both instances and we decided to return all of the Merrick canned cat food we had. What has prompted me to file this report, is that a third customer came in this Monday, March 2nd, with a third can with several strange looking globs (about cherry size) of something black on the outside and brownish with white specks. We have withdrawn all of the Merrick food off the shelves.

Then as days went by she started losing weight and not eating at all. So on last Thursday the (b) (6) of (b) (6) we took her to the vet. Which we did not see it coming that we will have to put her down. Her liver started felling. Her eye color was yellow and her gums were yellow and white. My dog had lost so much weight within a short period of time. I was so out done that a healthy dog instantly took sick and died in the little of time. However, we did switch her dog food in mid January from Gravy Train to Purina Alpo. EON-199398	3/3/2015 22:48	Royal Canin Adult Maine Coon Feline Breed Nutrition	I purchased 4 bags of 6 lb Royal Canin breed specific Maine Coon food at one time from Amazon.com, and noticed immediately when I poured it into my cat's bowl that there were other colors and sizes of kibble mixed in. Concerned, I opened a second bag and saw the same contamination. I then took a 335 gram sample and sorted all of the kibble to see what it contained, and I found four other kibbles of various sizes, shapes and colors mixed in with the Maine Coon kibble. One of the contaminate kibble sizes is so large, it is most certainly that of a dog food! I found 8.4% by weight of foreign kibble in my sampling. I am quite concerned because I have no idea what is in my bags of cat food. Royal Canin makes breed specific and health specific foods. If there is dog food in it, it could be harmful to my pets, and a choking hazard, as Maine Coons are known to swallow food whole. I contacted the manufacturer in writing, and am unsatisfied with their response. They merely apologized and said they strive for the highest quality, etc. but they did not show concern about the fact that we do not know what was in the bags of food that we purchased, and did not even tell me to stop feeding it to my pets. I told them I purchased four bags, and they have only offered to reimburse me for one bag. I still have two unopened bags remaining.

A few months ago I decided to change her food to the Beneful Healthy Weight to help her lose some weight. Since I switched her food, she has had a few bouts of diarrhea but nothing I thought was related to the food. This past Friday, my dog's behavior suddenly changed. She became very lethargic, won't eat, dry heaving and will barely walk around the house. She has not eaten anything, including dog treats for the past 3 days. When we attempt to get her attention she just lays still and doesn't show any reaction or excitement. Where she used to find excitement in visitors, she remains completely uninterested. She used to eat her food moments after being fed, she hasn't eaten in 3 days. She started dry heaving 2 nights ago and was unable to catch her breathe afterwards for a few minutes. She's had multiple 'accidents' in our home as she is unable to control her bladder and bowels. I am concerned that the Beneful Healthy Weight may be the reason for her change. I will be taking her to a vet this afternoon to get checked out.

Went to the Animal Hospital and tests were run. (b) (6) had pancreatitis and ultrasound showed liver lesions. Cause was not clear. He was extremely dehydrated and due to not eating hardly anything for a couple of days, it was crucial to leave him for a couple of days so that he could receive intravenous fluids and a feeding tube. Once he was released home, we were instructed to coax him with natural foods (chicken, tuna, beef (boiled or baked) He gradually (with medication) started to get better. He had been eating Beneful dry dog food but due to his recovery, he was taken off that type of food and given a different kind. We were unaware of the problem reports with Beneful dog food until now.	9	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	15	Pound

EON-199146	3/1/2015 0:28	Purina Beneful	I have fed my dogs Beneful for 4yrs. Both my dogs would vomit at least twice a week. Vet said they were eating too fast. About 4 months ago my dog started foaming at the mouth and having what looked like small seizures. Vet thought maybe acid reflux. Gave meds for a week did not help. Vet said to watch him. He was only having an episode once or twice a month and too soon to give seizure meds. On a Friday my dog was having a full blown seizure, body ridged, legs twitching, head thrown back and foaming at the mouth. Once it was over he was disoriented. Finally got him to sleep for an hour and he seemed fine. That night he had 3 more of these. Took him to the emergency vet and by the time we got there he had not stop seizing. They gave him phenobarbital and valium which usually stops seizures. It did not. He had a temp of 109 they got that down, but then his temp was too low they never could get his temp back up. I asked the vet what could cause this and he said he has seen it in poisonings, internal bleeding and organ failure, but couldnt know for sure without testing. I asked if the testing would help him get better and he told me no. I didnt have that kind of money and it wouldnt benefit my dog so I did not do any testings, but at the time I would have never imagined he was poisoned. I had him euthanized to ease his suffering. 3 weeks later I see articles about Beneful dog food. Not really believing it I began doing my own research on the issue. To my amazement their are so many other dogs having the same symptoms either dying or already dead and the only thing they had in common was this dog food. So then it made me think I put my lab down 2yrs ago because he was unable to walk he had been vomiting. The vet thought he may have had a stroke again I did not have testing done because of the expense and not sure that it would even help him. I thought it was just his age. He was 11yrs old. But know I am getting all this information about this dog food makes me wonder if thats not really what happened to my lab. He had only been eating this dog food for about a year.	6	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	54	Pound

EON-199143	2/28/2015 23:04	Friskies Seafood Sensations	I know recently there has been issues with the Beneful dog food which we had to switch our dog off of because she was getting sick. We have three cats, one outside and inside and the other two are just inside only. The inside/outside one doesn't eat much food in the house that we give but the two inside ones always have the Friskies. And we just purchased this bag of Friskies dry cat food and since we started feeding it to them they have been throwing up all over the house and won't eat. We have switched them to a different brand today after researching and finding many of complaints similar to ours with the same symptoms. We are feeding this new brand to them to try and get them to feel better. But if they don't we will have to take them to the vet.	1.5	Years	Unknown	Cat	15	Pound
EON-199134	2/28/2015 19:36	Diamond Naturals Chicken & Rice Formula	I'd been feeding my dog Diamond dry food for the past few years and after the new year, she started rejecting it. I tried mixing wet food with the dry food and she would pick at the dry food to avoid it. Then, she started losing weight and stopped eating entirely, wet or dry. She then would throw up anything I tried feeding her so I took her to the vet and they diagnosed her with kidney failure and a week later she passed away. I didn't think it was the food, so I let my boyfriend have the leftover Diamond dry and Purina wet food I gave her and that night, his dog instantly got sick too, so we stopped using that food. I just learned that there might have been some recalls on the Diamond food so that's why I came here. The vet couldn't pinpoint what caused my dog's kidney failure. I only wonder if it might be the food. I still have the food and was wondering if there might be some sort of testing that can be done on it to see if it is bad. Just don't want anyone else to have to go through what we've gone through the past few weeks. It's been so devastating. Thanks so much.	7	Years	Other Canine/dog	Dog	20	Pound

EON-199122	2/28/2015 14:32	ADM Pen Pals professional rabbit 18	I raise chinchillas and recently was doing some of my own research into different kinds of foods. Although I do not at this point in time use rabbit food for my chinchillas, I do know of some of the large scale breeders who do. One of the foods I am aware that several of them use is the ADM Pen Pals 18% rabbit food. While researching this food, I found something that is quite disturbing to me. One of the ingredients they use in this food is cottonseed meal. Cottonseed meal is the byproduct remaining after cotton is ginned, the seeds crushed, and the oil extracted. The remaining meal is usually used for animal feed and in organic fertilizers. However, based on information I have read, the meal contains a compound called gossypol which is highly toxic to monogastric animals. Both rabbits and chinchillas are monogastric animals. To quote directly from the Merck Veterinary Manual, "In monogastric animals, acute exposure may result in sudden circulatory failure, while subacute exposure may result in pulmonary edema secondary to congestive heart failure; anemia may be another common sequela." The following quoted information may also be useful to know: "Signs may relate to effects on the cardiac, hepatic, renal, reproductive, or other systems. Prolonged exposure can cause acute heart failure resulting from cardiac necrosis. Also, a form of cardiac conduction failure similar to hyperkalemic heart failure can result in sudden death with no visible cardiac lesions. Pulmonary effects, labored breathing, and chronic dyspnea are most likely secondary to cardiotoxicity from congestive heart failure. Hepatotoxicity can be a primary effect from direct damage to hepatocytes or metabolism of phenolic compounds to reactive intermediates, or liver necrosis may be secondary to congestive heart failure. Gossypol inhibits glutathione-S-transferase, impairing the liver's ability to metabolize xenobiotic compounds. Hematologic effects

			include anemia with reduced numbers of RBC and increased RBC fragility, decreased oxygen release from oxyhemoglobin, and reduced oxygen-carrying capacity of blood with lowered Hgb and PCV values due to complexing of iron by gossypol. Reproductive effects include reduced libido with decreased spermatogenesis and sperm motility, as well as sperm abnormalities (which may be reversible) resulting from enzyme inhibition of steroid synthesis in testicular Leydig cells in males. Specific mitochondrial damage in spermatozoa appears to cause immobility and depressed sperm counts. Effects in females may include irregular cycling, luteolytic disruption of pregnancy, and direct embryotoxicity; probable mechanisms include an endocrine effect on the ovary as well as a direct cytotoxic effect on the uterus or embryo. However, antifertility and reproductive effects in many nonruminant species are secondary to the more toxic effects, particularly in females. Signs of prolonged excess gossypol exposure in many animals are reduced growth rate, weight loss, weakness, anorexia, and increased susceptibility to stress. There is no effective treatment. Severely affected animals may still die up to 4 wk after withdrawal of gossypol from the diet. Recovery depends primarily on the extent of toxic cardiopathy. Because exposure is usually chronic and life-threatening lesions may be advanced before a diagnosis is made, a favorable prognosis for complete recovery may be unrealistic." I hope that you are able to advise me as to whether or not my concerns are valid, and if so to stop this and notify people immediately of the problem. Thank you for your time. Product information can be found at  http://www.admani.com/Rabbit/Rabbit%20Professional%2018.htm

EON-199098	2/28/2015 8:00	BENEFUL HEALTHY FIESTA	In September of 2014 I fed my dog Beneful and that choice cost me more than $6600's and my dog continues to suffer with diarrhea. My dog is only two years old this month. He is a dachshund/beagle mix and was very healthy until I fed him beneful. One morning in September I woke up to my puppy having diarrhea and vomiting. I figured he had a virus and went on with my day. That night he continued to have vomiting and diarrhea, he would not eat or drink. The following morning I called the vet. My vet prescribed metronidazole. The medicine did not help and my dog continued vomiting and diarrhea. By the third day I was very concerned, my dog was losing weight. My vet suggested that I take my dog to the animal hospital. My dog was admitted for 3 days. He started to eat the second day. They fed him cheerios and chicken. He came home on the third day in a diaper. The hospital was unsure what made my dog sick because xrays didn't show anything in his stomach. He continued to have loose stools but was eating. I was concerned about the loose stools and contacted my doctor again. He advised to start my dog back on his dog food, so I did. My dog started to eat it and within a day he was back to square one, throwing up and diarrhea. It didn't dawn on me or my vet that it was the food because he was still partially sick so I thought he just didn't get over it. We went back to the animal hospital where they recommended exploratory surgery. I agreed to the surgery as my dog had lost 7 pounds, he went from 23 to 16 pounds in just a couple of weeks. The surgery cost me over $3500 alone. They biopsied his stomach, tested for cancer and thank God there was none. My dog looked awful, I felt horrible. I took my dog home again where I started to feed him boiled chicken. My dog now has been diagnosed with the dog form of crones disease, these were the test results. No one could explain why he had this. So I then go back to feeding him dog food for the third time (beneful). Within one day he is sick again after eating the food. 			hits me immediately that the only thing I'm doing differently is feeding him this food. I call my vet and tell him that I think it's the food. I go online and look up beneful and read story after story about beneful and my dog had all of the same symptoms. The exact symptoms!! I was so upset to read about what this dog food was doing to dogs that I posted the information to Facebook and warned my friends about the food. Today, my dog still suffers. I have to feed him science hill prescription dog food which is very expensive. If he eats anything that falls on the floor he typically has diarrhea for a day or two. My dog can't eat regular bones, treats or anything outside of the prescription food. Once I stopped the beneful my dog gained weight, is happy and outside of the occasional diarrhea does well. When they became five weeks old, I saw that they could now be introduced to puppy food and made the decision to do so because they appeared to be hungry more often. I got 1/4 cup of Purina Beneful Healthy Growth For Puppies dry dog food, because thats what their mother had already been consuming, and let it sit in filtered drinking water until it became softer. I hand fed all four puppies only how much they wanted to eat which was only a couple of the pieces for each one. Later on that day two of the puppies seemed to be in some kind of discomfort which were the two smaller ones of the litter. They began to whimper and cry in pain. The larger of the two then passed a stool and didn't show any other problems. However, the smallest puppy, she was constantly crying out in pain until she would fall asleep from exhaustion. The next two days I noticed she began have seizures about once a day and would walk in circles disorientated. She no longer wanted to drink milk from the mother or show any interest in playing with the other puppies like before. On (b) (6) her health rapidly began to deteriorate and in twenty four hours she had twelve different seizures. After picking her up after one of seizures I thought she had died because she felt limp but then began to breath again and cry out. Financially I could not take her to a vet or animal hospital because I didn't have any money. So on (b) (6) I made a sad and difficult decision to take her the animal shelter and surrender her because I knew that she was suffering and there was nothing I could do for her.	5	Weeks	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	3	Pound

EON-199060	2/27/2015 17:32	Purina Beneful Original with Real Beef	Our dog ate a different brand of food at my parents house when they were watching her than at our home sometimes. When they switched to the purina beneful she started with just some diarrhea and loose stools. We thought that maybe that was due to changing her food so we decided to go back to the food we had at our home that hadn't caused any symptoms for her. Before we started feeding her just the food from our home she started throwing up so we followed all protocol for a sick dog and didn't feed her for a day and then slowly integrated just plain rice and chicken that we cooked to heal her. We tried to keep her hydrated as it looked like she was losing fluids from everything she was throwing up and having diarrhea. She continued to throw up and be sick with diarrhea and losing weight for about a week and a half. Had her symptoms continued another day or two we would have taken her to the vet. We thought that maybe she just had a really sensitive stomach and have been careful since with what we feed her. However, after seeing the lawsuit and other dog's symptoms with this brand of food it makes much more sense that this food would be the culprit. For over a month she was itchy and biting herself a lot so we thought that it was a food intolerance issue as well (she did not have fleas). Now that it has been longer since receiving beneful in her diet that skin irritations have stopped and she is more like she was in the fall, healthy, young and random odd symptoms seem to be decreasing. We still have the bag with some food in it at my parents house that we of course will not finish now. We would like to see that this brand of food receive a full investigation of it's safety. The ingredient propylene glycol is very concerning especially considering that it is banned from cat foods and an ingredient in anti-freeze. I am unsure of when it was purchased as my parents bought it so the date below is a rough estimate.	1.5	Years	Unknown	Dog	55	Pound

I made a last minute decision bc my local pet store I shop at was closed. I do not generally buy Iams or anything from a chain store. The brands I have bought for 11 years include Core Wellness, Gold Cup, Nutro, all grain free. That evening my cats were very hungry when I returned home. I fed them both around 1030 pm. Around 330-4 am on Mon (b) (6) both my cats began violently vomiting. It was not in just one place it was all over my apartment. Food, bile, and more bile. My initial reaction was they may not have chewed their food up. but it was affecting them both. Around 9 am when I got up I looked for my cat (b) (6) and she was in her liter box and it was complete water diarrhea (b) (6) my other cat was not doing so well. she began crying and crawling across the floor gasping for air. I started following her from room to room to try and see exactly what was happening. In the entire 11 years I have had the since the day they were born I did not have any issues; health issues or food allergies with either or my cats. I tried to retrieve her from underneath the bed and she was gasping for air even worse at this point with small amounts of water coming out of her mouth. In that moment I made the decision to take her to the vet. I placed her in a blanket and literally turned for 2 minutes to slip on my boots and by the time I went to pick her up to go she had crawled out of the blanket and went to the corner and laid down and died. More clear water ran out of her mouth and down her leg. I was devastated. I sat on the floor and held her for 3 hours and cried. I could not understand how this could happen. I have the food, their bowl, and sample bile I would like to have tested. Both of my cats became seriously ill bc of a cat food I do not ever buy.	11	Years	Siamese	Cat	8	Pound

I knew that something was wrong and got up early the next morning to take him to our vet before the new years holiday because I knew it would be harder to get an appt. He was lethargic to the extreme, vomiting, diarrhea, and would not get up. My usual vet was not there, so we saw someone else who wanted to treat the vomiting and diarrhea and assess again the next morning. The next morning I brought him right back. Still exact same. I got to see my normal vet who knew (b) (6) and knew something was dtrastically wrong. She started immediate IV and he remained in emergency care for a week. they even had to do exploratory surgery to rule out a blockage because the symptoms could be the same for that. While he was being treated, my husband remembered the (b) (6) treats and pulled the bag and did some research, since that was the ONLY thing different he had eaten. We were shocked and saddened by the reports of dogs getting sick on these treats. We had no idea and have not switched to all natural everything since (b) (6) has fully recovered. Our vet, (b) (6), in (b) (6) as all of the medical information about this case.	5	Months	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	36	Pound
EON-198982	2/27/2015 4:04	Royal Canin Adult Chihuahua Formula	Have fed Royal Canin Chihuahua formula dry dog food to dog in question for approximately 10 years with no issues. In August 2014, after purchasing a new bag of this food, dog in question developed severe diarrhea that did not respond to medication prescribed by my vet. Vet ran tests for various conditions, including internal parasites and intestinal viruses--all tests were negative. After two weeks of no improvement, took the dog off Royal Canin dog food, and replaced with a hypoallergenic (lamb & rice) formula food of another brand. Diagnosis from my veterinarian was severe colitis caused by ingredients in the Royal Canin food.	13	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	6	Pound

EON-198980	2/27/2015 2:16	Purina Beneful	At the end of August, we came home to find that our dog, (b) (6), had vomited bile all over the kitchen. She was very weak and lethargic, didn't want to go outside, could barely walk. We took her to the vet - they could not figure out what was wrong with her. They gave her fluids. The next day, she was not much better. Finally, the next day, she started to perk up. But then, at the beginning of (b) (6), she started having the same problems again. We took her back to the vet, and this time they said she had a bleeding tumor on her spleen. They tried to operate, but found she had cancer throughout her stomach, and she died. We had fed her Purina Beneful numerous times; that was the main dog food we fed her. In hearing the stories of other dogs who died after eating Purina, we wonder if that may have caused her problems. She had some of the same symptoms: vomiting, internal bleeding. We wonder if the harmful ingredients - including one used in antifreeze???? - may be causing high numbers of cancers in dogs. It's disgusting that such products are sold.	8	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	67	Pound

EON-198971	2/26/2015 22:28	Nutro Natural Choice Small Bites Lamb and Rice Formula	I bought a 30 pound bag of nutro natural choice small bites lamb and whole brown rice formula from Petco on Feb 16, 2015 (I have the receipt) and started to feed it to my dogs a few days later when I ran out my other bag of food. (Until then, I was buying nutro natural choice large breed chicken, but Petco was out of stock, so I bought the small bites instead). I came home at lunch on Friday Feb 20 to find vomited dog food with tons of yellow bile all over the house. Then, later that day, there was more vomiting with bile all over the house by both dogs. The same thing that night. I realized on Saturday that both my dogs were not acting right - they were listless and didn't run around like they usually do. I called the vet who told me to watch for dehydration. The vomiting continued all day Sunday with the dogs getting worse. Then, my daughter mentioned to me that maybe it could be the food, so I took up their food late Sunday and started feeding them homemade chicken and rice. The next day, the vomiting had stopped and their energy levels slowly came back in a few days. I am convinced that the dog food was poisoning my dogs. I have saved a sample and would like to send it in to you. I also have the lot and exp dates on the bag: expires Jan 5, 2016 Lot 502B3LEB0103:37. I returned the bag to Petco in (b) (6) and notified them of the problem. I also notified the company who does not seem to care enough to act on the complaint (called today 2/26). They told me that their nutrition experts have to handle the complaint and that they will not be in until next Monday 3/2, so I have to wait until then. I even asked to escalate the complaint, but got nowhere. By Monday, there could be a whole lot of dead dogs out there, and they don't seem to care about that at all.	5	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	85	Pound

Just this year alone starting at the end of January he was to the vet 2x and hospitalized for several days with issues. They have done some testing, diet changes, and medications to try and help. This last visit he went because he was not really peeing but when he did it was blood and not really eating. Up until mid January he was eating Canned Purina Friskies and he refused it out of no where. So we switched to the packets because the vet told us last year that friskies would be the best for him since he didn't drink much fluids. He also got a 1/4 cup indoor cat chow 2x a day. On February 5th he was changed to a Hills dry food diet with friskies wet. He started not eating the wet just a little bit. So we went back to the vet on the 23rd. EON-198920	2/26/2015 12:40	Purina Beneful Original with Real Beef	On (b) (6) I noticed that our American bulldog (b) (6) did not look to feel well her stomach was bloated, her ribs were showing, and her nose and mouth were very dry. She was approximately 7 years old. She had always been well and very active. I had always fed her blue buffalo or Taste of the Wild dog food. After (b) (6) money was a little tight so I went with the cheaper Purina Beneful Original dry dog food. (b) (6) had always been an outside dog. She ran our 2 acre yard. When I noticed she didn't look to feel right I brought her in the house and kept her in our bathroom. For the first two days or so she wouldn't hardly eat or drink and seemed as though she was unable to control her urination as she had never had an accident in the house prior to this and was vomiting regularly. I encouraged her to eat and drink keeping food and water available to her at all times. Finally she ate a little bit and started drinking. On (b) (6) (b) (6) started passing large amounts of bright red bloody diarrhea with large clots and vomiting bright red bloody vomitus. On (b) (6) (b) (6) died. This has been extremely difficult for our family as she was our two young daughters best friend and my 3 year old thinks she is gone because she scared her away. The only thing that changed was that we switched her dog food. Unfortunately we did not take (b) (6) to the vet. Money was tight as this occurred right after (b) (6) and she did not like to ride in vehicles so in her condition we did not want to make her feel worse. The lot number for the 31.1 lb bag of Purina Beneful Original is LN2556TFT2 dated 05/21/14 05:23AM. Luckily my fiancé is a procrastinator as I had asked him repeatedly to give the bag to my brother in law as there was no use in wasting it. There is approximately 23.5 lbs left in the bag. We didn't measure out her food we just kept her bowel always topped off. EON-198917	2/26/2015 12:28	Beneful Incredibites with Beef	On December 28th our French Bulldog took ill with vomiting, excessive thirst, weakness to the point where he couldn't go up stairs and a very tense torso/stomach. After throwing up his food twice that day, he continued to throw up yellow bile and then froth at the mouth. He then continued to re-gurgitate almost every 1/2 hr. I kept him with me through the night as I was worried and he became even weaker as the night went on, at 4:30am I became so concerned that we were seeing no improvement that we took him into the Emergency Vet. Upon initial evaluation they found him to be so uncomfortable and his abdomen so hard they immediately wanted to evaluate him and set him up on IVs for pain. He spent 3 days there, the doctor could not find any obstructions, nothing that would lead them to believe he ate anything, no blockage. It took 3 days of IV fluid, pain meds, nausea medication before he finally started to come around. His Liver function ALT reading was very high - 336 and should have been between 19-121, His Lipase showed low at 119 should have been 138-755 and his Lymphocyte was at 972 -should have been 1060-4950. His urine was also showing issues with liver and kidney function. Once they were able to get him back on track and we brought him home, we fed him a bland diet of hamburger and rice, suspecting he was maybe allergic to the Beneful and being a small breed, I switched his food to 4Health puppy, a brand our German Shepherd has been on for years with no issues. We still had other dogs that were using Beneful and they became ill also, so we have switch them all over to 4Health now. My son reached out to me yesterday knowing what we have been going through with our French Bulldogs and after reading up on others whom have had issues with Beneful, I strongly urge this to be looked into. I have now scheduled our dogs with a follow up visit to the Vet to get their bloodwork looked at again to see if there is any permanent liver/kidney damage that was done. EON-198914	2/26/2015 11:40	Beneful Incredibites	For the exact dates I would have to go through my receipts. I had started my dogs on the incredibites because they were smaller than the purina benneful that I had been feeding my dogs. My female (b) (6) after 2 weeks of eating this had diarrhea and was vomiting and lethargic, she could not control her bowel and pure blood came out when she released. My other dog (b) (6) was not as bad he was really lethargic. I took (b) (6) into the vets, we were not sure what was wrong we thought maybe she had gotten into the garbage. The vet clinic kept her overnight we were not sure if she was going to make it. The clinic had prescribed medications for her to be on. I faithfully gave her the medication when it was complete she had a relapse. I took her back in and they gave me stronger medication as well as an additional medication. I then asked the vet if switching dog food may help, the vet thought it was a gastric infection. I put both my dogs on the low fat low gas dog food from the vets that day and threw out the incredibites. (b) (6) fully recovered when the medication was completed this time and (b) (6) became more active and himself when I switched the dogfood. After reading the symptoms online I am positive it was the incredibites and will never feed my pets another Purina product. $800.00 later and 1 month of medication almost losing my dog was one of the worst things a person can go through. I will be contacting the vet clinic and advising them of the issue with the dog food as I don't want it to happen to another poor animal and their family.	7	Years	Pinscher - Miniature	Dog	10	Pound

Really sad that it says it's healthy this and that and then has an antifreeze byproduct in it which is recalled in other countries. but not the US. Really strange. EON-198773	2/25/2015 0:48	EverPet	I started feeding my dog (b) (6) EverPet dog food from Dollar General last summer when I didn't have enough money to buy him anything else. I fed him twice a day for about a week or so. The first sign that something was wrong was the way he was acting. He's a good quiet dog and one night he started panting very loudly and whining as if something was wrong. It was about 3 am and as I went to get up I heard him go to a corner of the room and he had really terrible diarrhea. Then the next thing was he started to throw up frequently. He would throw up a slimy yellow substance. The 3rd sign was the most frightening. (b) (6) was about to fall out of the 2nd story balcony because he was thin enough to fit through the railing. His body had always been very solid and wide because he is a corgi and I've never seen him that thin. I couldn't tell earlier because he has always had a very full coat, but in a matter of a few days to maybe a week he had lost so much weight. I've warned anyone I know has pets to never buy that "dog food". I've looked it up online and have seen countless amounts of people with eerily similar cases. I also have seen that there's no way to contact the manufacturer of that product. I cannot believe it is still on store shelves.	7	Years	Corgi (unspecified)	Dog	26	Pound

He was also EXTREAMLY thirsty and basically would drink everything we gave him. An Ice storm was coming so we decided to watch him over night and see how he was the next day. The next morning he was listless, moving very slow and obviously wasn't any better. It was not long that she proceeded to vomit the brown tinged whatever it is and aspirate on it. I lifted from the bed. Her body was stiff and she was trying to take a breath but could not of the vomit. I took her to the guest backroom and laid her on the rug wrapped in a blanket. I turned up and heat and placed her body in from of the vent to warm her. She vomited again and was having difficulty breathing. She was unable to lift her head to get a fresh breath. I moved her to another rug that wasn't soiled and tried to get her comfortable. She again vomited and stiffened her body and then relaxed. My other dog was severely overweight and didn't have this reaction to the food so I didn't think it was the food. When my overweight dog died at age 13, I changed dog food for the Shih Tzu to . He vomited only twice in the first month and has not vomited since. It has been 2 years since I changed his food to Nutro Natural Choice. I am sure it was the Beneful that made him sick and I wish I had known because he suffered for 8 years. I also worry that there are long lasting affects and that he will die at a young age. EON-198754	2/24/2015 19:00	Beneful Healthy Weight Formula	Opened a new bag of Beneful Healthy Weight formula the 1st week of December (unsure of exact date). (b) (6) developed lumps all over his head on (b) (6) and began vomitting. Lumps looked like hives, raised and bright red. (b) (6) was taken to the vet on Monday December 8th and vet stated it seemed like he had an allergic reaction to something. (b) (6) was given Flagyl for GI symptoms and Benadryl for hives. Within a day or 2 the rash was gone and he was back to eating and drinking regularly. Around (b) (6), (b) (6) developed another rash/hives on his belly and inside his back legs, Benadryl was given, but the rash lingered. Some areas would dry up and go away, but other spots would develop. No GI symptoms were noted, except that it was taking him an unusually long time to eat, which I associated with the gum infection. (b) (6) had a bad odor to his skin as the rash developed. His activity level remained within his normal limits and he was eating and drinking without difficulty, just taking longer than normal. We noticed around (b) (6) that he seemed to become a little unsteady and seemed to "be in a fog", he wasnt acting like himself. Due to the weekend, we were unable to take him to the vet right away. (b) (6) was seen by the vet on Monday (b) (6). Labs were drawn and everything was within normal limits except his ALT which was 119 (normal is 10-100). It appeared that he may have had an infection in his gum, so he was given an antibiotic and also the vet noted some tenderness in along his back, towards his back legs. He was given pain medication to be given as needed. A follow up appointment was made for the following (b) (6). Throughout the week he seemed to be status quo, not really any better, but not any worse. Until (b) (6), (b) (6) was unable to walk, and was incontinent of stool. He could not move anything on his body, just moved his eyes back and forth. We comforted him and called the emergency veterinary hospital and was told to bring him in for evaluation. On the drive in, it appeared as though (b) (6) was having seizures and posturing of his head and front legs. When we arrived at the emergency hospital, it was recommended that he be put to sleep due to obvious neurological issues. (b) (6) passed away peacefully in my arms. I never discontinued using the bag of food because he has eaten Beneful for years without any problem , so I didn't associate these issues with his food.	12.5	Years	Terrier - Boston	Dog	30	Pound

EON-198752	2/24/2015 18:48	Purina Beneful Healthy Weight with Real chicken	Starting in January 2015, our dog began vomiting her food. She was suffering a loss of appetite and wouldn't eat. I would make her chicken and rice, and once she was feeling better, I began feeding her beneficial again. As soon as she would start eating it, she would vomit (it was not regurgitation). She has lost weight as well as become extremely lethargic. She was just taken to the vet yesterday where they did blood work.	10	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	55	Pound

EON-198693	2/24/2015 7:12	Purina Beneful	Bought Purina Beneful for the first time due to being out of our other dog food. The 2nd day of them eating Beneful, 2 of my 3 dogs were very sick. They starting vomiting huge piles of redish colored vomit and had diarrhea. The dogs became lethargic and just generally looked ill. Activity from their normal was decreased. After about a week I knew the only thing that was different was the dog food so I switched to a different brand altogether. The dogs were fine within about a day of not eating the Beneful.	4	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	99	Pound

EON-198692	2/24/2015 7:12	Old Glory Dog Treats - Multi Flavored	About a month ago Home Depot had all of their dog food and related products on clearance, as they were not selling animal products any longer. Because of this, they marked down dog food and treats at very low prices. I noticed that 10lb boxes of dog treats, which were manufactured by Old Glory, were only $3.00. Because the price was so low, I decided to purchase 3 boxes. Up until today, I have given my two dogs about 1-2 bones each, per day. Today I picked out their daily dog treats to give to them and gave each one a full bone. After this I decided to break another one in half in order to give them a little extra each. Inside of the bone that I broke in half, I found a very large piece of metal sticking out of the middle of the broken area, with a very sharp/jagged edge. When I say a large piece of metal, I mean about 1 in long with a large point and about 1/32" thick. This is a pretty substantial size piece of metal and one that could have caused SERIOUS HARM to my pets, if ingested. I am very thankful that I did not feed them this extra bone. However, I still have grave concerns about the remainder of the bones in the boxes, as well as the bones that I have already fed them previously. There could easily be other metal pieces in the stomachs of my pets, which could be causing them harm/discomfort. I have saved the dog treat with the piece of metal still stuck in it for potential examination and developing an investigate path forward. This immediately makes me think of other animals' health, going so far as to probably need an immediate recall on these treats. Please contact me at your earliest convenience. Thank you.

Well then I discovered when she was chewing on the rawhide again another hook and its still attached inside the rawhide. We only let her chew so long on the rawhide and then we put it up. We were sent to a specialty vet after our vet had not found exactly what the problem could be. Our dog saw an internal medicine vet and was diagnosed with Distal Renal Tubular Acidosis, a kidney issue. This did not appear genetic to the vet, and after telling him everything she ate, food, treats etc. he connected the hundreds of chicken jerky FDA illness reports and told me it could be the jerky. He started treatment with medications immediately. After multiple visits for labs, and exams a stable dose of MEDS were found!! It's been about 6 years now on MEDS and she is still doing okay, she is showing signs of lower PH levels which are not good and arthritis. She takes 15 Potassium Citrate tablets a day, prednisone and a bladder pill. The potassium citrate costs us $1200 for a 90 day supply not to mention her special RX dog food. EON-197778	2/19/2015 14:48	Purina Beneful Healthy Weight Dry Dog food	I received a bag of new, unopened Beneful Dry Food, Healthy Weight, from Amazon.com where I have ordered this dog food on subscription basis before. The bag that was delivered in (b) (6) made my dog sick and ultimately caused her to die. On (b) (6) she began displaying symptoms of stomach issues- refusing to eat the dry food, and drinking seldom. Her activity level decreased and she was unwilling to play or be around humans. Her behavior changed on Tuesday night- she refused to be pet and slept away from me and by (b) (6) she was not eating at all. That day, I gave her Beneful wet food, she immediately vomited. She slept most of the day and only wanted to go outside to pee on Thursday morning. Once we went out for the bathroom, I noticed she was peeing bright red blood and immediately ran her to the vet's office. At about 8 am on that Thursday, (b) (6)- the vet had asked if she had ingested any rat poison. I said no as there was no way she could have gotten into rat poison as we keep nothing toxic to animals in the house- where I also have a ten year old border collie dog that eats a different brand of food and had not exhibited any behavior changes or any changes in his food intake. The vet told me without a doubt he knew her internal bleeding was the cause of poisoning- and that he mostly sees it with dogs that have ingested rat poison and explained it acts as an anticoagulant and the animal bleeds out. My dog had symptoms of being poisoned like lethargy and not eating, and was covered in bruises when the vet examined her. Within minutes of her physical exam my dog had a seizure and died.	5	Years	Terrier - Rat	Dog	25	Pound

(b) (6) wouldn't get up or play anymore, he could barely walk and had spasms. At first I thought he might have a heart problem. I took him to te vet on February 14th, his heart and lungs are perfectly fine. They did a blood test and found out he has a liver disease/infection. The vet was clueless, he had no idea were that came from as (b) (6) is a healthy little dog. Needless to say the bill was pretty high. He is now on antibiotics (Clamovax) for 10 days but is not feeling any better. Even worse day after day, and I can't even afford another visit to the vet. He's in pain, won't drink. Only eat a bit of wet food. And still has very bad spams. On February 15th I decided to Goodle Nutro Dog Food as he became sick at the very moment I switched to the Nutro diet. EON-197420	2/16/2015 21:48	Friskies Party Mix cat treats Cunch	Our other cats started throwing up a few days before this but one of them is a long haired cat so we thought it might be a hairball. My cat got sick last and started throwing up at 3AM Sun. and kept throwing up every few hours. She couldn't keep water down. She's a short haired cat and never throws up so I was worried enough to take her to an emergency vet because I was afraid of she was becoming dehydrated. She hadn't thrown up for 4 hours by the time we saw the vet so I had them give her sub-q fluids because the testing was so expensive there. She started throwing up again after getting home. She threw up 11 times in a little over 24 hours total, mostly water since she couldn't keep food down. The next day (Mon.), I took her to a regular vet who gave her a shot for nausea and did blood work. The shot worked. Her blood tests came back normal. The treats were something I had just started giving to the cats so I wondered if I had a contaminated batch. I only fed her Dad's Gourmet Blend which she'd been eating before safely, then when that was tolerated, added in other treat food. The only food I haven't given her is the Friskies Party Mix Crunch since I'm afraid to and don't want to risk my cat and have more vet bills. I searched online to see if anyone else had similar problems and found complaints for different Purina products but not the treats. Someone posted a link to your report form so I wanted to notify you in case it was a bad batch. I still have most of the bag if you need a sample to test. I'd appreciate any information you have or find out about this. EON-197417	2/16/2015 21:24	Purina One Sensitive Systems	We have two cats, one shorthair, one ragamuffin. Both have eaten Purina Sensitive Systems dry cat food for years. No problems until the last bag (opened last week). Both cats didn't want to eat from the new bag--acting almost agitated when we'd fill their bowls. Vomiting in one cat began and the other cat followed suit a few days later. Not hair balls--true vomit. Both cats are acting unwell. They eat nothing else, so it has to be the cat food.	4	Years	American Shorthair	Cat	10	Pound
EON-197393	2/16/2015 16:32	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Small Breed Senior	I have been feeding my 8lb Chihuahua mix Blue Buffalo Life Protection Small Breed Senior for about 4 years. Over those several years, she would go through short phases of having some gastrointestinal issues including vomiting and diarrhea and refusing to eat. Over the past year, these bouts of GI issues have become more frequent with the diarrhea turning consisting of almost 100% blood. During the last bout, we had mistakenly given only 1 evening feeding of the Senior food to my 3 year-old 18lb terrier mix. She has always eaten the Blue Buffalo Life Protection Health Weight Adult. She needed outside in the middle of the night to vomit. Of course, the Senior food has not been given since and we've had zero GI issues.

EON-197287	2/15/2015 8:40	Purina one smart blend small bites beef and rice formula	After opening the bag of dog food and putting it in an airtight container, I then put some of the dog food in my dog's dish and noticed that there was some white spots on pieces of the beef and I looked at it and saw a little black bug crawling around and I moved the food around and there was lots of little black bugs crawling around! I began to look a little more thorough and discovered a cocoon shaped egg inside one of the pieces of beef. I removed this piece along with two of the bugs and placed them in a ziploc bag. I did not give this food to my dog, I'm thankful that I caught this and now will be inspecting all her food from now on. She would fall over the place she started peeing all over my house it got to the point that we had to put her down. We attributed it to her age. This was (b) (6). She was a siberian huskey age 8 going on 9 but still young for her breed's age. We had and still have (b) (6) have is a polish king Shepherd. Always in excellent health. We had used various dog foods. 3 weeks ago I grabbed a big bag of beautiful dog food. I read the ingredients, low moisture content seemed benefiting for (b) (6), vitamins and nutrients for good bones teeth bag basically said that it promotes good overall health. First we noticed a mood swing with (b) (6) I have grand children (b) (6) has grown up with them they the three of them are like two peas in a pod always playing together outside and inside the house but then (b) (6) started growling at the boys. Then he actually nipped my youngest grandson. We have since separated the children from (b) (6), but (b) (6) still seemed quite off. (b) (6) growled at me. I was petrified to be completely honest this is a pet that has grown up around kids and lots of people that was never vicious, had temper issues. then last week, (b) (6) started having peeing accidents. All over the house, I could take (b) (6) out on his normal routine he would pee outside and then ten minutes later had to pee again. When I would take him I also noticed the color of the pee was changing too, and it was also when we went outside it was almost like he was straining a bit to go and in pain (b) (6) didn't and doesn't whine but I could really tell that something was terribly wrong and the pee seemed to have such a wrong odor to it. I called the vet immediately explaining the situation she knew right away something was off. (b) (6) our prior dog had similar situations but more of and we had used purina at the time. Raising his temp to 98.5, I then rushed to vet to try to save him, but there was nothing they could do, except supportive care; keeping him warm. Oxygen could not even save him. Vet heard no signs of crackling in lungs, so he did not aspirate. The remaining two male pups seem to be strong. Momma dog started to refuse food again (b) (6) She will only eat cheese. This continues to be a physical and emotional battle even now. I worry the contaminant that was in the dog food is now in my dogs on a cellular level. I'm not sure of the outcome health wise for them and the pups. I have lost money ($1200/pup) in selling these puppies as well as the large vet bills incurred this week. Also, the future of my young breeding dog may be hampered as well. EON-197215	2/13/2015 23:24	Columbia River Naturals Pet Food Raw Duck	My boston terrier was fed the duck variety of Columbia River Naturals raw meat for several meals, and after less than 2 days, became violently ill: constant projectile vomiting and could not keep food or water down. He was promptly taken to the vet, where he had blood tests and abdominal x rays. After reviewing the x rays, our veterinarian determined my dog was suffering from a severe abdominal obstruction, caused by what appeared to be "bony particulate" settled at the bottom of his stomach. I explained to the vet that my dog is not allowed to have bones, but that I started him on a new raw meat diet 2 days ago, which has "ground bone" listed in the ingredients. Upon further investigation of the raw duck meat product I had left over in my fridge, I found an alarming number of larger and sharp born fragments in the meat, some that were the diameter of a penny in length. I had fed my dog another brand of raw meat throughout the year, which had ground bone as well, but the bone had been ground into very fine pieces and he never became ill. My poor dog then had a series of exploratory surgeries and numerous complications over a period of 10 days, and then suffered from a GI bleed, which led us to make the painful decision to euthanize him.	10	Years	Terrier - Boston	Dog	22	Pound

After the switch he wouldn't touch his breakfast until after his midday walk and didn't always finish his dinner. We thought perhaps he didn't like the taste of lamb but now believe that he was putting off eating as long as possible because something was wrong. And there were behavioral changes in the days before the physical symptoms manifested. He started destroying furniture he had previously ignored and began gnawing holes in the wall. He became unusually restless the two mornings prior to his vomiting episode. We thought he was being rambunctious but in hindsight he was agitated. He was sick. This course of events is suggestive of a gradual poisoning instead of a singular event on the day of symptom onset, which is what the veterinarian is assuming.	14	Months	Shiba Inu	Dog	31	Pound

EON-196535	2/10/2015 7:44	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Adult All Natural Chicken and Brown Rice	I am writing this letter in regard to the last 30 pound bag of Blue Buffalo Life Protection Adult formula that my boyfriend and I had purchased at Pet Smart (b) (6) on 1/20/2015. We have previously been feeding (b) (6) (our 1 ½ year old Catahoula) this brand and flavor for the last 6 months with no issues. Over the past 2 weeks, we noticed that (b) (6) would sniff her food and then walk away and not eat it. She is fed twice a day, and this would occur at both breakfast and dinner. Eventually she would eat her morning food very late in the afternoon and often skip dinner.	16	Months	Catahoula Leopard Dog	Dog	48	Pound
			This was abnormal behavior for her and she had just done her yearly vet check-up on 01/26/2015. An exam, fecal test, and bloodwork all came back healthy and normal. During this time she was also experiencing very bad breath and occasional vomiting. Over the next few days we switched her over to another brand of wet canned food that she eat with no problems. We then reintroduced her Blue Buffalo food starting on 02/2/2015 and the next day her problems had returned with increased vomiting (usually food and/or a yellow/orange foam) and a lack of energy. After a few days of these symptoms reoccurring again, we reduced her diet to organic brown rice and boiled organic chicken breast on 2/8/15. Since then she is symptom free and back to her usual energetic self. On the night of Saturday Feb. 7th, I did some research and found numerous consumer affairs complaints against Blue Buffalo in the past month with many pets experiencing the same symptoms as Lula. I am shocked to read the numerous lawsuits that are alleging Blue Buffalo is falsely representing that your pet food does not contain certain ingredients when it actually does. A quick look on ConsumerAffairs.com has almost 1,000 complaints against Blue Buffalo with a majority of them experiencing the same issues we had. Our close friend (b) (6) (b) (6) has had the exact same thing happen to his dog (b) (6) (age/breed?). The advertised quality of their food is the reason we selected Blue Buffalo for our dog. We will no longer be purchasing any of the company's products and I believe others should be warned of the dangers of their products.

EON-196180	2/5/2015 23:28	Taste of the Wild Pacific Stream Canine Formula with Smoked Salmon A grain free diet.	My dog has been eating Taste of the Wild dog food for over 5 years. She is currently eating the Pacific Stream flavor. I normally purchase the food from Amazon.com or at a local pet store. Three weeks ago I ordered a bag from Chewy.com. Within a week my dog was diagnosed with a urinary tract infection. A week later she started vomiting, had diarrhea and had gas (I could hear her stomach gurgling from across the room). She then refused to eat any of her food. I called and talked to Taste of the Wild since she had just started a new bag and the kibble looked different then normal. I asked if they had changed any of the ingredients. They said they had not and when I provided the product information from the bag I was told that it had been made in their South Carolina facility. They told me that the other bags I had purchased could have come from the closer facility in (b) (6). They recommended that I buy a new bag to see if she would eat it and they gave me the information on how to get my money back for the bag she refused to eat. 02Feb15 I purchased a new small bag of the food at a local store. When I got home and opened the bag I noticed that there was a clear difference between the two bags of food. The "old" bag had bigger pieces, the "new" bag was smaller and had small crystal flakes on it which is what it normally looks like. I tried feeding the new food to her and she ate it immediately after she hadn't touched the old food for three days. I called Taste of the Wild back the following day and asked them about the difference between the two bags. They told me that the presses they use as they get older and wear down can change the shape of the food. The crystal flakes they said is the flavoring that is added at the end. When I asked why the other bag did not have the flakes they said it was because they use a range of ingredients and so one facility may be using a different end of the acceptable range then the other facility. They had no answer as to why the old food would have made her ill. They recommended I continue to buy locally so that i get the food from the (b) (6) facility. 			feeding my dog the new bag of food my dog began vomiting again and was peeing blood. I rushed her to veterinarian who performed a physical exam, urinalysis and X-rays. They found a large amount of clotted blood in her urine, x-rays showed no issues. She is on another antibiotic, nausea medication, diarrhea meds and on a bland diet for one week. I am concerned her food is causing her to be sick and I know that the Manufacturer of Taste of the Wild (Diamond) has had issues in the past. I cannot understand why my dog suddenly becomes ill and why the two bags of food look so different. I have kept samples from each bag for potential testing.

I took (b) (6) to the vet on (b) (6) since she had been peeing in the house for a few months. She was diagnosed with a UTI and given Clavamox (antibiotic) and Glucosamine chews. Three days later, (b) (6) fell over into her water bowl as she was eating breakfast and started convulsing. She was trying to stand up, but didn't have control of her limbs and her head was moving around and eyes moving strangely too. I took her to the vet immediately. The couldn't find anything wrong with her bloodwork or a neurological exam. She had 2 more episodes while in Denver. I took her back to the vet and this time they checked her blood pressure, which was fine but she seemed to have a heart arrhythmia. They thought perhaps she had a heart condition and the altitude was causing her to faint, but that she needed to see a cardiologist to determine anything further. This didn't explain the convulsions. We returned to (b) (6) (b) (6) and her condition remained the same. EON-196062	2/4/2015 23:21	Purina Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Treats	I noticed my dog throwing up during (b) (6) of (b) (6) but didn't think much of it at first. Eventually he began throwing up water and I realized that he had been drinking quite a bit. He was listless, confused and wouldn't eat. I took him to the vet on Monday (b) (6). He had lost almost 2 pounds from his vet visit just a month before. They did an in office blood test which came up negative for pancreatitis. His temp was normal. They also did an X-ray which didn't show anything. I was given antibiotics along with meds to help his stomach. I was back at the vet on (b) (6) They gave him subcutaneous fluids because he was so dehydrated and I believe some antacid type meds. I had to force feed him with a syringe. I took him back in again on Friday (b) (6) because he had developed terrible bloody diarrhea. They also did another blood test that they sent out for results. Saturday morning (b) (6) they called and said that the tests came back positive for pancreatitis along with liver and kidney problems. We were given more antibiotics. BTW, he was also given meds to prevent him from throwing up and an injection to also help with this. Another blood test about a week later showed some improvement but we also had an ultrasound done just to make sure that there wasn't a tumor. It came out ok but showed inflamed liver (maybe kidneys). It was right in the middle of all of this that the news came up that PETCO was going to stop selling dog treats from China. I already knew not to buy anything made in China HOWEVER I had bought a couple of bags of PURINA Jerky Treats on 10/29/14 because they were on closeout at TARGET. I assumed that Purina was made in the USA so I bought them without checking. The day that I brought them home, I gave one to each dog (I have 3) but, after that day, I NEVER gave them to my two Chihuahuas because they will eat ANYTHING and (b) (6) my Pom, is very fussy so I decided to save them for him. I knew that I wasn't going to ever buy them again because they're usually about $13 a bag and I had gotten them for $3.58a bag,	10	Years	Spitz - German Pomeranian	Dog	15	Pound

			so, when the PETCO news came out (around Jan. 6th) I decided to actually read the label. At this point there are/were a few pieces left in the remaining bag (I STILL HAVE IT, WITH THE TREATS). I couldn't believe my eyes that the label said "Product of China". I contacted PURINA, on Facebook, and they got right back to me and within 48 hours I had a claim number with them even though they say that their product is safe. (b) (6) condition has improved greatly. He's off all meds at this point. He still isn't very interested in eating but that's not unusual for him. I'm still feeding him with a syringe (A baby food, cream of rice cereal, yogurt, canned pumpkin mixture that is recommended on the internet). I plan on taking him in for another blood test next week just to see how things look. I have all of the medical records/bills and I can also provide any test results that you need. It's interesting that I have also been contacted by TARGET. I'm not sure how they got my info because I never contacted them directly. I wrote a bad review for the product , which they are still selling on their website (shameful) and I complained about them to PURINA. Side Note: BEFORE I realized that the PURINA "treats" could be the culprit , I actually fed (b) (6) another one of the treats (the ONLY thing that he ate willingly) during his worst days. The same day the news came out about PETCO.

They also had extra gas, general discomfort/tight abdomen and occasional vomit. The malamute mix has IBD(Irritable bowel disease, which we have successfully managed since Dec. 2012 without recurrence ) and I assumed she might be having a flare up. She gets a small amount of kibble and more Kibble topper (that I make). So started her on a bland diet (no kibble) turkey &amp; rice for a couple weeks, she started doing better so we slowly started adding back in the kibble. We did this bland diet a few times over the last few months. In June 2015 the malamute mix started to urinate more frequently and started to "leak" at times quite a bit. I took her to the vet they ran blood and urine test. They didn't come up with anything specific, and she was put on antibiotics (Cephalexin). After a few days she started to do quite a bit better and finally the leak stopped. We were okay for a while, then I started seeing the problem again (bloody mucus in the yard). So I started watching them very closely to see which one was having the problem. Every time I saw one of them go, everything seemed fine. I kept watching and finally saw, on separate occasions, both of the dogs were having the heavy mucus with blood in their stools. Again NEVER thinking the problem was their kibble, went on a bland diet again and later even switched topper a few times. They would continue to have good and bad days. We took him to the emergency vet and they said he had internal bleeding and his blood was not coagulating. They said it was most likely that he consumed a poison, probably rat poison. We have never used rat poison in our house and we can't think of what else he could have consumed. We have a toddler so we have baby-proofed really well. We don't know if it was the fancy feast but we gave this type to him for the first time on Sunday night (b) (6). He started feeling poorly by the end of the day (b) (6) and was in emergency care by (b) (6). He is currently undergoing a plasma transfusion and we are waiting to see if he will survive. So, we don't know if it was the Fancy Feast but mainly want to see if anyone else has reported any health problems with cats after consuming fancy feast.	10	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	19	Pound

EON-195864	2/3/2015 19:24	Waggin Train Jerky Treat	I purchased the Jerky treats from my local Target store and gave my dog one of the treats Sunday evening. THE next morning, I could tell something was wrong. He was very lethargic and didnt seem to feel well. When I arrived home that evening, he was in worse shape. His stomach was rumbling loudly and he started eating grass as I let him out. For the rest of the evening, he seemed like he was in pain and couldn't get settled. He's never reacted this way before and we haven't changed any of his food before so I am fairly confident that it has something to do with the treats. I did a little research online and was alarmed to find out all of the complaints and issues with this treat. It's surprising that it's still on the market.	8	Years	Terrier - Yorkshire	Dog	5	Pound

On Monday, Jan 27, 2015, I found a needle looking (very sharp end), about 1 inch long, clear plastic object from a Tiki Cat Succulent Chicken with egg in chicken consommé.  Luckily, I caught before feeding my cat but THIS IS VERY DENGEROUS, THIS COULD HARM MY ALDERLY CAT. The object look like a fish born but it is not a fish born. This is clearly a man-made object, I looked at a microscope this morning in my office lab.  I notify (b) (6) corporate office and (b) (6) also contacted to the manufacture. The manufacture asked me to FedEx the actual object and the product so I shipped them Thursday, Jan 29, 2015 the package shall reached at the manufacture by Friday, Jan 30, 2015. At 11:30pm we woke up to (b) (6) having diarrhoea and noticed it was frothy, pink and smelled very bad and different. So we let him outside where he continued to have diarrhea, At this point he did not want to return to the house which was very unusual for (b) (6). We got him into the garage and noticed he was barely holding his head up and was drooling extensively. We made up a bed for him in the garage because we could tell he didn't want to go in the house which was unusual as he'd never spent a night away from our bedside his entire life. EON-195774	2/2/2015 18:28	Friskies Salmon Dinner	All 5 cats were on a diet of Science Diet dry food and Friskies canned food, as a treat in the morning and evening. The 2 older cats, (b) (6) 17 yrs and (b) (6) 14 yrs were given more of the wet food to keep their weight up as they were older cats. All 5 of the cats started to walk away from the food. The 3 younger cats usually walked away from the food when all this started This may have started around October/November. I would take cans back to the store to get new flavors. They have eaten this food all of their lives. I had no reason to suspect that the food was poisoning them. The two older ones that I mentioned would vomit but, they had long fur and got hairballs so I wasn't alarmed. (b) (6) presented with difficulty in breathing. All bloodwork and xrays came back normal. She was put on steroids which helped only a little. She died suddenly within 2 weeks and within 1/2 hour of eating Friskies canned food on (b) (6) (b) (6) vomited after eating Friskies on (b) (6) . Since (b) (6) had just passed, we took Charlie to the ER as a precaution. After bloodwork, xrays and an ultrasound, we learned that she was in liver failure. She died one week later on (b) (6) . I notified Purina, before my cats passed, asking them if they changed their formula. They said no and offered no further help other than offering coupons for their products. I declined their offer and haven't bought their products since. After reading all the posts, I do not know why a recall hasn't been issued. No one should have to go through this. EON-195710	2/2/2015 10:32	Natures Domain Fish and Sweet Potato dog food	My dog started to throw up her food. I took her to the vet where they took blood and tested it to see what was going on. Her readings were not good. Her BUN< Crea, Phos were high. her TP and ALB were low. My vet gave her a antibiotic shot along with sub cutaneous fluids and i took her home. The following day the vomiting was worse so i took her back and it was suggested that i leave her for the day so they could administer IV fluids and antibiotics. Because we were approaching a weekend i was told to take her to an emergency clinic in the area. At the clinic they discovered a grade 4 heart murmur of which she never had. My vet suggested maintenance fluids with antibiotics and to keep an eye on the TP and ALB cause they were worried that she may end up needing a blood transfusion. My vet went to see her that night and down graded the murmur to a grade 2 of which she didn't have before. Her ratings went up and down for sat and sun. On monday I took her back for a full blood work up on that day her reading were still not good. Her Bun was 128 her Crea was4.0 and her TP was 5.1 and her ALB was2.1 and her PHOS was 8.3. during this whole thing I was questioned exstensive by my vet and the only thing that had changed was the opening of a new bag of dog food.	4	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	61	Pound

We brought him in to the animal hospital. The vet told us with the test results he took that they thought this could have happen due to a fea bite but was not 100% sure. Our cat stayed at the vet for 2 days. I brought him home and offered him his regular food which is his sole food source hoping he would start eating again. I got a new puppy on Sunday, January 25th. The breeder had been feeding Purina Proplan Focus large breed puppy food, so I went and purchased a bag of it from Petco (b) (6) (b) (6) on Saturday, January 24th in preparation. I brought the bag into my apartment and opened it the evening of Sunday, January 25th. The food on the top of the bag looked normal. The puppy seemed slightly hesitant, acting like it was different than the baggy of food (of the exact same type) that she had been sent with from the breeder, but she did eat it. The puppy threw up mucus the night of Monday, the 19th, but checked out ok during her veterinary appointment in the morning of Wednesday, January 28th. I purchased a storage container for the food on Wednesday, January 28th, and when I dumped the food into it, I first thought I saw cobwebs and quickly threw them into the trash, then I went to take a scoop and I was disgusted to find webbing as well as LIVE and dead larvae/small yellow and white worms at the bottom of the food. I took the empty bag back to Petco immediately along with a sample of the contaminated food. They gave me a refund, but when I asked if I could get another bag of food from a different batch (that wasn't packaged at the same time), I was told that they were all from the same shipment, but that this "happens occasionally" and another bag "should be fine." Needless to say, I proceeded to buy food from a completely different, more high-end distributor. Were this food for humans, no one would state that worms and maggots "are fine." I called Purina that evening (the 28th) and left a message stating that I found larvae and worms in my puppies brand new food, and I would like them to call me. They did leave me a voicemail today stating that they

I am waiting to hear back from her veterinarian. I do have all of the contaminated food (minus the first piece of webbing I through out), and some pictures of it (with the webbing and larvae). Personally, I think this is a huge issue. Many people do not dump their bags into other containers before feeding, and had I not done so, a very young puppy could have gotten very sick. I really appreciate assistance in this matter.

Got up to go to work on (b) (6) and he had thrown up. I thought maybe he just ate to much. Fed when I got home and Sat morning he threw up a bunch more. Sat night was worried and thought maybe he had cat flu. Sat night my other cat started to throw up but was just liquid. Sunday morning went to check on (b) (6) and picked him up he meowed twice and died. He threw up red liquid while he was dying in my arms. I would like to have this 16 pound bag of Friskies Grillers Catfood tested for contaminants and Salmonella. Also this same product was recalled in 2012. Poisonedpet.com has the listing of this catfood. The only thing that is different is the exp date. There are also over 860 complaints on the Purnina complaint website of all animals eating catfood or dogfood and being very sick or dying. Please do something before more innocent cats with no voices lose there lives to a company that says they care about our pets. They wouldn't even admit to the recall in 2012 when I talked to them. Sorry about your loss and that was it. No I want to know if my cat was poisoned. I feel awful for not knowing I was killing my cat. This needs immediate attention. EON-195360	1/29/2015 12:52	Kirkland Signature Nature's Domain Salmon Meal and Sweet Potato Formula For Dogs	I have fed this product to my dogs for approx. 2 years. When I purchased a bag of Nature's Domain Salmon Meal and Sweet Potato in October or November, I noticed that the color and size of the kibble had changed. The pieces were darker and smaller. All 3 of my dogs were fed this food in varying amounts. After a few meals from the bag purchased 11/28/2014, one of my dogs stopped eating his food. We thought maybe he was just tired of it, so we supplemented it with treats and other food. It got to the point in December, where he even refused to go in his kennel for meals. If he did go in, he often covered the food up with his blanket. Gradually, he started eating it again, and that's when we noticed that he seemed lethargic. There were days where he felt warm to the touch. He drank a lot of water. After reading online of many pets affected by this food, we quit feeding it to our pets on 1/22/2015. Only one of 3 dogs seems to be affected by it. After being off of that food for a week, he seems to be getting some of his pep back.	4	Years	Terrier - Bull	Dog	49	Pound

I shelter anywhere from five to ten young cats or adult cats at anyone time, plus I may also shelter several kittens when a litter is rescued (during breeding season). I have been feeding Purina One, Purina Cat Chow brand dry cat food and Purina Friskie's wet cat food nearly exclusively. I had been feeding chicken flavored wet foods (Purina Friskies Classic Pate Country Style Dinner, Purina Friskies Classic Pate Poultry Platter). After I heard several friends talking about it and sharing the sad stories of their dogs becoming ill, I started putting the puzzle pieces together. EON-195023	1/27/2015 12:12	Kirkland Signature Nature's Domain Salmon Meal and Sweet Potato Formula For Dogs	(b) (6) has been on Nature's Domain Sweet Potato n Salmon dry food (from Costco) for about 2 years with no prior issues as far as I could tell. I always liked the food because it was an affordable grain free alternative that really helped him with his allergies. We feed both dogs the same food. Around November timeframe, we noticed both dogs started snubbing the food. At first I thought they grew tired of it and didn't think anything of it, but they began to leave food down more often than not. (They used to gobble it up) in December, we noticed both dogs (even the one that has NO allergies) started scratching like crazy and licking themselves a lot. Then they both started vomiting up their food repeatedly. I suddenly felt an extreme lack of peace about the food and started to worry every time my toddler tried to touch their food. (Not knowing why, just gut feeling) and thought I would try another brand they used to eat prior to eating Natures Domain. I was careful to stick with the same protein so that I could determine if they were having an issue with the type of protein or the brand. As soon as I switched foods, both dogs stopped vomiting and within a few days my dog with no allergy issues stopped itching, and my Weimaraner (with food allergies) was a million times better. (Still scratching/licking some but that is more typical for him) I am certain both dogs had an issue with these last two bags of food. I took a picture of the bag before throwing it out. (Dec 20) and called Costco to report. He pretty much blew me off but said if I wanted to I could come in to file a formal complaint. I also went to Natures domain fb page to see if anyone else had similar issues and saw others report very similar thing- one girl had the exact same question I thought- wondering if they changed the formula or something because they always did fine on it before. The moderator of their fb page said no change in recipe and blew it all off as well saying there are no issues. I did see where they later replied to something I posted on their page and said to call their hotline number to report it. I estimate the date it all began below because I really don't know exactly when it started- sometime in November is when we started noticing their change in behavior towards the food and in December the vomiting and itching. I am certain however that I took a picture of the bag on Dec 20 after calling Costco. Hoping that timeframe helps narrow things down.	7	Years	Weimaraner	Dog	68	Pound

EON-194971	1/26/2015 18:32	Diamond Naturals Large Breed Adult Dog Chicken & Rice Formula	In early December 2014 (b) (6) (canine) began suffering from lethargy along with severe diarrhea and vomiting along with a red rash on his belly, looking like hives. Vomiting subsided after first trip to the vet, December 30, 2014, where (b) (6) was given an antiemetic and a large dose of Benedryl. Diarrhea continued for 3 more days, every 2 hours. (b) (6) became dehydrated but not to the point of needing IV fluids so I called the vet and they dispensed metronidazole for over the holiday weekend. Second trip to vet, January 10, 2015. - after we put him on metronidazole (flagyl) and gave him a bland diet of cooked chicken and rice along with a probiotic powder called FortiFlora, I moved him back to his food after his stomach settled and diarrhea resumed, even while he was on the metronidazole. The vet gave me a second prescription for metronidazole thinking that maybe he just needed a longer course. Brought him back to the vet a third time on Saturday, January 24, 2015. Vet removed him from food and put him on a different antibiotic (Tylosin Tartrate). Switched food to prescription Royal Canin GI blend and he is now recovering from the issue. His rash is now gone, vomiting has stopped and diarrhea is improving. I became concerned about the Diamond brand after researching online that folks are reporting on Consumer Affairs.com, Pet Advisor.com and Great Danes Online that their dogs are suffering from the exact same symptoms after eating Diamond brand foods. We thought she had some sort of virus at first, but then she seemed to get a bit better and started to pick at the food. At the time, we were weaning her pups so we just thought it was due to depression that her pups were being weaned and much less of a nutritional need due to no longer nursing pups. Her appetite never really picked up. A couple weeks later we noticed her abdomen looked swollen, so we took her to the vet where they diagnosed her with ascities and liver failure. We also saw a specialist and put her on all kinds of liver detox supplements and of course a different food. It has been several weeks and she is starting to feel better. EON-194896	1/26/2015 13:40	Blue Healthy Gourmet Ocean Fish and Tuna Entree	About three weeks ago I switched my seven cats from Science Diet to Blue Buffalo because my oldest wasn't as interested in eating the science diet food anymore. The vet suggested that perhaps he couldn't smell it and that we should consider getting him a different food. I tried 13 different wet food flavors over a couple of weeks to see what they liked and to see if there were any problems. We had some minor issues with 4 of the cats which isn't unusual. After about 3 weeks of slowly switching them to the new food one of my cats (an 8 year old ragdoll) started vomiting and couldn't hold down anything for two days. He received blood work, x-rays, subcutaneous fluids, metronidazole, and anti-nausea drug, and a special low residue prescription food. He recovered within a couple of days. Since (b) (6) (my oldest that wasn't eating well on science diet) hadn't experienced any significant problems, the vet suggested that he stay on the Blue Buffalo, since he was eating better. Within three days from that point, he could no longer keep any food down, has had diarrhea for 36 hours and has been to the vet three times in the last 24 hours. At his first two visits he has received subcutaneous fluids, metronidazole, an antacid, an anti nausea drug, blood work, x-rays, a special prescription diet. He pooped and peed on himself while laying on our bed last night, which he has never done. I was told that if he wasn't eating by today he needed to return to his regular vet (we visited an emergency vet twice yesterday). Our vet now has him on IV fluids, B-vitamins and IV metronidazole. Both vets have told me that they have heard anecdotally that people have experienced recent problems with animals getting very sick on Blue Buffalo, both cats and dogs. EON-194654	1/25/2015 13:56	Thrifty Adult Dog Food	After two days of eating the Thrifty brand dog food trademarked by Sunshine Mills, Inc. (P.O.Box 676, Red Bay, AL 35582) my dog, a 100 lb Boxer, collapsed twice during her morning "potty" routine and had to be carried into the house. She had been vomiting since she started this dog food, needless to say I went out and got the Alpo again but I felt the need to warn people about this dog food. I contacted Sunshine Mills and tried with no avail to file a complaint on the BBB site for North Alabama (site wasn't allowing me to continue with complaint when clicking the "Next" button). I have posted on Facebook and will be contacting the store I purchased the bag of food from. This incident was a very terrifying experience to say the least, my Fur Baby/My best FurFriend was lifeless and incoherent to my calls and touch. For a dog that has not had any health problems since we rescued her it was a very scary thing to see.	5	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	100	Pound

In 1 week after feeding this food both dogs were not acting correct, smaller one more then the bigger one, started with urinating in the house, called vet, for advise stated I could be due to guests being in the house, so brushed it off, after weeks of this and after guests left, still happening, we decided to call vet &amp; get sick dog in I have (2) dogs both were showing signs of this, one dog more then the other so On (b) (6) we took the dog that was Showing more illness to vet due to vomiting, urinating in the house, very lethargic, not eating, &amp; drinking a lot of water. Was on fluids &amp; antibiotics for 5 days at one vet, after no change &amp; getting weaker &amp; weaker so early on day 5, now having bloody diarrhea we took her to another vet After doing more tests, &amp; the outcome wasn't positive still very dehydrated, and vet stated cost to try would be in range of $3000.00 &amp; her probability of survival was only 20% and she was suffering &amp; in pain, suggestion was made to euthanize. Which unfortunately we had to do. After switching dog food my other dog stopped vomiting, &amp; is getting back to normal. We believe this food needs to be looked into, and removed from the store shells, it's killing a lot of animals We still have the other food kept it, in case needed to be tested.	4	Years	Rottweiler	Dog	85	Pound

EON-194599	1/24/2015 18:28	Kirkland chicken and rice formula dog food	Switched dog to kirkaInd's Chicken and rice dog food (first time), she started to get ill. Lethargic, itchy, chewing at her coat. Seemed very hungry, as if she was starving. Tests were done and nothing was suspected (worms ect). After about 3/4 of the bag was eaten she then had a partial seizure. Stool was awful smelling, and thin with mucous, and Urinating more often than normal. Switched her food asap. Think maybe the dog food is a poorer quality than advertised. My dog might of suffered from lack of nutrition.	2.5	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog
EON-194592	1/24/2015 14:49	Kirkland Nature's Domain Turkey Meal and Sweet Potato	I have been feeding my dog Costco's Kirkland dog food, Nature's Domain for over a year now. I never had any issues with it until recently. On November 29th 2014 I took him to the vet bc for some reason he would not eat and would not poop. The small amounts I could get him to eat he would throw up 12 hour later. They diagnosed him with a parasite and was treated for one. Even after parasite treatment he still did not seem his normal self. He battled diarrhea and nausea on and off. The vet recommended me taking him off the dog food for a week and giving him an all chicken and rice diet. I did so and he seemed to feel better. I slowly put him back on his dog and all seemed to be going well. Slowly he started to get diarrhea again. On Wednesday January 14th he got violently ill. That evening for about a half hour he was shaking and constantly throwing up foamy bile, eventually to the point of throwing up blood. I rushed him to my vet's emergency after hours clinic. They said he was very dehydrated from the amount of vomiting and had to hydrate him with an iv. They ran tests for parasites and all came back negative. They did not know what was wrong with him. They gave him medicine for nausea and told me to once again give him an all chicken and rice diet. I gave him the chicken and rice diet for a few days and decided to put him back on his normal food. I really didnt think it was the food since we were 3/4 done with the 30 pound bag we had bought and hadn't had any issues with it for the past year. While still on the nausea medicine I started to give him his normal food again. That night even on medicine he began to get sick and throw up. He spent all night shaking and gagging. I started to piece things together. I took him off the food AND the medicine. I fed him boiled chicken the next 4 days and immediately he was fine. Even when NOT on his medicine. I quickly went online and searched for recalls on Diamond's Nature's Domain and did not find any but I did find a lot of reviews complaining of similar issues that I had been going through relating to the November 2014 batch of dog food.	8	Years	Lhasa Apso	Dog	18	Pound

			I only fed (b) (6) boiled chicken for 2 days then I immediately started feeding him a new brand of dog food, Blue Buffalo and he still is doing well. This convinced me the Costco's dog food is tainted and must come off the shelves. I spent hundreds of dollars on medical bills only to find out on my own research that this food is at fault for my dog's sickness.
EON-194588	1/24/2015 13:52	Kirkland Signature Natures Domain Beef Meal and Sweet Potato Formula for dogs	We have been feeding our dogs Kirkland Signature Natures Domain Beef and Sweet Potato formula for about 5 months. Both of our dogs started getting Severe Diarrhea in late December when we switched to a new bag. Both dogs were treated for Diarrhea. Then my 6 y o bloodhound male started vomiting non stop. We thought he had a blockage and paid around $1100 in tests, fluids, etc. We switched him to a homemade meal and thinking things were better, we slowly transitioned back to the Kirkland food. He started vomiting again. The other dog, a 15 year old weim/mix, still had loose stools. We took both dogs off this product and looked for something that is not made by Diamond Pet Products. Their prognosis is good and they seem to be recovering now. I am concerned after reading many things on consumer advisory sites and dog food sites that this is happening to many dogs eating this product. I think an investigation is needed. The bag of food had these numbers on it - Best by 25 Nov 2015 4329 DL/NDB1114B1SJAE 14:32. The UPC code is 9661973518. EON-194582	1/24/2015 11:20	Precise Naturals - Chicken Meal and Rice	Hello ... I would like to report abnormalities in the Precise Foundation Dry Dog Food. We have found foreign kibble pieces that do not resemble any products we carry or use at our pet resort and now we are also finding most of the kibble has "red dye" looking substance baked into the kibble. We have found abnormalities in both the 5 lb size bags and the 44 lb size bags. I first reported this to the manufacturer early December 2014. After one of our employees dogs became ill (but we don't know the cause of her illness ... food, she traveled with her pet ... not blaming the food). Just last week and this week we have had numerous encounters with the abnormalities. We have again reported this to the manufacturer to which we were told they would check into it but "they have passed all of their standard testing". I reported this to Supreme Pet Food in Houston our Distributor and I have reported directly to the manufacturer ... EON-194534	1/23/2015 16:00	Dingo American Made Market Cuts Chicken Jerky	My husband bought the Dingo jerky treats January 5th. (b) (6) had about 1/4 to 1/2 a bag of them by the 12th. Around the 12th we noticed that when we tried to hand her the jerky treat, she would stick her nose up and turn it away. We also noticed that she started drinking tremendous amounts of water. She was constantly at the water dish gulping water. She continued to refuse food. Urine output was voluminous and diluted and she was urinating everywhere she could. We took her to the vet on 1/19 after she continued her increased fluid intake. Blood work showed she was very dehydrated even though she had been drinking massive amounts of water. She had glucose in her urine, but not in the blood. A urine culture was done, a fanconi syndrome test was done and sent to (b) (6) to be tested. She also had IV fluids for two days to hydrate her more. The doctor thinks the problem is Fanconi's syndrome as evidenced by the glucose in the urine. The only thing different is the addition of the chicken jerky treats brand bought on January 5th. She has had many different brands in the past, but this is the first to have caused a problem - if it is the problem. Currently, (b) (6) is home on antibiotics and is still not completely herself, but has slowed down on the massive intakes of water and her urine has been more concentrated with less volume. We still have not done the ordered blood gases for her but have another appointment pending. We also have not got the completed testing back yet.	5	Years	Dachshund - Miniature	Dog	17.3	Pound

EON-194530	1/23/2015 13:12	RachaelRayNutris h Naturally Delish Chicken Paw Pie	On Jan 18, 2015 I purchased a Rachael Ray Naturally Delish wet dog food product at Weis Market in (b) (6). On Jan 21, 2015 I went to feed the product to my dogs and was repulsed by what I found when I opened the seal. First an extremely foul, noxious odor hit me, and when I looked in the container I saw a dark liquid, (which actually looked like an infectious diarrhea with the odor as well), and nothing that had any resemblance to dog food . I quickly closed the container as the smell was so bad it was nauseating. I took the product back to Weis market and talked to the dayshift manager about it. My money was refunded and he said the product would be sent back to the company as a consumer complaint. He could smell the odor with the lid closed and wrapped in a plastic bag ,by the way. I called the 1-800-323-7738 number for Ainsworth Pet Nutrition, Inc. and left a message about the product, I did not get a live person when I called. I have not had any response after the message I left. The smell was actually so bad , the odor was still present when I came back from Weis market, air freshener didn't dissipate the odor, I had to burn incense to get rid of it . My concern is that this is a 2nd incident with the same company. I had previously purchased a pet treat product within the past year--"P-Nuddy Bites" which I also took back to Weis and contacted Ainsworth about. This product had a very strong chemical odor, and the response from Ainsworth was,- when asked if it should smell like that was "probably not". I had purchased them in the past and it never had a strong chemical odor, they actually had a nice peanut butter scent and were soft , whereas this particular time they were not. I was sent certificates for the product from the company. I am concerned about quality control and inspection as within about a years time frame I have had 2 bad products.

EON-194528	1/23/2015 12:32	Nutro Natural Choice Grain Free	I opened a new bag of Nutro Natural Choice cat food Sunday night. My cats were eating a different brand prior to this. Tuesday morning, my smallest cat, had diarrhea. By Wednesday, she was vomiting. I have 4 other cats. 1 other also has diarrhea and is vomiting but not as bad as the small female. Thursday morning I took her to the Vet where she remains today. The other three cats, who are all larger than the two that are very sick, are lethargic and not acting right but they are not vomiting. The ONLY change in the cats food or environment is this bag of cat food. I called Nutro to see if there were any recalls. They only thing their customer care seemed to be able to tell me was that the company has been in business since 1923. Good to know! EON-194335	1/22/2015 4:00	Purina Cat Chow Naturals Plus Vitamins and Minerals	I opened a new bag of Purina Cat Chow Naturals and filled the cat dishes before leaving to visit my family on Thanksgiving morning. When I returned later that night, there was cat vomit in about 9 different places around the house. The cats seemed fine when I left for work the next morning. When I got home, I noticed that neither cat was eating the food anymore. There was more vomit around the house, except this time it was a greenish liquid. (b) (6) was laying in the middle of the hall not feeling well. (b) (6) was meowing at me like she was starving, I poured another dish of food but (b) (6) would not touch it. I gave her a can of tuna and she ate that happily (b) (6) would not eat at all. They were both drinking a lot of water, but when (b) (6) drank, she vomited it back up. I tried on Saturday to get her to the vet, but the vets office was closed. Her eyes were still bright, so I thought she could wait until the office was open on Monday. She continued to vomit and became more lethargic and started having trouble walking as the day went on. I went to work Sunday morning and her eyes were still bright, so I thought she would be ok. When I got home she was lethargic and unresponsive. I broke down and found a 24 hour vet emergency center. I brought her in and they ran tests, it was renal failure and dehydration. They said that (b) (6) was probably not going to live for very long. The vet was keeping her alive with iv fluids. I was going to have her euthanized the next day, after I brought my daughter to say goodbye. When the vet called in the morning, she said the fluids were helping and that they wanted to try antibiotics and some other medicines. I told the vet to try, and when my daughter and I went to visit, (b) (6) seemed to be more like herself. The vet center kept her on fluids and medicines until the next afternoon (Tuesday) when I was able to bring her home. The vet strongly advised me to throw away that bag of food. I bought a new brand of food (IAMS digestive care, and kitten food) on my way home. I gave (b) (6) antibiotics and an acid reducer pill twice a day for the next 2 weeks. Same results. This time the connection was made. Vet was notified, started chicken and rice. Other than diarrhea, no other problems, and both dogs (b) (6) age 9.5, (b) (6) age 11.5 mths) appeared their usual playful self. Monday morning I took stool sample as well as unused portion of treats in original pouch to Vet. Stool samples negative for parasites. She placed them on Endosorb, and they had three doses yesterday. We gave 1/2 usual dose of kibble with chicken and rice. Last night, all heck broke loose. Up every hour for both dogs with watery diarrhea. This morning I cut back to 3/4 - 1 cup rice and chicken for each with nothing else. Other than diarrhea, both remain their normral selves, though tired from a rough night.	1	Years	Retriever - Golden	Dog	78	Pound

EON-194151	1/19/2015 21:48	Cadet Gourmet Dog Treats Duck Breasts	Intermittent vomiting for about 1-2 weeks, then acute progressive decline in appetite with progressive lethargy, increased thirst and urination over 3-4 days. (b) (6) was brought to her veterinarian, who diagnosed acute renal failure based on labwork (BUN 164/Creatinine 3.4). Abdominal ultrasound showed normal-sized kidneys with severe loss of corticomedullary distinction and mineralization bilaterally. She was started on aggressive fluid therapy, empirical antibiotics, but despite aggressive therapy her kidney values initially stayed stable but then worsened, and she began to have decreased urine production. My dog swallowed it whole, after it passed thru her stomach and into her small intestine it started to swell and caused a major obstruction. I would like to take action to get this product off the shelf or at least put out a consumer warning so it won't happen to another dog less fortunate. Had I not caught this in time I don't think she would be alive right now. I knew immediately something was wrong with her & got her in to see the veterinarian right away. They have to be administered carefully at a prescribed dose each day. For a few months now these treats have arrived broken in many small pieces which makes them unusable. I contacted the distributor who advised they have received numerous complaints about this and they contacted Mr. Chris Barraclough at Miracle Corp. He told her its a manufacturing problem due to new equipment and once they ship all the defective product in the warehouse they can begin manufacturing the product correctly. There is something inherently wrong with that kind of business practice. The distributor is not getting what they pay for and the customer certainly is not to say nothing of the impact to the health of the pet by over or under dosing. This company needs to be held accountable for their decision.

We have been feeding the same food to the dog for years. Last time we bought food, noticed a packaging change. Originally thought it was her age, could be bladder stones, had bad teeth, but when offered different food she will eat that. I think she knows or has associated her condition to her food. Changing diet now. We have food that we would like tested for toxins. Where can we send it ? EON-192921	1/8/2015 17:16	Grrreat Choice Decorated Variety Dog Treat Box	We purchased the "Grrreat Choice® Decorated Variety Dog Treat Box Item: 36-25821" from PetSmart on 11/21/2014 for pick up in their (b) (6) store. Item was picked up on 11/22/2014, and stored in a cool, dry place until Christmas morning. On Christmas morning, my husband and I removed two of the cookies and fed them to our dog as a treat. This was the only food he was given other than his normal dog food, which we have never had a problem with. Later that evening, my dog began to experience loose stools. The following morning, 12/26/2014, my dog began experiencing extreme vomiting and diarrhea. He had bouts of diarrhea on his walk at 6am, as well as vomiting. Sometime between 6am and 8am, the dog had severe diarrhea in his dog crate while we were asleep. We removed the dog from the crate and cleaned the area. Around 9am the dog vomiting inside on the floor, and his vomit was tingled with blood (pink). Around 930am, I took the dog out for a walk. He immediately had diarrhea and blood in his stool. We called our vet (b) (6) in (b) (6) and were able to bring him in for an emergency visit. He had an x-ray performed (no obstructions), received IV fluids and was given medication for the nausea and diarrhea. It took him a few days to recover, but he is now thankfully back to normal health. My husband and I were quite upset to learn that there have been over 4,000 complaints to the FDA regarding dog treats made in China (specifically the rawhide type that we fed to our dog), and yet no warning has been issued.	4	Years	Basenji	Dog	36	Pound

EON-192809	1/7/2015 20:40	Fromm Adult Gold	upon starting the 2nd bag of Fromm Adult dry dog food (so he had been eating it for about a month), (b) (6) suddenly didn't want to eat one day, was lethargic, and the next day he had explosive and bloody diarrhea. We took him to the emergency vet where he received fluids, but testing didn't reveal anything. We didn't suspect anything about the food at the time, as the other dog didn't have any reaction. However, the 2nd dog has a much more "cast iron" stomach and isn't very reactive. So the 2nd dog remained on the same food (Fromm). However, upon getting home tonight we discovered that the 2nd dog has had the same symptoms today - a huge amount of bloody diarrhea. After doing some internet research and finding similar stories about this food, I decided to make a report.	9	Years	Portuguese Water Dog	Dog	40	Pound

He later cried out as if in pain, and I went to touch him to comfort him and see what was wrong. Although he had never had an episode like this in his life. He had another so my friend and I took him to the (b) (6) which fortunately is within 2 miles of my home. He was given many tests, and treated, however they referred us to another Specialty Hospital for an MRI of his brain. Brain tumor was suspected. We were referred to the Neurologist on staff. He performed many tests which included the MRI, but found no brain tumor or cancer. He suspected that (b) (6) might have Thiamine deficiency. Once he supplemented (b) (6) with Thiamine, his symptoms ceased to exist. They sent out his test to confirm the diagnosis of thiamine deficiency, and it took close to 6 weeks to get it back. It was however confirmed that the Doctor was correct. He said that the food must have been deficient, even though it says it is a complete feline diet. At the time, the veterinarian's determination was the symptoms suggested atypical Cushing's but was inconclusive. Because of these symptoms, my dog is on five different medications; including Keppra seizure medicine, blood pressure medicine, medicine to keep her from losing protein in her urine, Lignons and melatonin. Since the first symptom, vet visits are at least three times a year, at the cost of thousands of dollars, my vet has determined those treats were the probable the cause of all her symptoms. July 26, 2013 was the last purchase date of the treats. My dog had a vet visit on July 29, 2013 due to a violent symptoms only three days after consuming more of the treats. My dog remained on the treats for over two years, getting progressively sicker because we did not know the treats are causing her illness. She had a lot of stool with a little bit of blood and then started having pain and issues with her rectum. She usually is a ball of energy but was laying around not wanting to move the entire day... her anus was very sore, swollen and it was leaking fluid for several days. I took her to the er vet the day after symptoms started. They thought that she just had a fecal ball and needed her glands expressed. They expressed her glands which hurt the puppy extremely bad... put a cone on her head and sent us home. 2 days later, she was still not better, a little blood in her stool and major issues with her rectum. She would not stop trying to get to it and was also acting very strangely. She would run and hide in places she has never even gone in before, ie. a dark closet, the shower, and just sit there and stare.... if she wasn't trying to get to her bottom, then she was either laying around or sitting somewhere by herself. I took her to our regular vet who shaved her bottom and gave her a cortisone shot. Not sure that helped at all... She still had leaking from her anus for days and is still not back to normal a week and half later, but better than she was.	5	Months	Schnauzer - Miniature	Dog	10	Pound

EON-192749	1/6/2015 18:52	Purina Friskies with Chicken in Gravy Prime Filets	Fed all 3 of my cats cans of Purina Chicken in gravy Prime Filets for years. After (b) (6), I fed all 3 cats a new batch of cans of the same brand as always and they all smelled it and walked away. Thought it was strange but thought they're just being finicky, also the cats all started vomiting more. Eventually they all came back and ate some but never all of it as usual. Busy with the holidays and lost in thoughts of recently losing my husband, I didn't pay much attention to the food except to notice they never came to eat anymore and the food was never completely gone. I did make a mental note to try another flavor thinking they were tired of it. (b) (6), my oldest cat (b) (6) got sick, her third eyelid was visible and she was weak and I realized she has lost a lot of weight. I could feel her spine much more than normal too. She was lethargic and weak and I noticed the other two cats were barely getting up and were vomiting more all the time. With (b) (6) now over I sat down and researched the food, now recalling their reaction to this new batch, and discovered almost 800 complaints for Purina. Apparently they changed their products to "new and improved" and cats everywhere were getting sick and many dying. I immediately ran out and bought a natural cat food for them and the 2 younger cats gobbled it up but (b) (6) could barely get up. I brought food to her and she did eat it but was worse by the hour. By (b) (6), (b) (6) was falling off the sofa and walking into things when she did get up. I had to have her put to sleep. I strongly feel that food was contaminated somehow. My other 2 cats are fine now but (b) (6) was just too old to bounce back. I warned everyone I knew and at least 6 others told me their cats have been sick or vomiting up the food and not coming to eat anymore. This first occurred a few days after opening fresh bags of kibble. (b) (6) was taken to the nearest hospital on 11/12/2014. After running a number of tests, I was told that he most likely had gastroenteritis that was probably related to something he ate. His condition worsened after the medication wore off and he was taken to our regular vet (b) (6) on 11/14/2014. The dogs were then placed on a diet of chicken and rice for a few days and the Purina kibble was slowly reintroduced. As soon as they were eating a full diet of the kibble again, our second dog, (b) (6) became ill with the same symptoms as (b) (6), just not quite as severe. She was taken to the hospital on 11/26/2014. I was told that they must be having issues with something they were eating, and it was suggested that I put them back on a chicken and rice diet, slowly reintroduce the kibble, and discontinue use of all treats, table scraps, vitamins, and supplements, which we did. The first day they were back exclusively on the Purina kibble, they began having diarrhea and stomach problems. Since there was no other possible cause at that point, I stopped feeding them their Purina and bought a bag of Gravy Train. They were just fine after that. My dogs have been fed Purina Dog Chow for 8 years. We've never had any problems before, but after all the vet visits, I am quite certain that there is something wrong with this dog food. I would very much like to know if there is a facility nearby where I could have it tested. I have a feeder full of kibble and 3 open bags with small amounts of food that could not fit in the feeder; I am certain that at least one variety of this food is contaminated-- I just don't know which one(s) since I mix the 3 varieties. I also have quite a few unopened bags that I am afraid to use because I buy several bags of food each week during the month when the Purina Dog Chow is on sale at the grocery store. EON-192628	1/5/2015 13:44	Fine Feline Turkey & Giblets Entree' with real turkey	I have been feeding my 3 cats an Aldi brand, "Fine Feline" canned wet food exclusively for the last two weeks, different selections, since mid-December, maybe 12/17(?). Around 12/24, I narrowed the selections down to the turkey & giblets version and fed that several times day every day for over a week. My one cat, (b) (6) behavior has recently changed over the last week or so - she has become withdrawn, lethargic, has a very weak meow, not much appetite, doesn't come into the kitchen to wait for breakfast anymore (it used to be the highlight of her day), and purrs a lot which is also how stressed/ill cats comfort themselves. I could tell she was not feeling well and at first I just thought it was old age and that she suddenly was on her way out, but now I'm wondering if it could possibly be from the food I've been feeding her. Yesterday morning, after I fed one cat some of the refrigerated Turkey & Giblets entree, I left the lid off while I stepped away for about 15 minutes. The can was on a white plate and when I returned I saw something moving on the plate - it was a live worm about an inch away from the can. It most likely came from the can. It was about the width of 3 strands of hair and about a half inch long and moving. I saved it in a little jar so one of your lab technicians could hopefully identify it so I could ask my veterinarian whether some of these critters could be making my cat, (b) (6), sick, possibly in her intestines and how to treat it/deworm her. I also kept what food was left in the can but I don't see any other signs of worms. I am no longer feeding them this brand. Only other variable is the owners report going to the stables on (b) (6) - it is the only time (b) (6) has left the house in the last few weeks. Owners are an elderly couple and stay mainly indoors with (b) (6). On blood collection (jugular) (b) (6) bruised heavily and we were unable to stop a hematoma from forming. In addition the urine collected was red, bloody. This prompted us to add PT/PTT in house tests to our blood profile, which came back very high for both. ALT was rising on two blood draws, as well as hyperglycemia, polycythemia, glucosuria, and other abnormalities. USG was 1.029 on in house refractometer. Ongoing differential is Rodenticide poisoning, possibly from a visit to the stable, although toxicity from Rodenticide may take up to 3 days to appear and stable visit was one day prior (as were the treats given). (b) (6) responded well to one day of hospitalization and initiation of Vitamin K therapy. Owners have returned to stable and no evidence of rat bait - stable uses large boxes that are safe for small animals. Owners have also retraced common walking paths around the house and cannot find the source of toxin. Not thinking the feed was a problem I gave it to him again once he was better. He began throwing it up again. Finally I saw it was the feed. EON-192598	1/5/2015 9:04	Purina Friskies Salmon Dinner Classic Pate	I purchased "Friskies Cat Food Classic Pate" from Amazon, a case of 24 that comes in two, 12-can packages. I have purchased this before. The item was unavailable from Amazon for a while, apparently because many customers were complaining about damaged cans. I never had any problems, so I ordered it again when it was available. I received a case with a swollen can, and other cans were dented and had dirt and debris on them. I contacted Amazon. I am going to destroy the entire case.

EON-192208	12/31/2014 2:08	Purina Beneful Healthy Weight with Real Chicken	Our dog had a routine trip to the vet where we were advised that he was slightly overweight. To tackle this issue, we purchased Purina Beneful Healthy Weight with Real Chicken to help him get back to a more acceptable weight. Over the course of a few months he seemed fine with this food, sometimes would not want to eat it, and over the course of about a week and a half the symptoms showed, increased and eventually become too severe to deem humane when we then put him to sleep. What led us to the idea of it being an issue with the food were MANY NEGATIVE reviews of this product found here: http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/beneful.html Our dog showed every if not most symptoms reported by other consumers and died of chronic kidney failure.	5	Years	Terrier (unspecified)	Dog	33	Pound
EON-192201	12/30/2014 22:04	Innova Cat and Kitten food	Innova hard food has been my cat (b) (6) primary food. Because of all the previous Innova recalls I have tried to get (b) (6) to eat different brands other than Innova to include tracking and avoiding other cat food brands that have been recalled. Approximately, three weeks ago (b) (6) began having loose stools. I became increasingly aware of his stool problem when he started to have diarrhea (liquid stooling). He regurgitated undigested food once during this time. He also was having some choking type coughing episodes that were non-productive. Hairball remedies did not seem to help the cough. The cough stopped when (b) (6) no longer ate Innova. I withheld food for 12 hours and then 24 hours that finally enticed (b) (6) to try the food that I had been feeding my other cat (b) (6). (b) (6) ate some Innova at times though Blue Buffalo has been her primary food. (b) (6) has been more alert and playful since stopping Innova. (b) (6) is about three months older than (b) (6) (b) (6) and (b) (6) are never outside. I am reporting the problems that (b) (6) has experienced because I have been upset and very concerned for the recurring recalls that Innova has had. I realize Innova may have the problems of their recalls corrected though, regardless I do not trust Innova.	3.4	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	10	Pound

EON-192186	12/30/2014 17:44	Purina® Pro Plan® SAVOR Adult Cat Food - Chicken and Rice	I've been feeding my 2 cats (both 11, 1 male, 1 female) Purina Pro Plan Adult Chicken and Rice formula dry cat food for &gt; 5 years. I bought a new bag of food approximately 3 weeks ago from Petsmart (b) (6) (b) (6) (I can provide the receipt if that helps.) I started feeding it to the cats on approximately 12/16. There was one incident of vomit (unknown which cat) and less food eaten than normal although I initially believed that was due to the packing, etc. for our trip to (b) (6). On 12/18, the cats and I drove down to (b) (6); no food eaten on the drive. On the evening of 12/19, the female was sick; both cats were eating less than when we're home, but not too unusual for a trip. (b) (6) got sick several times on 12/20 and 12/21. Because the food was the same as they've eaten for years, I suspected the water was the issue (or even a virus). I changed out the water and started watching her more closely. I also looked up any recalls, and found nothing. Over the course of the next few days, I tried modifying her eating patterns - eating with water, less food at a time (i.e., see if she was overeating and making herself sick), bottled water (vs tap vs water cooler). When none of that worked, I was getting ready to take her to the vet on 12/26 when I finally found some reports on www.consumeraffairs.com that described the reaction (as well as the fact that it didn't necessarily affect both animals equally). Several of the descriptions matched what I was seeing exactly. (b) (6) was seriously thin by this time. I tried immediately changing my cats' food for the one my parents feed their cat. While this worked (and (b) (6) ate a little bit of it), she does not like fish-based foods, so she wasn't eating enough; on 12/27 I went to Pet Supermarket in (b) (6) and purchased 3 different types of food for the cats. 			on 12/27. There was one additional incident of vomit (appeared to be eating too much) and one of diarrhea, but (b) (6) is eating again and starting to put on weight. (b) (6) (the male) had a single "loose stool" after the switch. (b) (6) personality is beginning to get back to normal too. I continue to monitor both cats, and have changed my plans to remain in (b) (6) until (b) (6) is 'normal' for 3 days. However, I wanted to report this to be investigated as soon as possible since it seems to be affecting a number of cats - all eating Purina cat food. I do still have the cat food if needed.

EON-191340	12/19/2014 12:20	Nature's Domain Turkey Meal & Sweet Potato Formula for Dogs	I have been feeding my two labs Nature's Domain for the past year. Once my puppy was weened off puppy food, I wanted to switch to a good value food and I shop at Costco on the regular, so for two (one 75 & one 100 pound) labs I thought this was perfect. My older dog was raised on Pedigree and had a hard time with any of the 'nice' dog foods like Blue Buffalo but he seemed to switch to this food fine. Our dogs have had bad gas for the past year but I figured that was a breed related issue. We have had a few incidents where they will occasionally throw-up, nothing too alarming. A few months ago both of our dogs were sick (vomiting) and they were refusing/hesitant to eat the Nature's domain. I had given them the beef meal instead of turkey so I thought that was the issue. I emailed Diamond and they told me I could return the food no issue, and I did. Now this past week my youngest (1.5 years old) had been gagging here and there. I thought it was weird but was just keeping an eye on him. It would always be after he ate. He got incredibly sick on a Thursday. He threw up massive amounts of food after his breakfast and was continually throwing up the rest of the day. I finally called my vet at 4:45pm because in the 4pm hour, my dog had thrown up 15-20 times (and we were fasting him at this point!!). They had us bring him in and projected all the tests they wanted to run were going to cost $1100. We started with the blood test, to ensure he didn't eat anything toxic or any chemicals, but the lab results came back fine. They gave us a Cerenia shot (24 anti-nausea med) and told us to monitor for 24 hours and fast him to see how he does. He continued throwing up through out the night and the next day so I called a different vet for an opinion. She recommended x-rays to make sure he hadn't eaten/swallowed anything large that would be blocking his intestinal track. The x-ray showed some concern near his stomach but nothing major, since he was still throwing up they did a Barium study (swallowing food that shows up on x-rays and taking x-rays every 15 mins to see digestion). They noticed an incredibly	1.7	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	75	Pound

			large portion of his stomach wasn't showing any of the food. They were concerned at this point he had ingested something and recommended exploratory surgery. We went into surgery and had the unfortunate call they found nothing except SEVERE gastroenteritis. His stomach was so inflamed from irritation but there wasn't anything inside that he could have swallowed. Since this incident, he has been off the Nature's Domain Turkey dog food for a week on a chicken &amp; rice (made at home) diet and has fully recovered. The doctor's are dumbfounded at what caused this but I have a hunch it's the build up of food from over time. After reading these other horror stories, I can only imagine it was the food that caused this. There are not toxic chemicals in our home as I am currently pregnant and make all my own home cleaners &amp; detergents from vinegar. Nothing else has changed in his diet or surroundings for his lifetime except when I put him on this food. Take serious precaution when feeding your dog Nature's Domain. The reoccurring stomach issues I've dealt with in both my dogs has always raised concern - but nothing too big until this incident. Through all of this - I have emailed Diamond to let them know of these issues and they claim they have no other complaints with the batches of food I'm referring too... but I think they just aren't looking at the bigger picture of how awful their food must be. A friend of mind went through the same thing recently with Nature's Domain and the company told her the same thing!

EON-191278	12/18/2014 17:52	Purina Pro Plan Savor Adult Shredded Blend Lamb & Rice Formula	I purchased a 35# bag of Nestle Purina Pro Plan Savor dry dog food almost 2 wks. ago, and I have been feeding it to our 2 dogs. When I scooped out their food this evening from the bag I noticed crumbs from the dry food around the bag on the floor and in the crumbs were worms, so I opened up the bag and looked more in depth at the food chunks. The "Lamb Chunks" had white cocoon webbed spots on them, so I broke apart several and there were live worms coming out of them!! The entire bag was infested. I called Purina 1-800-7 PURINA and I got representative and she didn't seem one bit concerned and said she would be sending me coupons. It wasn't coupons I wanted, but rather my overall concerns and fear for my animals that had eaten and digested all of the worms for almost two weeks now. A month ago I purchased a bag of Purina One from our local K-Mart store and I opened it and it smelled rank and the lamb pieces were all swollen up. So I Didn't feed it to our dogs, and instead I sent it right back to Purina with a note, The sent me coupons and said the were testing the returned product. Now I find it strange that I buy yet another Purina product but a different variety with Lamb Chunks again, and this time it is swollen up again. I think they have a definite "Quality Control" issue and have a possible infestation on their Company Line?. I'm concerned with the health of our dogs and other peoples pets who may have consumed this food from possibly the same lots?.

EON-191021	12/16/2014 11:56	Dave's Turkey & Giblets Pate Dinner	Yesterday morning while preparing my cats' breakfast, I opened a 12 ounce can of Dave's Turkey and Giblets Pate Dinner and made a shocking discovery! The can was not compromised at all -- no dents, the lid was not bulging -- yet the food inside is CLEARLY spoiled, VERY HEAVILY molded. The Lot Number is UCTKS1 11:57 Use Before June 17. I have taken photographs and saved the can of food, as well as the remaining cans in the same case. I have other cases of Dave's food, but will not be feeding any of it. For the first time in WEEKS, my cats ate all of their food yesterday morning, last night, and this morning. Both my husband and I have been puzzled about the large amounts of food that has gone uneaten for some time. I now have a better understanding why some of the cats have seemed quiet, lethargic, not eating and ill. THANKFULLY, I combine 3 brands of canned food at each feeding, so the other two helped mitigate the spoiled food I had been expecting them to eat. I am saddened and distressed ... not only have I possibly been poisoning my cats, but I guess I've practically been starving them too. I finally received a reply a little while ago from Dave and he asked me to send the can of food and he would also mail me more food. I don't want the food and I hesitate to send the "evidence" (can of food) unless advised to do so. I sincerely appreciate any advice or recommendations as to what my next steps should be.

I collected the sample and saved it in a plastic bag. The next day, a longer similar foreign body was found and also collected. On inspection of the rest of the purchased dog treats, another ear was found with a lesion appearing to be an implant site. I opened that site and found material suggestive of a Ralgro implant that had a brown granular material inside that disintegrated on presentation. Being a veterinarian for 35 years and this being my own personal dog, I wanted to report this so no other dog could be seriously impacted. As of now, she is clinically normal-asymptomatic, but after inspection of the passed foreign body, I could theorize that intestinal penetration could occur under the right circumstances.

Mitral endocardiosis had been identified at the time of the abdominal ultrasound with (b) (6). Abdominal palpation was tense but nonpainful. Fundic and rectal exam were normal. After discussions with the owners, (b) (6) was admitted to the hospital for supportive care, supplemental IV fluids, continued antibiotics, and additional testing (abdominal ultrasound, bile acids profile, GI panel, baseline cortisol, and urine metabolic screen). Ultrasound revealed a normal spleen, urinary bladder, lymph nodes, and adrenal glands. The liver is small but portal markings are normal. The gall bladder is moderately distended but does not appear to be obstructed and there is no evidence of mucocele or choleliths. There is a 2.5cm anechoic cyst in the caudal pole of the left kidney. The small bowel is prominent but not overly thickened and the pylorus is mildly fluid dilated. Bile acids and baseline cortisol were normal, ruling out liver dysfunction/portosystemic shunt and Atypical Addison's disease, respectively. (b) (6) was maintained in hospital for the next 3 days. Her glucosuria has resolved and her ketonuria is improved. She is not eating on her own but is tolerating syringe feedings very well. (b) (6) history of chicken jerky treat exposure is compelling and may be at least partially responsible for her current illness as it has been shown to cause proximal renal tubular acidosis in some dogs. Most patient's with this condition recover without permanent kidney damage, but not all, and only time will tell whether or not (b) (6) signs will stabilize. PROGNOSIS: Open ADDITIONAL CLIENT INFORMATION: As (b) (6) has had some appetite issues over the last year, I am concerned that there may be more going on with (b) (6) than just the kidney disorder. We may still need to pursue workup for these issues, but my goal is to have (b) (6) kidney dysfunction stabilized first. If her clinical signs stabilize, then we may hold off on any further investigation, but if they persist, then I think we should pursue upper GI endoscopy. I will call with outstanding labwork when available. Diet: (b) (6) should eat approximately 3/4 can of a/d daily. You should syringe feed her 3x daily, and syringe 30ml 3x daily today. EON-190655	12/11/2014 23:16	Royal Canin renal LP modified feline	(b) (6) had been eating Royal Canine LP modified (morsels in gravy) as a prescription diet for her renal disease prior to the occurrence of this event. This prescription diet was mixed approximately half and half with Wellness minced tuna (both are wet foods). On approximately (b) (6), I received a new case of this food. I cannot be sure if the problem started with this new case of Royal Canine or if it began during the feeding of the old case of food. However, I do know that (b) (6) consumed 6 of the 3oz cans of the new case of food. (b) (6) gradually became inappetent and her constipation worsened (defecating once every 3 days or so). Then she began to have occasional facial twitching. I thought that perhaps her unthrifty behavior was related to her thyroid disease, so I had her blood values retested on (b) (6). Her blood results indicated that her thyroid disease was well-controlled, but that she had an elevated total calcium. On the morning of (b) (6) (b) (6) began to display neurological symptoms. She was acting "confused" in that she would take several steps in one direction, look around, and then turn to a different direction. There was no purpose to her movement and she was agitated. This began a series of expensive testing at the (b) (6) (b) (6). To summarize, it was determined that her ionized calcium was elevated (true hypercalcemia). Various tests were performed and prominent veterinary endocrinologist felt that (b) (6) most likely had a parathyroid gland tumor as the cause of the elevated calcium. The day prior to (b) (6) scheduled surgery (b) (6) (b) (6) to remove the parathyroid gland, her blood work revealed that her calcium had returned to normal. The endocrinologist cancelled the surgery and recommended re-testing (b) (6) blood in (b) (6). Between (b) (6) and (b) (6), (b) (6) ionized calcium had been tested several times and was repeatedly elevated. 			in food, I started to feed her ONLY the Wellness food, which she preferred and was more inclined to eat. Therefore, I wonder if there is a possibility that the Royal Canine diet may have had an excessive amount of Vitamin D3 supplement added, which may have instigated (b) (6) hypercalcemia. (b) (6) phosphorus was not elevated in conjunction with the elevated calcium. It is likely that (b) (6) may have idiopathic hypercalcemia (a common disease in cats) that temporarily resolved with a complete change in diet. However, I felt that I had an ethical responsibility to voice my concern regarding the Royal Canin diet, just in case similar reports had been filed, and there was a problem with the formulation of the diet.

We purchased a new bag on Thursday, December 4. She started eating the food on December 5 and threw up that afternoon. She became lethargic and drank excessive amounts of water. We tried to get her to eat the food over the weekend without success. We deduced that it might be the Blue Buffalo food when she would eat treats and other food (eggs, rice, beef) without any problem. Anytime she ate some of the dog food she attempted to drink large amounts of water. Also, she is a labrador and known to eat her meals quickly, never picks or leaves an empty bowl. We visited the vet at the beginning of the week. Her bloodwork was fine and they provided her with a different brand of dog food, which we will try. We contacted Blue Buffalo who reported that there weren't any recalls at this time. We also called Petsmart where we purchased the food and they allowed us to return the food without any problem. We decided to make a report because when my husband returned the food they immediately asked, "is it Blue Buffalo?" - we returned it in a plastic bag as we threw away the original bag, so they had no way of knowing what we were returning. We thought it was strange that they automatically assumed it might be this particular brand. Thankfully, our dog is ok. We just want you to be aware of this issue. EON-190589	12/10/2014 13:24	Pedigree Adult Complete Nutrition Dry Dog Food	I had this dog for 9 years since birth and i had another one also for 1 1/2 years and he was 3 months old when i got him. I usually fed them Retreiver brand from Tractor Supply, and they had Pedigree on sale so it would only cost me $ 2 - 3 difference, which is suppose to be a better brand so i purchased it instead. I still had some of their old food left so they ate it for a bit and then began the new bag; within about 1 1/2 - 2 weeks my dogs were not active at all and would stay to themself a lot - Chow's get hot and lay around in the summer more, especially when they are outside; so i thought they needed another fan on them and turned my central air down a little more...the youngest baby would not come to me and seemed to only eat a little. I went out of town that night and on (b) (6) my son called and told me he had died, so it would have been sometime in the night on the (b) (6) or early morning on the (b) (6) I came back into town on (b) (6) early 5:00AM to check on my oldest one and got him to drink and eat just a few bites; i then went to work feeling better about him. When i got home he still was just laying around a lot but a little more active than had been, I got him to drink more water but not to eat much, when i went to bed which is upstairs he laid at the bottom because he was to weak to climb the stairs, about 1/2 later he was whining because he wanted to sllep upstairs by my bed and tried to climb the stairs and only made it up 3 and couldn't go any further. He was to heavy for me to carry so i slept downstairs with him. That night when i was staying downstairs with him i dumped his food and water out and got him some fresh and while laying with him he began to eat and drink resulting in him finally eating and drinking a whole bowl. I got up next morning and went to work and after i got off i felt so good and thought he was going to be fine, so i stopped and got him a bag of new treats and a toy; when i went into my house he was laying at the bottom of the stairs like he always does waiting on me to come home, so i was quiet to not wake him and went to check how much he had ate and	9	Years	Chow Chow	Dog	90	Pound

			drank during the day, and it was none so i carried the bowls to him to help him and figured out he was already dead. Theses dogs lived in the house with me and only was in an enclosed fenced backyard. I was devistated especially about my oldest one, he was like my kid to me. It took me quiet awhile to get my head straight and to stay at my house; now i have been trying to research and get some answers but nobody has contacted me back; there have been recalls on the Pedigree food that i had bought, but not at the business they listed or none was in this area but they were both healthy and full of energy prior to buying this bag of food. I kept the food and the bag because i have been trying to get it tested; Pedigree had a recall due to some metal and i'm pretty sure that my dogs kidneys shut down because he didn't need to go out to the bathroom for 2 days. It needs tested to possible save someone else from this if it was the food. My dog laid either at my bathroom door or the shower looking out for me and i can't stand to shower when by myself now...i always felt safe with my dog there. I just want something done, i'am having a hard time getting past this. I have not contacted Pedigree yet because i would like the food tested first; i have looked at a lot of complaints and problems with their food and a lot of them had lifeless pets after they ate the food. Gussed at the started date below i will have to go back through my checkbook to see when i bought the food exactly but they also didn't began eating it right away. I'm guessing the younger smaller dog died first because he loved to eat more than my older one; my older one drank more and ate less and seemed to be doing a bit better until i got him to eat the whole bowl of dog food.

EON-190341	12/8/2014 0:08	Merrick Grain Free Healthy Weight Recipe	I poured out some of the Merrick Healthy Weight Recipe dry dog food for my dog tonight and noticed that the food pellets looked like they had small holes in them. Upon further inspection I noticed something moving in it, and then saw that the food was infested with bugs. My dog had been consuming this lot of dog food for a bit over a week now and has not seemed to exhibit any symptoms, however I was disgusted and plan on taking the food and a stool sample to my vet. I did not notice any bugs before today and have never had this issue with this brand of dog food before.
EON-190338	12/7/2014 22:08	Beef trachea with cheese or peanut butter flavor	Gave dog beef trachea bone (for dogs) around noon. Usually feed dinner around 6pm. She did not eat, and didn't think anything of it because she does not eat a lot. Around 8/9 pm she was going to doggie door and started screaming in pain. She was hunched over as to go to the bathroom but could not go. Rushed get to the E.R. and had to be sedated and given an enema. The outside coating of the bone had not digested and compacted in to a ball in her colon. The vet said it was a very good thing we were home when the incident occurred. The results of the enema were clearly from the bone. It looked exactly the same coming out as it did going in.	1	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	40	Pound

Because Orajen is so expensive I bought a bag of Costco Kirkland Signature Nature's Domain Salmon and Sweet Potato kibble to start using and to replace the Orajen. I blended the Orajen and Nature's Domain for several weeks until the Orajen ran out. At that point in time I fed my dog the Nature's Domain Salmon and Sweet Potato exclusively. During the time that my dog has eaten the Nature's Domain she has been licking her paws and legs excessively with sores starting to develop. I bought a bag of Orajen and will start reverting back to Orajen TOMORROW. I spoke with a friend whose dog also recently developed skin problems as a result of eating the Nature's Domain Salmon and Sweet Potato. EON-190269	12/6/2014 1:20	Purina ONE Smartblend Lamb & Rice	I have always fed (b) (6) Purina One & have continually purchased the Smart Blend Lamb & Rice. I purchased a 16lb bag & fed her 2 cups from the newly opened bag in the morning. I always give her a bit of broth & sprinkle cheese on it & she normally has no hesitation on eating it. This time she sniffed it & though she consumed it, it was halfheartedly. Four hours later she began vomiting for a total of five times. I gave her water & she seemed fine after that. I gave her a few dog biscuits & some apple pieces as is usual & she ate them avidly. Later that night I gave her a cup of Purina One SmartBlend from the new bag. She ate it slowly without gusto but when offered a dog biscuit she ate that avidly. During the night I was awakened by her nose signalling something was wrong. I could hear her stomach making the most loud, horrible noises imaginable. Her intestines were literally squealing. I got her outside where she vomited & had diarrhea. The next morning was Thanksgiving & I gave her another cup of the Smart Blend, this time without broth or cheese. I watched as she nosed at it but wouldn't eat it. I then offered her a cracker & a dog biscuit which she gobbled down. I then took the Purina Smart blend away & went to the store. I bought a small bag of Evolve to try. (b) (6) sniffed it & ate a cup avidly. It has been a week & she has not had any vomiting or diarrhea or intestinal distress since being on the Evolve. I have the bag of Purina still in the garage (I keep the bag in a sealed metal canister so no pests can get to it.) Since I have always fed Purina One SmartBlend I can only deduce this lot# is tainted in some way. I will never feed it again but I am worried. I was lucky to have caught the problem early so (b) (6) doesn't seem to have any after effects but other dogs may not be so lucky. Because (b) (6) is disabled & depends on me for mobility I know she did not get into anything outside that could have made her sick. It was a brand new bag of Purina One & the bad side effects were fast acting.	6	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	79	Pound

EON-190245	12/5/2014 14:04	Canine Carry Outs Bacon Flavor	I bought Canine Carry Out dog snacks from Shoprite. My complaint is not with Shoprite, though with Del Monte, the distributor on the package label. To make the story short, I gave my dog one treat on two separate occasions, no otherw dietary changes and he was extremely sick. His illness consisteed of lethary, to the point where he couldn't lift his head and I was even monitoring him for breathing. He couldn't stand up on his own and slept the whole day. I didn't make the association the first time he had the snack, but it was evident with the second snack and I immediately threw them out. When I told my sister, a similar less severe case occurred with her dog. I looked at the package label and it says "Always monitor your pet while treating"..I have never seen this on any pet treat package before and we've had pets for the past 50 years. I wrote to Del Monte and in nearly a week have not recieved a response. This is not a safe product.	12	Years	Terrier - Cairn	Dog	17	Pound

I also fed my indoor cat. My neighbor found one of the outdoor cats dead this morning. The other outdoor cats are acting weird(not their usual selves). My indoor cat is also acting off. She is usually extremely demonstrative and "talkative". She is just sitting curled up and not moving around to much or trying to get my attention. My gut tells me that something is wrong with the food and I should have paid attention when they refused to eat it. I want to have the food tested. Walmart was of no help and the manager told me that "cats are just very picky". I would also like to find out how my cat died. Thank you.

We stopped feeding it to them by Friday 11/28/14, and put them on a rice and chicken broth diet. After 2-3 days on the rice/fresh chicken diet, the dogs began to improve. However, (b) (6) steadily became worse and passed away. Looking to find a cause, I turned to the internet where I found many others who were complaining about this food as well as Purina's dog foods which were killing or harming their pets. Most of the pets that I read about had the same symptoms. Seems to everyone that there was a bad batch of food causing death and harm, most likely due to bacteria in the food or mold.	4	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	8	Pound

EON-188166	11/22/2014 19:12	Nutro max Natural Chicken Meal and rice recipe large breed adult.	I have been feeding my girl Nutro Max Large breed dry dog food along with mixed wet can (same brand) since I had gotten her at approx. 12 months of age. She has never been to the vet for anything other than wellness checkups! Happy, healthy very active since day one. We walk 45 min to 1 hour every DAY. She also has a huge yard to run in. Sat, October 4th opened a new bag of dry food and fed her in the morning, she was observed eating grass. Never has she ate grass, I have a full view of her at all times from house. Huge amounts of grass so I brought her in. Cried and whined to go back out vomited up grass and foamy yellow bile. Still sick lethargic fed her evening meal. The worst night ever with my dog since getting her, never seen her this way. Crying whining going in circles trying to nip off pieces of carpet and a sock. She has never eaten or destroyed any article ever in our home. Never. She was licking her tongue out gagging and chocking. Let her in back yard, vomiting, whining, eating all the grass she could get out. The amount of grass in her tummy coming out was horrifying large. Off and on sleeping, whining circling pacing the floor. 3:45 AM walked her outside extremely sick, vomiting bile, mushy yellow potty. She always has firm stool!!!! By the way she is never fed table scraps, EVER. Seemed liked she had a fever, very warm to touch. Now I am worried, not the same dog. This went on for weeks! Long, bad nights up and down sick. Worried at 4:30 am, light goes off. It must be the food! I look up the dog food to see if any recalls, no recalls but long list of people online on different links of dogs with exactly the same symptoms. Long story short- This dog had vomiting yellow/green foamy bile, gurgling stomach I could hear from across the room, lethargy, no energy, fever, bad foul breath, wake up from full sleep crying and whining to go out all night long and very soft yellow green stool. Horrified I called vet next morning, made appointment and pulled dog food IMMEDIATELY. Plain white rice and bland boiled chicken. What do you know, No vomiting no soft stool sleeps thru the night. Did not bring to vet because she stopped all symptoms. Returned dog food to Petsmart and got refund. She has been on the bland food for one week just to make sure symptoms are all gone for good.	5	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	50	Pound

My vet wasn't opened when it happened so I was hoping it would pass or I would need to take him in to the emergency to play it safe. When I went to open the third can it was bubbly and foul smelling. I tossed that and opened the fourth which was just as bad. I opened the fifth and it seemed fine, no bubbling or foul smell. It must have been on its end for it made my kitten sick again. So I called a vet and they confirmed that the spoiled food would cause that throwing up etc. I contacted FAnCy Feast as I am furious. I understand things happen but it potentially could have killed my kitten and I bought the cans from Meijer in (b) (6) I have not yet contacted them as I was told they don't take complaints like this seriously. This should be recalled and something should be done to figure out why these cans that are marked good until October 2016 are spoiled and making my cat ill.

EON-187901	11/20/2014 21:00	Cadet Premium quality dog treats real meat snack gourmet 6" braided piggy stick 4 pack	ON 11/06/14, I received from Pet Life pet store, an 80 dollar gift prize. Inside was various treats, one of which was a 3 piece, "pizzle stick." or pig penis. Over the course of 7 days, Precious ate 2 1/2 of these sticks. They were made by Cadet, product of Germany, distributed by IMS pet Industries, Inc. Wood-Ridge NJ. On day 8, my dog was lethargic, not her usual peppy self, running around like a greyhound, in a Chihuahua body. Then she didn't want to eat, which is incredibly strange, because she's the first at the bowl in the morning. I am taking her to ER Vet, on 11/21/14, where I will update results. The pizzle, will be diagnosed at a local toxicologist, or chemist, where I can obtain independent results. All information is intact, and there is reasonable doubt for me to believe that IMS, DIDNT know anything about its supplier, or the source locations for its "Real meat snack, gourmet product."	3	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	8	Pound

EON-187719	11/20/2014 2:44	Dingo American Made Market Cuts Chicken Jerky	(b) (6) became lethargic and stopped eating and drinking. She developed polyuria/polydipsia and had occasional episodes of vomiting. Initial labwork on 10/8 showed elevations in the ALT, GGT and albumin. No significant abnormalities were noted on abdominal radiographs. She was treated symptomatically with SQ fluids and Cerenia. She did not respond to treatment and an ultrasound was done which also did not show any definite abnormalities. Labwork was repeated on 10/13/14 and at this time the ALT was normal but the GGT was still elevated as was the albumin. The potassium was low. Supportive care was continued with IV fluids, Cerenia and Buprenex. On 10/17 she still was not eating and at this time the ALT and GGT were normal. The albumin was still elevated and the WBC was now slightly elevated. There was 3+ protein, 4+ RBCs, 4+ ketones and 2+ glucose on her urinalysis (blood glucose was normal). Treatment with IV fluids was continued and Penicillin was added to the treatment while waiting for the results of the Lepto titers. Lepto titers were all negative and a baseline cortisol was elevated at 14.9. In addition to the supportive care mentioned before she was given IV dexamethasone. She did finally start eating a little around 10/22 and continued to gradually improve over the next week.	5.5	Years	Shih Tzu	Dog	14.2	Pound

EON-186828	11/16/2014 18:36	Beniful Healthy Weight	On 11/13/14, my dog started vomiting and urinating and defecating non stop. My dog was also severely itching and displayed swollen eyes. This continued for 2 days, with his last vomiting incident on 11/15 at 11 am. Once my dog emptied his stomach of all dog food, he then vomited yellow stomach acids. He was very restless and could not sleep. He paced the house constantly and begged to use the restroom often day and night. My dog was in pain and clearly discomforted. During this period he refused water and food of any kind. We were finally able to get him to drink and eat a different dog food on 11/15. During this crisis, i examined all circumstances trying to determine what could have caused these symptoms. My dog was not given anything else to eat besides his beniful healthy weight dog food. I am a stay at home mom so I am with my dog all day and night to know what he eats. He was not given any other food besides dog food. My dog has limited contact outside the home and does not go outside without me, so he did not eat anything outside, was not bitten by any other dog or animal, nor was he exposed to any other dogs/animals. He also did not eat anything else besides food such as toys etc. My dog is not a chewer and has never shewed up toys or socks etc so I knew nothing was caught in his stomach. On 11/14 we gave him a benadryl to help with his allergic reaction symptoms. This seems to have helped. The only thing that could have caused this reaction was his dog food. When I tried to offer him dog food during this crisis, he refused his beniful. On 11/15 we offered him a wet dog food of another brand and he finally ate. On 11/15 I begun to do some research to see if any other dog owners were complaining about beniful products when I saw that many pet owners are complaining of the exact same symptoms and have filed numerous complaints about this product. Despite these complaints, beniful has refused a pet dog food recall. At this time, my dog is feeling much better and is back to normal.	9	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	44	Pound

EON-186723	11/15/2014 11:44	Friskies (various varieties of meat types and various forms- meaty bits shredded and pate).	About a month ago, my 17 year old cat started having serious kidney issues, starting with a uti. When they ran blood tests to determine what was wrong, they found that not only she had a uti, she had elevated BUN and creatine levels indicating decreased kidney function/beginning stages of kidney failure. She was doing well before that. She has been eating canned Friskies for quite a while now, and in the past couple of months I've noticed changes in the texture and smell of the food. I am concerned that there are contaminants in the food that have made my cat sick. My other 3 cats have eaten small quantities of the same food, but their diet is mostly dry kibble. They aren't as picky as my oldest cat, but I've noticed that even they mostly lick the gravy and leave the weird meat-like chunks behind. The "meaty bits" don't even look like real meat anymore. They look like weird pieces of clay and no matter whether it's beef, fish, chicken, once the cats lick the gravy, the bits all look the same, instead of looking like real piece of beef, fish, or chicken.	17	Years	Domestic Longhair	Cat	6	Kilogram

EON-186648	11/14/2014 12:28	Smokehouse Brand Pet Products Duck Breast Tenders	I tried these in June during a beach vacation (a few a week for a 30-lb dog) and my dog became ill with lethargy, increased thirst, and inappropriate urination. I stopped giving the treats and his symptoms resolved. I attributed his illness to being away from home, and to his age. I tried them again last month for a few weeks, and he again became ill with the same symptoms, which progressed to inability to hold his legs under him, and he was visibly thinner. These symptoms evolved over about 2 weeks. We took him to the vet on Monday 11/10. The vet says he has arthritis which on x-rays is unchanged since April, and he now has some mild kidney damage which is new since April (protein in his urine). After stopping the treats, he is getting better again quickly. I realize that treating his arthritis may explain much of his improvement, but it would not explain the excessive thirst he developed when he was getting the treats and for a time after, nor would treating his arthritis with Rimadyl explain why the excessive thirst resolved. I wrote the company and got the brush-off. They didn't even ask me for the lot number or where I purchased them.	14	Years	Crossbred Canine/dog	Dog	30	Pound

The product number is 41061K 03 13:04 One of my small dogs has been experiencing unidentifiable respiratory and other symptoms lately. I don't know whether this is problematic, but I do know there needs to be a recall and check of what is happening before animals get sickened by this product. The packages are undamaged and the store has them displayed nicely, with no indication of poor handling. I have reported to the company, but there was never any indication of any desire to see the product or to follow except by notification. There was much verbal "assurance" that they have safe plants, despite the obvious need to check on that regarding this product. If possible, I would like to know what is done to follow up on this product's problem. I will be returning this product to the store, but I will keep a few milk bones for awhile, in case you want to follow up on this product.

Anyway - i gave my dog a few peices of the milk bone trail mix as a treat. I gave her a few the next day. The next evening i noticed irregular stool. I stopped given the trail mix to her and put it in the back of the pantry thinking maybe it hurt her belly. a few weeks later a saw it and thought i would start giving it to her again but looked on the back to make sure it wasn't real chocolate. The mix looks like chocolate but says that it is beef, the little milk bones say it is oats and the little orange peices say that they are sweet potatoe. So i figured okay it should be fine and gave it to her again. that was on 10/29/14. I gave her a few more peices on 10/30/14. In the evening of 10/30/14 i noticed her stool beginning to become loose and looked once again irregular. The next day 10/31/14 my husband and i were sitting on the couch and my dog was on the opposite couch looking out the window and she began to arch her back and scratch with her foot(paw). My husband thought that she had her foot (paw) stuck and i ran to her and thought immediately she was having a seziure or that she was loosing use of her hind legs. She was trembling and shaking trying to get up and made her way to the carpet- shaking and trembling with limited use of her legs. she again attempted moving to another area of the carpet shaking trembling with limited use of her legs. the incident lasted approximately 2 - 3 minutes and she then got up and was able to walk. EON-185407	11/3/2014 19:44	Exclusive Large Breed Puppy Chicken & Brown Rice Formula	We purchased an 18 pound bag of Exclusive brand large breed puppy food on Tuesday October 21st. On Wednesday October 22nd at 7:30 am I opened the bag, and fed (b) (6) his normal 3 Cups of food, which he ate all of. At 3:30pm he started to vomit, and continued to vomit until about 7:00pm. He was not interested in drinking water, or eating any more food. I immediately called our vet to ask what i should do. They recommended softening his food, that perhaps he ate his food too fast and it just didnt agree with his stomach. I tried then softening his food with just water, and he still wouldnt touch it. He seemed very lethargic and just seemed not himself. Thursday October 23rd at 8:00 am i tried again to feed him, and he still wouldnt eat any of it. I decided to call the vet again with concern that he still didnt want to eat anything. They recommended I make an appointment to have blood drawn, to test his GI system. That afternoon i tried mixing 1 cup of food with chicken broth, very hesitantly he ate just a few bites of it and wasnt interested anymore. Friday I mixed 1 cup of the dry food with 1/2 cup of soft canned food, which he ate about half of. I continued to do that through Sunday. Monday morning at 8:20am he went in to (b) (6) to have his blood drawn ($232.50 later). On Tuesday October 28th, i stopped at the original place of purchase to buy more soft food, and simply asked the clerk if she had heard anything on possibly having bad dog food. She asked what kind of food, and i told her it was the Exclusive large breed puppy food in the 18 pound bag, and she told me i was the second person that day that had asked her about that same thing. She had one 18 pound bag left on the shelf, which she pulled off the shelf, and compared batch numbers to the 8 pound bag, which were different numbers. She gave me the small bag, asked me to take it home and see if he would eat it, and to bag up the old stuff and bring it back for a refund. I unfortunately didnt keep the bag from the "bad food." I brought the food home, compared smells, and it was a HUGE difference,	5	Months	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	48	Pound and he gobbled it right up like the poor guy had been starving! The old food i noticed didnt smell right about 3 days into making the poor puppy eat it, but im also pregnant and thought maybe it was just my nose. He now appears to be feeling better, and almost right back to his old self again since taking him off of the bad food on Tuesday October 28th. I contacted PMI Nutrition about the issue on Thursday October 30th, and reported the incident. I was contacted then on Friday and asked to set aside 2-3 pounds of the bad food, and that they would send me a label to send it back to their lab to have it tested. I took the rest of the food back to the retailer today and was told that they too had been contacted by PMI about the issue. I am now waiting on the label to send the food back to them to have it tested. I was contacted today by my vet and she informed me that (b) (6) results all looked normal, except that he had what seemed to be irritation in his stomach and upper intestine, which she was going to look into a little further and have a specialist view the numbers, i did inform her about the dog food issue.

EON-184883	10/30/2014 11:08	Berkley Jensen All Natural Large Dog Biscuits	In March and May 2014 my Wife and I purchased 9 boxes of Berkley &amp; Jensen Large Dog Biscuits from BJs Wholesale Club, (b) (6) (b) (6) 44130 Phone:( (b) (6). By about July we started noticing moths in the house. By September we suspected that there may have been a contaminated box of biscuits. By October we had confirmed that the moths were originating from the boxes of dog biscuits. We had bought same biscuits before from same BJs last year with no issues. Biscuits were stored in our climate controlled home in a cool environment. There were no other biscuits from other manufacturers stored by the biscuits. October 16 I contacted BJs with the complaint. October 19 BJs responds with a $15 gift card offer for the moth infestation. I again complain and BJs claims that they turned the complaint over to the store manager. He never calls. I get a call from BJs quality Karen Flattery (774-512-6458) on October 10/29/14. She states that they never received such a complaint from any of their stores and attempts to blame "pantry pests" and that states that she is in quality assurance. I inform her that I also have an extensive quality assurance background in ISO 9001, aerospace and medical device. She says this is a food issue and presents herself as an expert. I have a biology degree and state that these moths are not contiguous to the area. The biscuits are manufactured in (b) (6). Mrs. Flattery states that there is no way that the moths could have been in boxes since (b) (6) is cold. My later investigation reveals that she does not have a background or degree in Biology or food science but rather a BA in Psychology, 4 years with BJs and just prior experience with Caldwell banker. I inform her that we quarantined the boxes with sturdy closed garbage bags and that at least one bag already had moths and larvae coming out of the box. She offers a $50 gift card which quite obviously does not cover the cost of all the reaming unopened product, much less the opened product and the cost of an exterminator. Mrs. Flattery argues that the boxes are not air

			tight. I argue that the moths are originating from the boxes and are at the bottom of the boxes. Since BJs is arguing the complaint I tell Mrs. Flattery that I will need to notify the FDA since this obviously involves foodstuffs, albeit pet food. She states that BJs would then step back and let the FDA take over. She does state that BJs will notify the vendor so that they can verify their retained samples. Shelf life on one box that I looked at was April 6, 2014 12:44 and the other was Jan 8, 2015 20:29. Mrs. Flattery said that I should get a pantry pest trap. BJs did not mention hiring a qualified exterminator. We now have Canadian moths in the house. I have entered July 24th, 2014 as an approximate date when we first noticed the moths. Regardless .... larvae contaminated pet food should be recalled and the customer compensated for the product and cleanup. BJs statement that they've never had this type of complaint before is not accurate ... they have our complaint. The attempts to discredit our complaint are beyond reproach. Note that the container contains conflicting information. On the top it states "Made in Canada" and yet on the bottom it states "Made in the USA". Misleading packaging. Mrs. Flattery also stated that we should put the boxes outside the house. However in my opinion this would introduce evidence contamination as well as violate the store in cool dry place manufacturer instructions. I made a Video as well ... (b) (6)

Then on the morning of (b) (6) I feed them again the same food. With in about an hours time both dogs had vomited up the food. Otherwise seemed normal. Unfortunately I needed to leave my home, so I placed one pup (b) (6) age 2) in her kennel and the other (b) (6) age 7) in our spare bathroom. This bathroom holds no chemicals or cleaning supplies. I was gone for approximately 2 hours and came how to find (b) (6) had vomited and evacuated herself to death. I rushed her to the vet, but it was too late. (b) (6) appears unaffected, at this time, after she vomited. I cannot validate the food caused this issue 100%. But my concern that bag of dog food is the cause and have called both my local Petsmart and Blue Buffalo mfg. With Blue Buffalo they gave me a claim # 252363. I am not seeking nor want any compensation from anyone. I just want to address what I believe to be a serious concern with the food. EON-183983	10/22/2014 22:24	Phoenix Foraging Rolls UnPellet	I have been referred to the website of this company a number of time, Phoenix Foraging Rolls LLC (www.PhoenixForagingRolls.com) to purchase their products. Upon arriving I investigated their products but found no guaranteed analysis. I submitted a request asking for a guaranteed analysis and asking if they are licensed in their state to manufacture and sell; I received no response. I contacted their Dept of Agriculture and learned that they are not licensed to manufacture pet foods in their state. I did, however find that they are a legal LLC in the state of (b) (6). I am concerned that this company is manufacturing and selling pet foods that are not laboratory tested for a guaranteed analysis. I have heard of this company many years back, as far as 2008, but I have never purchased from them. I finally decided to purchase from them only to learn that they are not licensed, and probably do not test their foods. I am gravely concerned for the health of the pets that consume their products.

Upon closer observation I realized it was a bug! It looks like a small cockroach. This is DISGUSTING and unacceptable! I am so thankful this was the first treat I took out of the bag. I am thankful I noticed this and no one else bought the package and fed it to their dog without noticing. I think other dog owners should be aware of this problem. I think your agency should do a thorough inspection of the facility in which these treats are made. I have already emailed Plato, Marshalls and BarkBox about this problem. I know other stores sell these products also. This is very concerning and upsetting me.

Upon giving them dog food from a new 12 pack of cans, the dogs did not seem to want the food. I tried different cans from the new 12 pack and they did not seem to want those either. Within a few days after they ate the food from the new 12 pack, both dogs became violently ill. Both were throwing up. One had black bloody stools and the other had mucously loose stools. Their gums were pale. Their heart rate and breathing were very fast. (I was trained as an ICU nurse.) They became extremely lethargic. I took them to the vet who diagnosed one with severe dehydration. One Maltese was diagnosed with pancreatitis and hepatitis and was admitted to the vet's ICU on multiple IV antibiotics. I thought that was unusual but did not have another food at the time, so after a period of time, they did end up eating it. Both cats got quite lethargic and wanted to sleep all day and this was unusual. My one cat that seemed to eat more of it than the other got even more lethargic. 			On presentation, (b) (6) was quiet, alert, and responsive. He had tacky mucous membranes but his physical exam was otherwise unremarkable. Based on referring diagnostics, (b) (6) had normoglycemic glucosuria. The suspicion for potential acquired renal tubular acidosis/fanconi-like syndrome and potential progression to acute renal failure was discussed with the owner (T (b) (6) has documented exposure to two potential toxins that can lead to fanconi-like syndrome -jerky treats and lysol solution). A second blood glucose and urine glucose was collected to confirm persistent glucosuria, and an EPOC showed evidence of mild hypokalemia. We discussed with the owner that additional testing would be required to confirm Fanconi's syndrome, and that prognosis would depend on the level of damage within his kidneys and his potential progression into renal failure. Overnight hospitalization on IV fluid therapy was recommended to the owner along with monitoring of his renal values, glucose levels, and acid-base balance. (b) (6) will be transferred to critical care for continued supportive care and additional diagnostics as indicated.

EON-181958	10/6/2014 15:00	Royal Canin Veterinary Diet Canine Early Cardiac	(b) (6) started a veterinary diet for heart heath as requested by her veterinarian. For the first week she had canned Hills Prescription diet. When that ran out she started Royal Canin Early Cardiac Dry food. The same day she seemed listless and tired. The following day she had problems walking. Her hind legs were weak and she didn't want to move much. After taking my son to a doctor appt we came home and (b) (6) still hadn't moved from the spot she was in on the carpet 2 hours prior. I took her to her vet. He asked me about her symptoms and that's when I remembered she'd vomited up grass that morning, twice. Her temperature was very low, 98.6. He thought she was dehydrated and kept her that day, gave her fluids and she was discharged that evening. Her condition was about the same. She was unsteady and not moving much. I helped her onto my bed and she stayed there turning once all night. The following morning she got down to urinate, I noticed it was clear. She drank a lot of water and went back to her spot on the rug. At this time I tried to feed her and she refused food. She appeared disoriented and in pain to me. I thought she was getting worse and took her back to her vet. During her check up her temperature was still 98.6. Her vet checked her gums, they were white. He admitted her and immediately ran blood tests and consulted with a pathologist telling me this was a serious situation, that (b) (6) was loosing blood and if I knew if she ate anything or was exposed to anything she shouldn't be. The only thing she had eaten in the past 3 days was the Royal Canin dog food. I was careful to keep her on her diet to control her blood pressure. (b) (6) condition did not improve at the vet's. He gave her fluids, pain medications and cortisone for support. He told me after consulting with the pathologist about her symptom they thought something was attacking her immune system. Toxin ingestion by anti-freeze, ingestion of diseased water, atrial mass rupture, addison's disease. The same day I decided to use the left over food to give to my other dog, (b) (6) 13 years old, no health problems, not taking medications for anything. Wednesday evening I fed him his usual amount, about 1 1/2 cups with no other food. I continued feeding him the Royal Canin Early Cardiac through thursday and friday. Friday evening after feeding him I noticed he was not playing like usual, he wasn't moving much and laid at my feet wherever I went. At approx 10pm that same night he came into my bedroom and laid on floor. He was listless and drooling. I knew he was sick. I went outside and there was vomit on the patio, it was partially digested food. The next day was Saturady (b) (6), (b) (6) was still not behaving normally that morning and followed me around continually. My husband suggested there was something wrong with the Royal Canin Food and I agreed. I stopped feeding (b) (6) the Royal Canin and gave him his regular food which is walmart brand. EON-181436	9/30/2014 11:00	Pedigree Puppy Targeted Nutrition Chicken Flavor	On 9/18/14, we purchased a small bag of Pedigree puppy food at (b) (6) in (b) (6). We did not save the bag, so do not know the UPC or manufacturing code. On 9/20/14, we began feeding the food to our dog, a 65 lb lab/pit mix. We noticed he was eating less and less of the food, and basically was eating one bowl per day instead of his usual two. Within a few days, he was eating even less, almost to the point of 1/2 bowl per day. Yesterday (9/29/14), he began eating a new bowl of the food, and ate almost the full bowl, which we assumed was because he was hungry after his appetite tapered off for a few days. Within an hour or so, he was vomiting, and within a three hour time period, he had vomited 5 times. At this point, we suspected something was wrong with the food, and so, we smelled it. It has a very pungent odor that smells like a chemical, but not one that I have ever smelled before. We've saved the bag of food in hopes that your company will analyze it and determine if it went bad (perhaps because of age, exposure to heat during shipping, etc.) or alternatively, if it is tainted because of some chemical exposure in your plant, in transit to the store, or at the store itself. This was a very frightening experience, and it shakes our confidence in the Pedigree brand and all Mars Petcare products. Our puppy is a cherished member of our family. He did not deserve to get sick from his food, and we never would have imagined having to smell his dry food before feeding him.	14	Months	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	65	Pound

This continued until our other, much younger, cat also got sick, after just starting the food, approximately a week later (I am guessing about the 17th or 18th). At that time, we abruptly switched cat foods, and within a day or so, both cats were completely returned to full health.	16	Years	Unknown	Cat	8	Pound
EON-181242	9/28/2014 17:48	Waggin' Train	(b) (6) was given chicken waggin train every day, several times a day for treats. At 8 1/2 yrs old she was diagnosed with bladder cancer. She was given a pill medication that acted like chemo. It was a human arthritis medication. She was on this pill for a year. In October 2012 she started actual IV chemo treatments. She died in (b) (6) of (b) (6). She had the chicken treats for years. Since the product came out. Which I don't know the specific date - but it was over 5 years. She was my child and I did not protect her. When it was reported at first not to give your pets these treats I continued for two years thinking my local pet store would not still carry these. Or even Sam's club if they were unsafe. I was told by my vet to not give them to her any more when she started the doggie chemo and I stopped. Two of my dogs had cancer from this product.	10	Years	Terrier - Fox Smooth	Dog	18	Pound

EON-181125	9/26/2014 11:24	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Large Breed Adult Chicken and Brown Rice Recipe	We started a new bag of Blue Buffalo Dog food and almost immediately our dog started having accidents in the house (which she has never had before, even as a puppy), didn't want to eat her food, started drinking lots of water, she was losing weight, and acting different so we took her to the vet. She had lost weight and was in kidney failure. We've taken her to the vet several times in the last month. We finally started researching the food and found out that there had been a recall in 2010 for high levels of vitamin D that made dogs sick. There is a lot of anecdotal evidence on various pet food websites that people are again having problems with the food causing kidney problems in their dogs. We immediately switched her to another brand (Tuesday, September 23, 2014). She is eating again and has more energy and has not had any accidents in the house. We will take her back to the vet in a couple weeks and have her blood and urine retested. Normal weight of dog is between 99 lbs (winters) to 95 lbs (summers). Dog was 95 lbs on 6/16/14. Starting feeding new bag of food around August 15, 2014. On 9/9/14 she was 89 lbs. and on 9/23/14 she was 83 lbs. Urinalysis on 8/30/14 during vet ER visit showed Specific Gravity of 1.009. The vet has completed x-rays, blood work, stool work, and urine analysis and refused to changed the product stating that this is the best product for reducing urinary crystals which causes a locked urethra. We simply cannot use this food any longer. The puking is getting worse and we have gone through one bag of the largest size and have recently thrown away another bag. We also just adopted a dog who ate some of the cat food on several occasions (not intentional) and each time also violently vomited the food. This company has done NOTHING to listen to the complaints.	12	Years	Domestic Mediumhair	Cat	17	Pound
EON-180826	9/22/2014 12:40	Beneful Dog Food, Purina Small Bites	I am reporting a concern regarding the food product Purina Dog food. Six months ago I purchased Purina Beneful dog food and fed my, at the time 5 year old, Standard Poodle. (b) (6), my poodle, has never had anything less than healthy medical records prior to the seizure that occurred after consuming Purina Beneful dog food. After the seizure, (b) (6) was fed Pedigree dog food until this past week. I purchased and fed (b) (6) Purina Small Bites this past week and within 48 hours he had one full seizure and I was able to prevent 3 more onset seizures. Hands down, the scariest experience I have had with my dog, and have cooked my dog chicken and rice since. I'm asking that this product be pulled and fixed because after researching, I am obviously not the only victim of Purina Poisonous Product being sold on shelves to innocent people who, without knowing, feed their defenseless pets.	5	Years	Poodle - Medium size	Dog	27	Pound

EON-180780	9/21/2014 15:40	Kirkland Nature's Domain Salmon Meal & Sweet Potato Formula for Dogs	We began feeding our 3-year-old healthy labrador retriever Costco's "Kirkland Nature's Domain Salmon &amp; Sweet Potato Formula for Dogs" dry dog food. This was the second bag we've given her. She had no issue with the last bag. In about a week she began having diarrhea. After three days she would not eat, and her stools had blood and mucous in them, which got worse each day. On the third day with diarrhea she also started vomiting. We took her to our veterinarian who did a stool analysis and physical work-up. Our dog had no noticeable medical problems and the stool analysis showed no parasites or intestinal abnormalities. We put her on cooked chicken and rice and she improved. He stools hardened and her appetite was fine. We slowly introduce the Kirkland food again. She started getting the diarrhea after the second day it was reintroduced. We went back to just chicken and rice again. When she improved this time, we put her back on the Kirkland dog food. After the second day, again she began to have bloody diarrhea and would not eat the Kirkland Nature's Domain Food. This time we put her back on chicken and rice for an entire week before starting her on the Nature's Domain. She againgot diarrhea and stopped eating. We went back to chicken and rice, and started her on a previous brand of Dog Food she had done well on, "Taste of the Wild". It has now been a week on a different dry dog food and she is fine, and her stools are normal again. I still have 2/3's of the 35-lb. bag of the Kirkland "Nature's Domain" food. It seems obvious after three tries with this food that resulted in bloody diarrhea and loss of appetite that it is the problem. The new brand she is on has given her no problems.	3	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	60	Pound

EON-180763	9/20/2014 21:12	Beefeaters Sweet Potato Fries	Dog was in his usual state of happiness that morning. I usually give him one or 2 sweet potato treats in the morning. He'll bark until he gets one! I had just purchased a DIFFERENT brand than my usual. This new brand I purchased was BEEFEATERS and I had just opened the bag that same morning. The incident happened the very FIRST TIME I gave him BEEFEATERS brand sweet potato "fries". I gave him 2. He only ate ONE, which looking back was odd. He usually eats both. I assume now, that the first one tasted bad. I work from home and he is always in the room with me (fenced off from the rest of the house) so I can honestly say I witnessed everything that happened and it's not like he got into poison or anything dangerous that might be in another part of the house. I would say the adverse effects started rather quickly--within hours. He seemed uncomfortable--lethargic, walking slowly but yet getting up and laying down in odd places, sitting in a corner, sitting under my desk--which he normally doesn't do. His tail was down. I thought maybe he had a stomach ache--although he had not eaten any food that day other than the BEEFEATER"S treats. By 4 pm he had vomited. By 5 pm I made an emergency appt at the vet. At the vets, he had bloody diarrhea and I mean, a major amount of blood, not just blood tinged. They said he was already becoming dehydrated and gave him intravenous fluid and 2 meds to take. Within a few days, he was recovering and is now fine--as far as I can tell. If any long-term damage was done, I dont know. I can only assume these new treats caused this as the symptoms came soon after and that was the only change in diet. I am angry that these products are allowed to remain on the shelves.	2.5	Years	Maltese	Dog	8	Pound

I looked at the partially destroyed chew bone and found that the interior contained some black moldy areas. At that point I asked my wife to come into my office and look at it, and she also began to cough. A few minutes after discarding the bone, my coughing stopped completely.

On 7/10/2014 we purchased a 6.6 lb. bag of Royal Canin Urinary SO. Our dog was in good health except for a slight heart murmur and also had an epulis on his gum. He did not want to eat this bag of food, which was highly unusual because he had always eaten it before without any problems. We coaxed him into eating the food with a little bit of boiled chicken. We continued this routine for several weeks. Then he no longer would eat the food, only the All Natural Perdue Chicken that we purchased and cooked. Last week he began vomiting. We took him to the vet (b) (6). The blood work showed that he was in renal failure. We immediately took him to the local (b) (6) (b) (6) where they proceeded to flush his kidneys. I have contacted the manufacturer and our Vet regarding this food. Both claim that they have had no other reports of illness or death. Hours after giving them to her, she immediately had to poop two different times. I assumed this was from the high protein in the treats, and didn't think anything of it. The next morning she seemed fine, just a little lethargic, and I left her home with a few of her new favorite Chicken Jerky treats while I went to work. I came home from work and noticed she had diarrhea in the house. Again, I didn't make the connection that her upset stomach could be from her new treats, and gave her a few more later that night while I taught her new tricks. The next morning, she went to the bathroom outside and her stool was noticeably lighter. Being a new dog owner, I still didn't make the connection. When I came home from work that day, she had diarrhea everywhere, blood clots, blood streaks, and was much weaker than normal. It then hit me that her treats were the cause of her becoming sick, and I immediately took her to the vet. The vet ran a blood test on her and took stool samples. She's never had any problems with her liver enzymes before she started eating these treats, and the vet came back to tell me she had very high ALP and ALT levels and recommended hospitalization with fluid therapy. I couldn't stand the fact of leaving her alone for the night, so I brought her home with me and am giving her prescribed medicine and the new food her vet prescribed. Over the course of the next 24 hours he was losing the ability to use his back legs. He is an older dog so I thought it might be due to hip problems. I noticed he wasn't eating and getting lethargic, but he did manage to drink some water. On the night of (b) (6) he was trying to stand up and he had a release of diarrhea. I was planning to bring him to the vet in the morning but he started convulsing and gagging in the early morning and passed away.	14	Years	American Pit Bull Terrier	Dog	50	Pound
EON-179989	9/13/2014 15:52	Milk-Bone MaroSnacks - Small	I bought a box of Milk Bone marrow bone treats for small dogs and when I opened it, it was full of maggots. I believe I bought it from CVS but this seems to be a problem with the manufacturer. It was a sealed box. I had not bought it that long ago, maybe a week or so. I may have purchased it from Shaw's or Stop and Shop, but I believe I purchased it from either CVS or Rite Aid on (b) (6) in (b) (6) or (b) (6) (town line nearby -- CVS is in (b) (6) and Rite Aid is in (b) (6) but same street). Did not keep the box to see a #. I was horrified and tossed it. I threw out all the food on my pantry shelf even though it was in cans, etc. I know it was from that box because it was crawling with maggots when I opened it and it was a sealed box. The milk bones were eaten pretty much and a mess.

We took him to the vet and they tried to flush him out but were unable. After 4 days we had to put (b) (6) to sleep. We assumed it was just bad luck. 2 days later our 12 year old cat started peeing around the house. EON-179896	9/11/2014 17:51	Greenies Petite Original Dental Chew	I have prepared my own dog food for approximately 3 years and feed from the same stored bowl on to separate plates it to both (b) (6) and my other dog. I provide them with Greenies treats on occasion. I have done this for quite some time. Because they are distinctly different sized dogs, I give them Greenies from two different bags. I recently started a new bag for (b) (6), and within a few days he came down with a terrible case of C. Diff. After a vet visits, testing and medications for my severely ill dog, it was determined he likely ate something contaminated. He was off Greenies for approximately 3 weeks. Upon receiving one greenie this week, within 2 days he came down with C. Diff again. I contacted Greenies (Nutro) and they said the only thing they do is to track the codes on the bag and they can have their Vet talk to my vet to discuss the situation. My expectation is to rid them of responsibility. I was hung up on when I insisted that they test the bag of the remaining greenies. I called back and spoke to a manager. She told me that they as a policy they do not test products that have left their facility because they cannot control what happened outside of their facility. I can understand that approach to some extent, but I feel they have the obligation to test products, which I am willing to send on my own dime! I don't want anyone else to ever have to go through this!!! I don't trust this corporation will issue a recall if there are enough consumers who complain, and I'd like to get it on record that I highly suspect they are the issue!	15	Years	Spitz - American Eskimo Dog	Dog	24	Pound

We didn't associate it with the food, but approximately one week after we started giving her the food, she was racing around the yard excitedly, when she collapsed and yelped 2 or three times. She died within a few minutes of her collapse despite our efforts to resuscitate her. Prior to this incidence she was a super healthy active dog. When I went home about 15 minutes to 1/2 hour later (b) (6) fell asleep on my lap. When I got up a few minutes later to get something, I put him on the floor and he couldn't stand up. It was as if he were coming out of anesthetics... he stood crouchingly and was very wobbly as though he had trouble keeping his balance. I thought maybe he was just too deep asleep, but this went on for about 1/2 hour. I took him outside and he still was having trouble. I brought him back inside and let him fall back asleep on my lap and in about a hour or two later, he was better and able to walk with a little bit of trouble. I couldn't call the vet as it was on a Saturday in the afternoon. The next day, Sunday, I went to my neighbor's house and told her what happened, and she said that her dog (b) (6) /German Shepherd mix/70 lbs/10 yo) also had breathing problems and was very lethargic and would not get up. She was afraid that (b) (6) was dying so that she was up several times during the night to check on her. EON-179265	9/4/2014 21:48	DreamBone	I purchased DreamBone due to their claim that it did not have rawhide and was made of chicken and vegetables. My service dog, (b) (6) began to become lethargic and stopped eating and having regular bowel movements. I took her to the vet when the gagging and vomiting started. They treated her and sent her home. A few days later, (b) (6) had stopped eating, stopped having bowel movements, vomited and had obvious nausea. She would lay down most of the day and was not her usual playful self. When trying to coach her to have a bowel movement, she started and I saw blood. I called the Vet and since they were closed, I took her to (b) (6) for them to examine her. She vomited in the exam room. They asked me if she had eaten a shoe or something that was white and rubbery in texture. I don't wear white shoes. The only things I had fed my dog was her original dog food, any dog food prescribed and the DreamBone. The doctor had to take an x-ray and saw that there was some sort of obstruction between her stomach and intestine. She prescribed medication and we were advised to bring her back the next morning. When I got home, I started brainstorming and picked up the DreamBone packaging. It was the same color and I decided to take it with me to the office visit. I took (b) (6) in the next morning and later I received a call from (b) (6). They took a sample of the DreamBone and the doctor stated that this product was what had caused the problems with my dog. They tried to dissolve it without success. The doctor confirmed that the contents of her stomach the day before were the same as the sample of the DreamBone they examined. They took another x-ray and saw that the object was no longer presenting a threat. They disposed of the product. I went to the Wal-Mart, where I had purchased the product, with my vet bill in hand and the receipt. They showed no concern of taking it off of the shelves or requesting more information.	10	Years	Terrier (unspecified)	Dog	30	Pound

EON-179069	9/3/2014 10:42	4Health Grain Free Whitefish & Potato Formula	we have for some years purchased 4 Health Grain Free dry dog food for our dogs after much research. In the past few months, we have noticed a lack of desire to eat in our dogs all diff breeds and ages, more than a few time they would periodically vomit. This was in conjunction with a visual change in the dog food. It used to be all disk shaped food, we preferred the white fish & potato. it stunk like fish but they loved it and their costs never looked better. Now unless yuo get a random bag of disks, they are all extruded, cut off chucks. I asked at two stores and they said they was no change in formula, only visual. I wish I was that stupid but I am not. It looks different the color is different and the smell is almost nothing barely even a dog food smell. I emailed Tractor Supply main office and they directed me to call the manufacturer. I called and left a message for the manufacture in PA, but no return call. We have had to stop feeding this until we find out more information now we are feeding a food that is twice the price. We really need answers. TOur Veterinarian said there is no medical reason for them to be ill or not want to eat

His stomach was gurgling a lot that first night, and he started pooping a lot. I wasn't too alarmed - figured it I'd given him too much to start with - and lowered the amount that I mixed in with his food over the next few days. On the fourth day, his poop started getting very soft, and we decided to stop using the food. We had only used 1 can of it, but had kept it refrigerated. The next day he became very lethargic, with diarrhea, and he threw up. Since it was (b) (6) weekend, we had to take him to the emergency pet clinic, where they hooked him up to an IV to keep him hydrated. They took blood tests and Xrays, but couldn't determine the cause. His stool became a very dark gooey liquid and metallic smelling and he started coughing up a bit of blood. Both of my dogs have been very sick the last 2 weeks on and off. They have been eating Nutro Natural choice for the past three years and also milkbone treats. We do not give them ANYTHING else. About three weeks ago we also gave them a chicken tender treat from Natural Value petfoods. We stopped giving them the chicken tender treats about two weeks ago when the problem started thinking this was the culprit of them being sick. however I strongly believe that Nutro Natural Choice has been making them very sick gradually since they been eating this food for about 3 years. age 9 almost died last year from acute gastritis (was eating nutro at the time also) nobody could figure out what happened to her. My dogs are indoors all the time and when we take them out we are constantly supervising them that they don't eat anything strange outdoors. The last two weeks have been crazy. started throwing up..first foam, then brown, finally bloody. I stopped giving her nutro for 2 days, vet recommenced pedialyte to clean her out and she was fine. Gave her the nutro again and the vomiting started again. I have decided to change her food completely as of today. As for she started throwing up a few days after . She's had diarrhea a bunch of times as well. None bloody. Yesterday she also developed hives all over her body, swollen face. I gave her benadryl 25 mg and it went away. By around 10 p.m. that evening he was really not feeling well. His condition continued to deteriorate rapidly. My husband felt strongly enough that he wasn't doing well he urged me to fly home and I did the next day. He went from being lethargic, to barely being able to walk, to completely being unable to walk. He started to bleed out of his penis, stopped eating and drinking and vomited when we did get him to drink water. He was also whining and clearly was in pain. When we took him to the vet on Monday his kidney tests came back as functioning normally. There was evidence of botulism and our vet was aware of similar cases with pets that had consumed chicken made in China. We started him on Loperamide and Metronidazole. On Tuesday he showed results of an enlarged prostate, so we started him on some antibiotics Enrofloxacin. Tuesday night he didn't sleep and whined the entire night. He lost control of his bowels, because he could not move. We got him back into the vet on Wednesday and by that time there was evidence that his kidney's were failing and we could not allow him to suffer any longer. The vet was going to euthanize him, and he passed after receiving the sedative. We would like to have these treats tested and do everything possible to prevent any other beloved pets from suffering in this way. We looked down in amazement because he never attempts to share a treat with him. We continued talking. He then pushed it to my foot. I picked it up and said, " You're not going to finish your bone?" He just stood there. I then proceeded to pet him. When I rubbed my hand under his chin I immediately felt a protrusion on the left side. It startled me by an amazing amount. I immediately said his jaw is broken to my own disbelief. I picked up the end piece to the bone. I tried to break it with my fingers to no avail. I went to our utility closet and got a hammer. I struck the end piece of the Bakery Bone with a steel hammer 5 times and it didn't break. At 2138 I called his Vet and informed her of what had occurred. After a couple days on bland diet I went back to nature's domain food. The lab had some bubbles and later she started getting sick all over again. I took her back to vet once I noticed she was not drinking water and nit keeping anything down... once my vet saw here he immediately wanted to do blood test. He said there is something bigger going on here. N We took labador home to wait for results and she was so wobbly and lethargic and could barley hold her self up. EON-178411	8/25/2014 18:27	Beggin' Thick Cut Maple Flavor, Unknown dry dog food	The dog came in as an urgent care case for not eating, lethargy, and difficulty walking in the hind end. Black stools were noted by the owner. The dog had not been seen by any vets in our practice for 1 year. On physical the only notable finding was mild ataxia that seemed to improve with movement and was not terribly inconsistent for a German Shepherd dog of her age, considering the muscular atrophy present. Routine blood-work was unremarkable, but free-catch urinalysis presented amorphous debris. Client funds were limited, so empirical treatment for a urinary tract infection and digestive upset/potential ulcers was instituted. The dog seemed to do better overnight, ate in the clinic, and was discharged, to be rechecked several days later. The dog returned earlier, now unable to walk. Neurologic exam did not indicate obvious loss of reflexes, normal Babinski reflex, no obvious pain on tail hike test. Radiographs were performed, lots of spondylosis in spine, chiropractic treatment was done and prednisone started in addition to tramadol, famotidine, and cephalexin previously prescribed. Dog was presented several days later for euthanasia. Client later heard about recall of chicken jerky, was concerned that it might be related to her dog's swift decline.	11	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	74	Pound

EON-178185	8/25/2014 0:21	Nature's Domain Salmon Meal & Sweet Potato, Nature's Domain Turkey Meal & Sweet Potato	Our dogs (3) were fed Nature's Domain Turkey grain free food. They began to lose interest in the food at the end of June. One dog (6 years old) ended up being diagnosed with liver failure and we had to put him down at the end of July. Since the remaining two labs wouldn't eat the food, we purchased a bag of the Nature's Domain Salmon and sweet potato to see if they would eat that. They ate some, but within a week our 4 year old lab (b) (6) wouldn't eat at all and began vomiting, was lethargic, and had diarrhea. We took her to our vet and they advised a bland diet and prescribed metronidazole. 3 days later she was still vomiting and wouldn't eat, so she went back to the vet. She had elevated liver and kidney enzymes and an enlarged liver. She stayed for 3 days at the vet on IV fluids and antibiotics as well as anti-nausea drugs. We got her back today (8/24/2014) with a guarded prognosis. She still does not have an appetite and will have to be re-checked in 2 weeks to see how her liver enzymes are doing. We eliminated the idea that the dogs got into a toxin as they are never outside unattended and are crated when we are not home. The only difference was the dog food. Our 2 year old lab also began vomiting and we immediately discontinued the food and he seems to be fine. We contacted Nature's Domain and have a case number. We also returned the food to Costco with a complaint. After seeing many complaints with similar symptoms, we wanted to make sure something official was on file with the FDA.	4	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	75	Pound

O brought him in for blood work because he had been ill earlier in the week. His blood work showed mild azotemia Creat-2.6, BUN-45, Phos elevated as well, and poor USG. No obvious polycystic kidney disease on in house ultrasound. Urine culture negative. Treated with 24 hour of IV fluids diuresis (2 times main), IV famotidine, and IV antibiotics (while culture was still pending). Great improvement after 24h of fluids (azotemia resolved) and released the next day. However after bing home for 24 hours pet stopped eating and started vomiting again. Recheck blood work on 8/19/14 showed worsening axotemia Creat-5, BUN-51. Hospitalized/medical boarding started on that day with aggressive SQ fluids because O can not afford further IV fluids diuresis. EON-178159	8/24/2014 15:03	Nature's Domain Salmon Meal & Sweet Potato	Hello, just wanted to inform you that I believe my dogs may have been affected by a bad batch of food. Both of my dogs have been on Natures Domain - Salmon/Sweet Potato for roughly 6 months, and shown no issues. I bought a bag around the end of July, shortly after feeding this to my dogs both (Vizsla and Redbone) began to stop eating. Food intake decreased by about 50% for my Vizsla, and 75% for my Redbone. Also the Redbone was lethargic with occasional vomiting and diahrea, lasting roughly 2 weeks. Took the Redbone to the vet on 8/23, labs were ok, x-ray showed no blockages but inflammation of the intestines, there was an overgrowth of bacteria in the fecal exam as well. I know this is not definitive in that it was caused by the food, however, with it happening simultaneously in both pets around the same time the new bag was given, I thought it would be wise to share with you.	1.5	Years	Coonhound - Redbone	Dog	81	Pound

EON-177979	8/22/2014 17:36	Blue Buffalo Chicken and Brown Rice Dry Dog Food	In July 2014, (b) (6) started vomiting yellow and brown vomit at night, and started to have diarrhea (7 on dog fecal chart). Took him to the vet who after test results came back verified that it was not due to obstruction or bacterial effects. Vet had previously put (b) (6) on anti-nausea anti-diarrhea drugs, but this had no effect. We then speculated it was the Blue Buffalo chicken and rice dry dog food, so as an experiment we took him off the food, replaced with cooked rice/ground beef/pumpkin. (b) (6) symptoms started to abate almost immediately, and the feces had improved to 5 on the dog fecal chart the very next day. After doing some searching on the internet, we found that www.consumeraffairs.com has many similar reports of pets on Blue Buffalo having similar problems, with extremely high complaint activity in July and August of 2014. We believe there is a problem with the food (either bad batch, or change in formula making animals sick, or China sourcing), and believe the company should issue a recall. We purchased the food from Petco on (b) (6). Feel free to contact me at the email address I have provided if I can be of further help.	2.5	Years	Greyhound	Dog	67	Pound

(b) (6) was losing weight, lethargic and suffering from diarrhea and vomiting. She also had no appetite to speak of. She took her to a different veterinary clinic and we are not sure exactly what tests were run then. O states that she purchases "Waggin Train" chicken jerky treats from Wal-mart and this started soon after she gave them to (b) (6). She also stated that she started feeling better later, but would only eat the chicken jerky and became sick again. There had been no radiographs performed at this point. She came to (b) (6) this week and her lab work revealed an elevated BUN (41, normal: 7-27); and Creatinine (3.5, norm: 0.5-1.8). Xrays revealed mild enlargement of the kidneys. Pet is still suffering from and being treated for vomiting, lethargy, and no appetite. EON-177219	8/19/2014 20:36	Blue Buffalo Life Protection Formula Chicken and Brown Rice Recipe	I actually had 3 dogs that were sickened. The one above was diagnosed with hemotological pancreatitis. Blood in pulverized stools and severe abdominal pain. This dog was on an IV for 5 days, with 2 overnight stays His weight was 16-17 pounds. My second dog was a female tibetan terrier that weighed 30 pounds, was 10.5 years old and was in good condition other than arthritis and taking thyroid medication. She was also fixed and was the daughter of my 12.5 year old tibetan Terrier. The second dog became lethargic the next evening after the first dog was hospitalized. By the time I woke in the morning her breathing was very labored, she gave out a horrible cry of pain and couldn't move. I picked her right up and went to the vet hospital. She passed away as soon as I turned to the office parking lot in my car. The third dog who is a lab mix, male, neutered approximately 3-4 years of age, approximately 60-65 pounds began to have tremors/seizure 2 days after the 10.5 year old died and I raced him to the hospital. This incident was 4 days after the first animal became sick. The lab mix also had strange symptoms of breath smelling like fish and bad gas (even though the dog food was chicken and rice). He didn't like the new dry food and did not eat like he usually does. The dog that did not get sick at all wouldn't eat any of the dry blue buffalo food. The lab did have tremors a while before but otherwise was very healthy and active and had not had any tremors for a while. He was treated with IV fluids and medication and seems to be fine now. My 4th dog (who is a fixed female, 12.5 years old tibetan terrier and the mother of the dog that passed away) refused to eat the new food and only ate the chicken off the top that I cook for them. She was the only dog that did not get sick at all. As a precaution, I had all 4 of the dogs including the one healthy dog have blood, urine and stool samples and everything was fine. We took him to the emergency vet clinic where they took a blood sample and found abnormalities on presentation, including elevated liver enzymes, hyperbilirubinemia, and hypoglycemia. Diagnosed with sepsis of gastrointestinal origin. The treats may be contaminated with salmonella, e. coli, and/or antibiotic residue. The manufacturer of the treats conducted a recall on this product in the past, but not on the particular lot we purchased. We called the manufacturer and they said there is nothing they can do and do not perform laboratory diagnostics on their treats. We are hoping the FDA can help evaluate these treats to determine if they are contaminated in any way. Our other dog, a 10 year old female tea cup Chihuahua purebred AKC also ate a treat and ~10 hours later started showing signs of lethargy, vomiting, and anorexia. On the 14th I woke up to (b) (6) having thrown up some food and as I came into our living room I found her panting very hard with her tongue hanging out several inches and she was very unsteady; there was yellow bile all over the sectional and we had to help her get down from there. It wasn't until that night we were able to get her to lick about a 1/4 cup of water. She was so lethargic all day I feared we would have to call vet and that she was dieing. She got up in the middle of the night twice and drank a little. On the 15th she ate some plain rice and walked a bit and was drinking better. The 16th she didn't eat any of her regular food but was drinking; she was getting thinner. The 17th she would eat a little rice and had some chicken I had cooked for her. I had tried to mix the Pedigree with the rice but she turned her head. At this point I realized that the dog food hadn't really been touched. And although our little dog doesn't appear to be ill, he will not touch it either. So none has been eaten since the night of the 15th. So now I am very concerned, I've stopped the food and will not buy it again for fear of some type of contamination. My big Plott, (b) (6), is still very weak and sick. EON-176515	8/12/2014 17:00	Fancy Feast Appetizers for Cats	Over the past 2 weeks I have observed that the Purina Fancy Feast cat food (with variety of flavors, whether packaged in a plastic tub or can) I have put out for my 2 cats turns to a very strange hot pink color after being left out overnight. I reported my finding to the Purina hotline #1-800-933-0991 last week and was told that this product is not under any kind of recall but that it was some sort of bacteria in the air that affects food. They advised me to discard the food after a few hours - however my concern is that in all my years, I have never seen such a thing and am concerned for the the safety and well-being of my cats and would appreciate any advice you may have to offer. I have purchased this cat food at several stores in the area - both Publix and Winn Dixie and plan to report my findings to them as well as to my vet. My cats do not appear to be sick but I want to err on the side of caution because I do not want mine or any other cats to become sick because of this. Thank you for your help in this matter.

EON-176400	8/10/2014 11:36	Blue Buffalo Blue Wilderness cat food	I have fed both of my cats Blue Buffalo Wilderness cat food. I recently saw a recall report that dogs fed Blue Buffalo Wilderness dog food developed hypercalcemia due to the vitamin D content. My cat, (b) (6), after a year and a half or so on the Wilderness food, developed hypercalcemia. She became lethargic, had a huge increase in thirst, and was not doing well. The vet had me stop the Blue Buffalo food, and had me try wet food with a fiber additive as the fiber can bind to the calcium and help it pass through the system. (b) (6) would not tolerate the wet food with added fiber and was vomiting. I started feeding prescription Royal Canin Satiety cat food as allocated by the vet. (b) (6) was on the vet prescribed food for several months, and her calcium levels began to drop. (b) (6) did not have signs of hypercalcemia before eating the Blue Buffalo food. The symptoms began after. Sadly, she began having issues on the prescription food, such as some fur loss, and horribly itchy ears which led (b) (6) to scratch them bloody. (b) (6) was given a steroid shot, and an antibiotic shot a month apart to help her ears heal. The vet had me take her off the prescribed cat food in case (b) (6) had developed an allergy to the Royal Canin food. (b) (6) also developed a mass (can occur with cats with hypercalcemia) under the skin on her right shoulder area. The vet sent a sample of the mass in for biopsy, and results came back that it was not cancerous, but the vet felt the mass could be due to an injection reaction to the steroid and antibiotic shots. I was told the mass would shrink and go away on its own. (b) (6) was then started on a limited ingredient allergy food. I placed her on Nature's Instinct Limited Ingredient Rabbit food. (b) (6) did OK on this food, but I wanted to try Blue Buffalo again. I put (b) (6) on the Blue Buffalo Limited Ingredient fish based food. (b) (6) then began itching her ears bloody again, and the mass did not really shrink, but pushed itself out of her body through her skin, which left a large open wound that has needed treatment. I believe that the Blue Buffalo cat food has caused the hypercalcemia condition in	3	Years	Domestic Longhair	Cat	8	Pound

			(b) (6), and all the subsequent problems over the last year. I believe this to be true after I learned of the recall on the dog food from the same company, which was said to have caused hypercalcemia. I will be bringing this issue up to my vet to see if he believes this could also be the case.

EON-175511	8/6/2014 15:33	Bil-Jac Little Jacs Small Dog Training Treats	(b) (6) started having diarrhea. It was watery from the start. She had a good appetite, and drank plenty of water. Then, on the 3r night, she started vomiting. And her stomach/intestines started making loud girgling noises. She was very uncomfortable. After midnight (4th day, August 1), she continued to vomit, and was getting weak. Nothing I had tried to slow it down worked. So, at 3:30 am on the 4th morning, I took (b) (6) to the ER. They couldn't find the reason for the diarrhea, except for being gastroenteritis. But, I didn't agree. They xrayed her to check for blockages, and nothing was found to be in her intestinal tract except for gas. (b) (6) was also tested for Parvo, but it came back negative. So, she was discharged, with a prescription of Metronidazol. (b) (6) also received an anti-nausea injection. After being discharged, they took (b) (6) outside to potty prior to taking her to my car. The Tech informed me that her stool was now very dark red, meaning bloody. She didn't have this prior to going...just brown diarrhea. I got her home around 6 a.m. (b) (6) passed out asleep on the couch, due to the injection. But, as she lay asleep, blood continued to ooze out of her anus (bottom). It continued thru the morning. The ER visit ( (b) (6) (b) (6) ) resulted in a $449 vet bill. The treats in question contain Propylene Glycol, which I truly believe is the cause of (b) (6) getting very sick.	1	Years	Shepherd Dog - Anatolian	Dog	72	Pound

He usually goes on 2 walks a day and if he doesn't want to walk, that means he's not feeling well. On Saturday, (b) (6) my landlord and dog walker noticed that he hadn't eaten since Thursday and that he didn't go for any walks. On Sunday (b) (6) I got a text while I was out of town to tell me that my dog (b) (6) had massive bloody diarrhea and had vomited all over the house...on my bed and the couch, so he and my dog walker took him to (b) (6) in (b) (6). When I arrived he was in the ICU with IV's and was super dehydrated. He underwent an ultrasound, many tests and was given antibiotics and other drugs for 2 weeks. He was in the ICU for 3 days and the vet bill was $2500. They determined that he had gastroinitis from the jerky treat and that he also had IBD, an inflammatory bowel disease. EON-174355	7/25/2014 11:12	The Goodlife Recipe with Chicken	Purchased the Goodlife Recipe with Chicken from local Walmart. Started to slowly integrate the food as instructed over 7 days. Cat was previously on Iams Hairball Control and has never had any adverse reaction to any food. The first three days I did the correct ratio of Iams/Goodlife and by the evening of the third day she started to demonstrate some stomach upset, heaving but no vomit. By the day 4-5 we noticed some tarry diarrhea and decided to more gradually integrate the food. By day 7 she began vomiting. She vomited 3 times. The next day 3 more times to which I then took the food away and gave her bland chicken as we have fed her in conjunction with her dry food throughout her life ( I must mention our family also consumed the same chicken with no adverse reactions.) The problem was it was too late. The food was now well into her system so through that night she vomited profusely some 14 times. We took her to the emergency vet the next morning and spent $740 to run every test to save her life. X-rays, bloodwork and fecal tests were completed. No obstructions or bizarre medical conditions..... the tests revealed an extremely inflamed gastrointestinal tract, fever, white blood cells elevation.... all pointing to poisoning or something adversely consumed. Our house has no toxins available. We have NO cleaning products or anything of the sort in the home. The only change that occurred in the time period prior was the change in her diet to the Goodlife Recipe. I must mention I noticed that over the last 2 weeks, Petco has discontinued this product. I can email her bloodwork panels AND have kept the bag so I can gladly provide samples for testing. We are hoping that our nightmare is over, but this needs a second look in case this is a pattern. At the very least, please let me submit a product sample for testing. EON-174353	7/25/2014 9:48	Nutro Ultra Senior	During the July 4th holiday weekend we went to our local Petsmart in (b) (6) and purchased a 4.5lb. bag of Nutro Ultra Senior Pet food. We elected to switch our dog to a new food that included Glucosamine and Chondroitin as she is 10 years old. Nutro seemed like a good choice initially, however what has ensued since has been anything but what we expected. We did a gradual transition of food for our dog at an even slower pace then recommended to ensure a smooth transition. Initially we noticed a change in (b) (6) stool's as they became softer and more mushy. We attributed this to the new food and that as she became accustom this would likely dissipate. We also began to notice our dog lost interest in playing and more lethargic than normal. This was a warning sign for a dog who was generally active. We attributed her age as being the culprit but soon found out this fit the larger pattern and preceded the next 2 events. We figured the food was safe and she was having a bit of extra difficulty growing accustom. On July 21st (b) (6) was visiting family while my wife and I were at work. During the early afternoon she vomited 3 consecutive times. This came in addition to a very loose stool from earlier in the morning. We increased her water intake to avoid dehydration and withheld all treats as to try and pinpoint the issue at hand. On July 22nd (b) (6) had by far her worst episode of stool as she let out a very unusual whine to let her outside to go. We immediately ceased the continuation of the Nutro as we were 2.5 weeks in and her problems had only worsened. (b) (6) was brought back onto her previous food for which she never had such issues. We firmly believe the food was the culprit. After further inspection we noted 1,495 similar reports with similar symptoms on Consumer Affairs.com Other sites include similar problems and Nutro to this point stands behind a blanket safety statement.	10	Years	Collie - Border	Dog	50	Pound

EON-174339	7/25/2014 3:18	Kit & Kaboodle Essentials	We have 2 cats that were affected with the same symptoms. the first cat died within 24 hrs of taking her to the Emergency Animal hospital. She was lethargic, hiding under the bed, loss of weight, not eating, not urinating, jaundice and dehydrated. Our cat, (b) (6), lab tests results showed she was in liver failure and kidney failure. The emergency animal hospital physician said there was nothing they could do to save her. They kept her overnight on oxygen and with an IV to hydrate her, but to no avail, these measures did not help. She died within 2 hrs after I took her home to die with her family. Although, our other cat didn't show any obvious symptoms, we took her to the Humane Society to be checked. She also turned out to have lost a lot of weight, was jaundice, dehydrated and lethargic and apparently not eating nor urinating much. She, (b) (6), is a 2yrs old, long-haired black and white tuxedo cat. She was also in liver failure and dehydrated and jaundice. After much medical interventions, she is just beginning to be herself. It took her 3 months to get to the point where she is now. We have to make an appointment now after completing the last of her medications prescribed. She received IV and subcutaneous fluids, along with various medications. The second cat's lead level was within the normal level. The first cat's lead level was not checked, because there was nothing to do to change her prognosis. EON-174319	7/24/2014 15:42	Blue Ridge Beef	We have a raw food sold locally that is becoming a problem. This particular product is simply ground meat and bone, or ground meat, organs and bone. It is gaining popularity because they promote the product through the dog show circuit. Now it's being sold in a large local feed/pet store ((b) (6) in (b) (6)), and the employees don't actually know the difference between this one and the other raw diets which are complete and balanced as well as high pressure pasteurized, except that it's cheaper.. The company is Blue Ridge Beef (www.blueridgebeef.com). My concern is that pet owners are increasingly feeding this diet as the exclusive food to their pets. It is not pasteurized, so enteropathogen contamination is a major concern. Over time, it is likely that pets will develop nutritional deficiencies since it is not complete and balanced. The company does not provide an AAFCO statement on their products or their websites, so even if the pet store employee or pet owner knew enough to look for the AAFCO statement, it's not provided (and if it were, it would be for "intermittent and supplemental feeding"). I called our state feed control official who tells me that because it's a raw meat product and not mixed with other things like vitamins, vegetables or what have you, they can't regulate it. They say it's the purview of FDA. The food doesn't require an AAFCO statement because they aren't regulated by the department of agriculture as "pet foods" are. And yet the product is labeled "pet food". This product represents a danger to pets as well as their owners. I want the pet stores to know that they aren't pasteurized and aren't complete and balanced, but they don't have a chance if the company won't tell them (or doesn't know the difference themselves, which seems likely). What can be done?

He had not been fed anything since that Sunday. I called my Vet Monday morning, told her about the problem, and took my Scottie to see her Tuesday morning. First appointment in the morning. She said he had eaten something, or been fed something that gave him bad stomach, and vomiting. Started him on a white rice, chicken diet that afternoon (Tuesday). No vomiting since. Then I read the ingredients label on the Purina label, which stated it contained Garlic Oil! All onion products can be fatal for small dogs. EON-174266	7/23/2014 11:51	Hill's Science Diet Ideal Balance Dog Food	I have been desperately searching for a dog food that is nutritionally balanced, so when Hill's Science Diet came out with their product called Ideal Balance, I contacted the manufacturer to find out the guaranteed analysis for this product because the information on the bag and their website was limited. This product as being "completely balanced" in all aspects of nutrition including minerals. I am specifically interested in a balanced ratio of iron, zinc, copper, and manganese, so was interested in the product's content of those minerals. The e-mail response I got back (I can forward you a copy) stated they had no idea how much of these minerals were in their product. I asked them in my e-mail response how they could claim that their product was completely balanced when they don't know what's in it, but I didn't get a response. But I keep seeing advertisement, in conjunction with PetCo, for this product and they continue to assert that the product is completely balanced. I notified PetCo of my experience and offered to send them a copy of the e-mail as well, but I have not yet heard back from them. There is no dog food sold in the United States that is truly balanced because no one requires that they be balanced and no one holds them to their promise. But that practices harms not only dogs, but people too. People are having to pay exorbitant prices for this unbalanced, unhealthy food. Food that is balanced only in calcium and phosphorus is out of balance if the other minerals are not present in appropriate ratios. All dietary minerals compete for absorption in the body. Even if the appropriate amount of phosphorus is in the food, if there is insufficient iron, calcium, and copper for that level of phosphorus, those minerals become deficient in the body. If there is sufficient calcium, but insufficient zinc, potassium, and manganese, those minerals become deficient in the body. Iron deficiency causes hormone (thyroid) imbalances that coincide with hypothyroidism (obesity), manganese deficiency not only reduces

			the body's ability to metabolize carbs and sugars, further exacerbating the dog obesity problem, but manganese is also needed for the production of synovial fluid - the fluid that lubricates joints (hip dysplasia). Copper deficiency causes problems with connective tissues that support the joints, further exacerbating the problem of hip dysplasia. Zinc deficiency causes extreme reactions to stress situations. Every time I read another story about some poor child being suddenly and inexplicably attacked and injured or even killed by the family dog for no apparent reason, I wonder if that event was caused by a zinc deficiency in the dog. The list of problems is endless, but the solution is simple - require dog food manufacturers to provide a balanced product and to tell the truth about what is in their product.

EON-174254	7/23/2014 0:03	Healthy Hide Good 'n' Fun Triple Flavor Chews, Nudges Jerky Cuts Made with Real Steak	Owner called 7/10/14 - reported mild diarrhea and decreased water intake. Scheduled appt. for following day which was later cancelled as dog was feeling better. Dog presented on 7/21/14 for inappetence of 3-4 days duration - very averse to food; usually has a great appetite. Had done some vomiting 1-2 weeks prior but had resolved. Decreased energy level; dog had been shaking at home per owner. The dog was not taking any medications and was fed lams dry food free choice. Exam on presentation: Weight loss (2.5# since last recorded weight 1 year ago); BAR; T=102.6 P=150 R=pant; MM pink, mild-moderate dental tartar; no other significant abnormalities on exam. CBC/Chemistry in house revealed increased PCV at 62.5% (ref. 37-55) and mildly increased creatinine of 1.9 (ref. 0.4-1.4). Lateral/VD abdomen and chest radiographs showed no significant abnormalities. The dog was hospitalized overnight on IV fluids, appetite stimulant (mirtazapine), and anti-nausea medication (Cerenia). Overnight, PCV had improved (52%) but dog continued to refuse food, becoming extremely nauseous and licking lips when offered. Owner elected to pursue more testing at this time - 4Dx and cPLI both negative; urinalysis was very abnormal with glucosuria, ketonuria, 1+ cocci, 2-4 RBC/HPF, WBC 0-3/HPF, casts 1/HPF, USG 1.021, 1+ protein. Ketones and glucose were confirmed with repeat dipstick; blood glucose was repeated and was 71 mg/dL at this time. Partial bloodwork was repeated showing normal BUN/creatinine after fluid therapy with mild hypoproteinemia of 5.4 (ref. 5.5-7.6). Consultation with (b) (6) - suspicious for acute kidney injury with differentials of toxin, pyelonephritis, leptospirosis. Ketonuria suspected to be due to catabolic state from prolonged anorexia. Upon further discussion with the owner, the dog had been receiving Healthy Hide Good'n'Fun chicken jerky treats on a regular basis, which are a product of China. I am suspicious of Fanconi syndrome at this point, secondary to toxicity from these jerky treats. Due to financial constraints, the dog was discharged from the hospital on Clavamox, mirtazapine, famotidine, and Cerenia, with instructions to encourage food/water intake as much as possible. The dog was still inappetent at time of discharge.	8	Years	Lhasa Apso	Dog	18.8	Pound

(b) (6) has been eating Boots and Barkley treats for years and loves these. He normally has a great appetite, but this began to decline on Saturday and remains low. He did eat a small cracker last night and 3 to 4 bites of food this morning. Saturday night the owner noticed the water dish was empty and that he was drinking more water and urinating more often. His PU/PD continues and his urine has become clear in color beginning on Sunday. His still had very normal energy (chasing birds) until this morning. July 3rd he was seen at rDVM for a steroid injection for "itchy skin". He did not appear to have steroid side effects. He also receives Benadryl twice daily for his skin. EON-173055	7/15/2014 11:12	Blue Buffalo Blue Wilderness Cat Food	Last year, I switched my cats food to Blue Buffalo, after a Petco was opened nearby. For their entire life, I had fed them Wellness and I started to notice changes in the food and the cats would not eat it, which is why I changed to Blue Buffalo. Last fall, (b) (6) started losing weight, and was acting abnormal, running around all the time, and not eating when he had always been very docile. I had the vet look at him and do blood work, and he was diagnosed with hyperthyroidism, but his liver enzymes were also high. This spring, I noticed (b) (6) was losing weight..she had alway been a nice sized cat, but she was chatting all the time (Siamese) and was not eating like she had in the past. I had the vet look at her and do an external exam..she said to do blood work if things did not change. Over (b) (6) (b) (6) weekend, she barely ate--I was assist feeding her. I had the vet do blood work on (b) (6) her liver values were off the chart, and I rushed her to the emergency vet. The emergency vet did and ultrasound and determined (b) (6) had liver cancer. I took her home the next day, and she died on (b) (6). I switched everyone's food after her death, but I fear it was too late, as (b) (6) gradually declined (his eyes had always been bright green, but turned yellow)--I attempted to treat him homeopathically, which seemed to be working at first, until he stopped eating completely on (b) (6), and died on (b) (6). With both cats, I assist fed them for several days. I did not have an autopsy on (b) (6), but his symptoms were exactly the same. I have spoken to a local vets office who said they warn all their patients to not feed Blue Buffalo food to their pets, since they have seen such a high incidence of acute illness within 6-12 months of feeding them the food. And I have learned of two other cat owners whose pets died within the same duration.	14	Years	American Curl Longhair	Cat

			If you look at the labeling, the food contains Yucca, which is on the Poison list for cats and dogs. The vet office also told me that Blue Buffalo does zero scientific testing of their foods, and that the food is sourced and manufactured in China. I have googled "Blue Buffalo and pet illness or death" and seen many horrible reports about this food. My niece's husband is an attorney with the FDA and told me to file the report. I don't want other people to suffer such a tragic loss that I have--our pets are members of the family, not just "animals".

EON-173013	7/14/2014 21:18	Beneful Playful Life	Over a three week period, (b) (6) fell when walking, culminating in not being able to walk even 1 block without falling three times (at end of 3 weeks). She was also lethargic and getting worse. Her bark become high pitched and very soft by end of the two weeks. During this period, she developed a staff infection. By the third week, a vet examined her and recognized the staff infection. The blood test revealed nothing such as cancer, that would explain her falling and lack of energy. The vet asked if (b) (6) could have eaten a poison, because she could not explain the lethargic and falling. The vet prescribed an antibiotic and antihistamine. Two days after visiting the vet, her condition quickly became worse and my family was certain she was dying. We took her back to the vet and she was diagnosed as being severely dehydrated. She stayed overnight and was hooked to an IV. She was released in fair condition and was not falling. Once back in our house her condition deteriorated within the first 48 hours of being back. My wife began to wonder if her sickness was related to the food she was eating as her symptoms matched a trajectory of her food consumption and when we had started with the new food. She did an INTERNET search on the food we were feeding her, which was Purina Beneful. We were shocked to find many other dog owners (over 700 posts on one particular website... http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/beneful.html) whose dogs shared the same symptoms as our dog, many of them were fatal (dehydration, balance, etc...) We changed her diet immediately, and in the 1-2 weeks she has recovered most of her strength. It has been several days since I have witnessed her fall. She is beginning to play again, though she is still not playing with the same vigor. She is making daily improvement, but not yet totally up to what she was like. Altogether, we estimate that our dog had been eating Beneful for about three months, which was 2 and a half 56 oz bags. I believe, after three months of eating it, her body was reacting to a build up of toxins...maybe. I am not the type of person who fears what is typically in my or my dog's food. Without a scientific study it is hard to say was is exactly harming all these dogs. I hope this will help guide people away from the food as the potential risk of death is just not worth buying this brand. I also hope the FDA will take the time to figure out why so many dogs are being poisoned. These are very costly vet bills for those of us lucky enough to save our pets and for those who lose their animal, this must be absolutely devastating.	4	Years	Poodle - Medium size	Dog	17	Pound

EON-172998	7/14/2014 17:54	Authority Lamb and Rice Formula	(b) (6) began urinating in the house, then about a week later he became lathargic and quit eating. I took him to vet on a Sunday, and they gave him blood test and an antibiotic for infection, he did not respond so a few days later I took him back, vet then did another blood test and saw his blood level were bad, gave him more meds, but (b) (6) did not respond. he continued to decline the rest of the week and by Sunday night he was completely unresponsive so we had him put to sleep. Below is a post I put on a chat form for beagle owners. It has more information about my concern. I would like to know what your experience has been with complaints about dog food with rice in it as a main ingredient. I have always fed my dogs a food that contains rice instead of corn or other fillers thinking it was better for them due to the carbs and digestibility. After losing both my beagles to organ failure (kidney and liver) this past winter I began researching what could have been contributing to their early deaths at 6 and 9 years. Dog food advisor now has a statement about arsenic in rice on all their reviews. Studies have been done that indicate the elevated levels in rice are from growing rice in fields that formerly grew other crops (such as cotton) that were treated with pesticides for years, and this has contaminated the ground so the rice is growing in "paddies" that have high levels of arsenic. FDA has reported that the elevated levels do not pose an immediate health risk, however they have not yet determined what the long term effects can be. They recommend not eating rice all the time but eat a varying diet of grains. I had the most recent food I fed my beagles (Authority Brand Lamb and Rice) tested and it contained 140 ppb of arsenic. Acceptable levels in water is 10 ppb. FDA has not established an acceptable level in foods yet, but is expected to in the near future. Imagine what effect this could have on a dog that eats a food with rice as a second or third ingredient 2X a day every day. I am now feeding grain free Victors dog food.	6	Years	Beagle	Dog	40	Pound

The last purchase I made at Walmart in (b) (6) on 7/7/14 and fed to my cats on 7/10/14. At first none of them wanted to eat it; they just smelled it and walked away (they normally eat it up right away). I was in a hurry to get to work so I left the food out hoping they would eat while I was gone. When I got home from work that night they had thrown up everywhere - my cats very rarely get sick and when they do it's not all over in multiple locations. I thought perhaps it was just that can of food so I opened another - they smelled it and walked away; I opened another - same reaction. Now they won't eat any food and I think I need to take them to the vet. I have never had a cat react to food in this manner - very scary.  I contacted Purina with batch number (41061791L44143), but have had no response. EON-172956	7/13/2014 22:15	Hartz Precision Nutrition Milk Replacer for kittens	I rescued 3 kittens, and fed them all Hartz Kitten Replacer Formula. The kittens were all healthy. They played, and ate well. They were actually eating hard food, but I gave them the kitten replacer to help with their weight gain. This was at 6pm, and by 7am, one of the kittens was immobile, laying on her side with her head back and leg twitching, extremely weak and could barely breathe. The kitten was rushed to emergency and had to be euthanized. No suspecting the formula, we continued to feed this to the other 2. The following day, I noticed that the other kitten was beginning to exhibit some of the same symptoms. She would not move, could not go to the bathroom on her own, but she was not paralyzed on her side. The brother was going through the same thing at his new home. The kittens also both exhibited a scratchy meow as if losing their voices. The boy kitten was rushed to emergency, and died on his own. I am still nursing the last kitty back to health, and she seems to be recovering with pedalyte, and an antibiotic. However, she eats very little, and has a hard time going to the bathroom. When I suspected that it might be the formula, I began doing online research, and found that my theory was heavily supported by many other kitten owners who lost their kittens to this product. I called the company, and they offered to send me a return envelope for the product so they could test it on other kittens. I refused to do that, but I do still have the product. I just didn't want to see any other kittens suffer. The worst part was that they admitted to knowing about the fatalities!	5	Weeks	Unknown	Cat

EON-172487	7/4/2014 22:45	Purina Pro Plan Chicken and Rice Puppy Formula Dry Feed	We had been feeding Purina Pro Plan Chicken & Rice Puppy food for several weeks. We opened a new bag, and the 2nd day that (b) (6) was eating it she became suddenly violently ill--vomiting. She vomited several times before we could get her to our vet clinic. Our vet put her immediately on an IV fluid bag and gave her something to settle her stomach. She got through the first bag, and he had just started the 2nd bag of fluids, when she sat up, gasped, and fell dead. The tests that he ran showed that her stomach was empty, there was not bloat or twisting, her liver function was normal, one kidney was slightly off and he attributed that to the excessive vomiting. Her white count was 40,000, and her intestines were swollen with air and gas. Our vet has no explanation as to what happened to kill her.	3	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	70	Pound

It was the only food that worked with her allergies, so of course we loved it. It was not until the last bag of food we purchased we noticed a change in her health. He began having diarrhea which was a neon color, she had thick urine, vomiting, complete lost of appetite, became extremely weak, and lethargic. It wasn't until we took her to the vet less than a week after the symptoms started that we found out her tongue had turned black, her teeth were weak, her mouth full of puss pockets, tender skin, and she went into both liver and kidney failure. On Monday, he vomited about six times, first in morning then evening, not eating or drinking water, staggered walk and then lost mobility. I took him to vet on Tuesday around noon and had to carry him in. He is not being treated for poisoning toxicity. I strongly believed the dog treats are highly toxic because they contain propylene glycol and BHA and BHT as a preservative. My dog was well until he ate these treats. EON-172224	6/30/2014 18:45	Trader Joe's Chicken Recipe Jerky Sticks	I obtained the dog from a person who adopted him only having him 4 days. The dog was perfectly healthy with the exception of dirrehea. That was almost under control and was due to not having a consistent diet. Also The lab results from the testing done at the shelter and previous veterenarian blood tests showed no signs of liver disease, abnormal blood results or anything that would indicate he had this issue in April. My neighbor purchased the Chicken strips from Trader Joes and gave them to me for my dog. Within days he began frequently unrinating and his dirreahea started becoming a liquid form, he became depressed, lack of energy, vomitted and lack of appetite. His skelton is now very prevelant, and he pants repetitively. He has undergone surgery, had a biospsy, ultra sound and blood tests which can be sent to you if necessary along with all of the clinical terminology from the various lab tests. I took him to the vet and they ran fecal tests with no abnormalities, however because he had lost 4 lbs in 2 weeks suggested I take him to the Vet Hospital. Testing showed sever liver damage, and possible cancer. The Hosipital recommended that I do an ultra sound and further blood tests and from that they recommended surgery and a biopsy. This totaled over 6,000.00 and he is no better today then when I took him in on the 19th of June. As of today, I do not have the exact diagnosis, however confirmation of liver disease with a possibility of cancer because his lymph nodes are enlarged. The product is Trader Joe's Chicken Recipe Jerky Sticks, Chicken Flavor. EON-172076	6/28/2014 17:03	Dingo Mini Dental Balls for Total Care with real chicken	I purchased the Chicken jerky treats because they were one of his favorites. Thinking I was doing him a wonderful thing. He started to vomit, diarrhea, then eventually weight loss, frequent thirst and urination. I thought it would go away, but the weight loss continued and the excessive thirst and urination continued. I took him to my vet and he had indeed lost weight. They checked his urine and he had glucose in his urine however he wasnt diabetic. My vet immediately thought he had fanconi, without me saying a word he ask was I given (b) (6) any chicken jerky treats from China. EON-172041	6/27/2014 19:09	Diamond Naturals Lamb Meal & Rice Formla for Adult Dogs	We fed (b) (6) 2 cups of the food (4 feedings) which we believe to have caused 5 days and nights worth of diarrhea, blood in stool (one known incident) and tummy troubles for 5 or more days. We went to Tractor Supply to buy Diamond Naturals Lamb and Rice Formula for Adult Dogs. The bags were not there. Instead, there were bags with a different design that said "Diamond Naturals Lamb and Rice Formula for Adult Dogs. We bought it thinking that the package had changed). After one feeding of a half of a cup, our dog wanted out in the middle of the night, We fed him a half of a cup the next morning and came home at 3:00 to about 9 different spots in our home with diarrhea and had to buy $100 carpet cleaner to fix the mess. That day I thought that the diarrhea was due to 2 small bites of a plain (well cooked) pork chop we had given him at dinner the previous night. We gave him his 3rd feeding of the food and he woke us to go outside in the middle of the night. The next day , we fed him his fourth feeding, and I came home at 3:00 to a diarrhea filled floor; this time there was blood in some of it (gross... but I took a picture). (b) (6) next meals for almost a week consisted of cottage cheese and white rice. We then took a good look at the new bag of food. In a little box on the bag, it said, " NEW LOOK" (in big font) and in smaller font, " NOW ENHANCED WITH SUPER FOODS AND PROBIOTICS". We didn't have our old bag to make a comparison, but we noticed there were blueberries, acai, and probiotics. I couldn't get in touch with Diamond Brand customer service for the next few days because they are in a different time zone and were closed. By then, we had found an "original" bag of (b) (6) old food. Before we began weaning him back to the original bag, I got in touch with a vet from Diamond Brand. 			original food because I didn't know that it hadn't changed as well. The vet said that the old bag was his regular formula and that there was a difference between the two packages. I was told I could start mixing the old food with the new. When I asked why Diamond didn't make it clear that this new package was indeed different food so that customers had a chance to wean our dogs from the old to the new food, I was told that Diamond thought that the probiotics would make the transition easy. I told the vet that my dog is too precious to us to EVER give him any of that newly formulated dog food again. The vet told me that there is quite a difference between the two bags and told me that "4 Health" (also by Diamond) has a formula similar to our original bag, and to mix his old with that. Please look at DIAMOND NATURALS (PET FOOD) FACEBOOK, and you will see several comments from people talking about their dogs getting diarrhea from the new formula as well ( starting around June 4th). I asked the person next to me in line if he did and he said it smell like plastic. My car smelled so bad I had to roll down the windows. Definitely something wrong with this food. Saw other people complaining on line about it too. Took pic of the bag and saved some of the food just in case our dog has a bad reaction. Thank you

This in particular kitten refused to eat the friskies at first, so I have been feeding her Fancy Feast Kitten canned food. She has been fine until this morning. Last night she ate some of her mom's "Friskies" canned cat food (mom had never been on canned cat food until after babies were born and has been eating a regiment of 50% IAMS kitten food(dry)/ 50% Kitten Chow dry kitten food mixed together, with a "treat" of canned food split between her and the kittens once a day, usually mixed into the dry food mix I have made for her) Yesterday, I was feeling particularly unwell ( I am disabled) so I just allowed them to eat straight wet food, that is when " (b) (6) ate some of her mom's (and siblings') wet "Friskies" cat food. ALL Kittens, and mom have diarrhea, but (b) (6) has been throwing up since 6am, listless for most of the day, refusing to eat or drink. I attempted to have her seen,(no vet was in 3 different offices in town today and the 4th never answered the phone) I was only able to get a receptionist to tell me that maybe they are ready to be wormed. I bought the wormer, but still skeptical, I only gave it to 2 kittens and waited 6 hours, before giving it to another, then another 4 hours before giving to another. However, something made me look-up her symptoms online, when I came across this site: http://tncountrygur123.hubpages.com/hub/anyone-lost-a-pet-from-eating-friskies-cat-food Please check this out. there are several stories going back years, and from what some people say, there are man, many more sites saying the same thing. There have been several "mom's" that did have their "furbabies" seen by a vet, all which believe friskies had Salmonella and caused their babies to die. I have fed friskies dry food to my cats for years, and each of my cats, have mysteriously come up sick/ dead with no warning or reason. PLEASE PUT THIS COMPANY OUT OF BUSINESS!!! Several people have emailed/ contacted Friskies and they refuse to do anything about this ONGOING threat to felines throughout the country. They have known about the problem for years and will not do anything about it willingly (without being forced to do so) Cat owners of America are begging you to come to the rescue of our feline friends, especially to the rescue of the ones whose mom's don't know of the evil intentions of this company, whose product they have been (or will) lovingly feed to their "furbabies." THANK YOU so much for your time and attention into this important matter.	5.5	Weeks	Siamese	Cat	1.1	Pound

EON-171461	6/24/2014 16:27	Jerky Treats Tender Strips Dog Snacks Beef, Jerky Treats Tender Strips Dog Snacks Lamb	(b) (6) (b) (6) my Bullmastiff stopped eating and threw up (b) (6) I took her to the vet. They ran 2 blood tests. 1 on her red and white cells and 1 on her organ functions. Both came back fine. So she gave (b) (6) a penicillin shot and fluids and sent me home to feed her a bland diet of chicken and rice. She ate her dinner and 3/4 of it the next morning. By the evening she was sick again so on sat (b) (6) we took her back to the vet. They ran x-rays. They could not find anything wrong. They sent the x-rays out to a radiologist. They again gave her fluids and penicillin with a B12 shot. By Sunday the (b) (6) she looked and acted like she was not going to make it so I rushed her down to (b) (6) to (b) (6) (b) (6) where she would remain for 9 days until her death on (b) (6) They had did a ultrasound, more blood work, urine tests, antibiotics of many different kinds, fluids around the clock and surgery to see if they could help her. We never found anything but a little arthritis in her back which she never acted like it bothered her because we never knew she had it. Both vets are perplexed and so are we. I went from having a healthy active dog to a very, very, sick dog in 2 weeks. In the end we had to put her down due to her pain and kidney failure. Kidney failure is what finally got her. I came home and Googled my jerky dog treats from Costco to my dismay they say they are made in the USA but they are part the dog treat killing problem. They are called Jerky Treats (beef and lamb) in a red and blue tub. Made by DEI Monte foods. She did not consume many maybe 15 treats. I bought them on (b) (6). (b) (6). EON-171448	6/24/2014 11:30	Rayne Clinical Nutrition Kangaroo and Squash Maintenance	Packages of Rayne Clinical Nutrition, a novel single protein, single carbohydrate clinical product for atopic animals are being shipped from the manufacturer's Atlanta fulfillment center leaking, spoiled and with evident insect infestation throughout the cases of wet food, which are individual foil-covered "peel and serve" plastic trays. This is the second shipment in which I have received cases of food in poor condition, albeit in this order it was more than 70% of the order, primarily the Kangaroo and Squash Feline Maintenance wet food. The company shipped noticeably spoiled food. The shipping boxes were noticeably foul-odored before they were even opened. The extent of insect egg casings on the products, the live and emerging insects, and their fast shipping by Fedex from Atlanta to my (b) (6) delivery address suggests that a substantial insect infestation of their product line exists at a minimum in storage if not their production line, as well. Novel, single protein clinical products for atopic animals simply cannot have insect protein sources (consider roach dander antigens and incidence human allergy, for example) let alone to the horrible extent in this product shipment! This is a vet-prescribed clinical product line! I have attached photos to document. Note: Problem started date is package received date.

EON-171406	6/23/2014 16:03	Pet Shoppe Duck Jerky for Dogs	I took my pet Chihuahua (b) (6) to the emergency pet clinic today for an ACL injury and before the vet could prescribe anti-inflammatory medication he did blood work to ensure kidney and liver levels were normal to prescribe Rimadyl. The results of the blood test indicated abnormally high kidney levels. (b) (6) kidney levels were so elevated the vet informed me of possible kidney/liver disease. He continued to ask me if (b) (6) had anything to eat or drink before the visit. I told the vet he had water and 2 jerky treats. The vet informed me the elevated levels may be due to dehydration or diabetes. To rule out diabetes he did an additional urinalysis. The urinalysis came back negative for diabetes. Earlier in the day I had stopped at Walgreens and bought the pet shoppe brand duck jerky treats. I asked the vet about the possible connection of the jerky treats and the elevated kidney levels. He said if the jerky treats are made in China to stop giving it to (b) (6). After a fluid injection and paying nearly $400 bill we were told to follow-up with our regular vet and discharged. As soon as I got home, I immediately checked the bag of jerky treats which were made in China and distributed here in the United States. I went to Walgreens to return the bags and told the assistant manager the issue and asked why they have not pulled ¿Made in China¿ treats from their shelves. He issued me a refund and continued to tell me that there has been no notifications from corporate to pull the jerky treats and that the treats are deemed safe. He gave me contact information for corporate and information to file an official complaint along with the phone number to media relations. This is an important warning to all pet owners if they give their pets jerky treats from Walgreens. It is obvious Walgreens is choosing profits over people and their pets here (Pet Shoppe is the Walgreens brand). Why hasn¿t Walgreens made a voluntary decision to pull the ¿Made in China¿ jerky treats from their shelves if the jerky is causing illness and possible death in pets? I absolutely feel there is a direct correlation between my dog¿s illness and the jerky treats. Additionally, the emergency vet and my regular vet stated that (b) (6) illness may be linked to the jerky treats.	7.5	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	15	Pound

EON-171083	6/19/2014 11:18	Beneful IncrediBites	I scooped food out of my 5 year old female Blue Heeler's already half eaten bag of Beneful dog food. (It was a 15.5lb bag of Purina Beneful IncrediBites SKU#1780013639 with an expiration date of April 2015 and the code below the expiration date is 4115 1082 1549 L10-99. It was purchased at Walmart in (b) (6) ) When I scooped the food out of the bag, I found this "fabric string" in the food. It is about 6-7 inches long and almost a centimeter in width. It looks like very thin fabric or a paper type material that is covered in a hardened glue substance. I called Purina Beneful at 1-888-236-3385 to let them know what happened. They were nice and listened to my story of what had happened and apologized. They offered to replace the bag of dog food and asked me to keep the string and they would send me prepaid envelope to send it back to them in so they could check it out. About 5 minutes after getting off the phone with them, I received a call from the customer service representative that had just assisted me. She frantically told me that the string in the food wasn't a string at all. It was the web of a non parasitic grain based insect, such as a larvae or a moth. The glue like substance on the string wasn't glue, it was the eggs of the non parasitic insect. They typically can get into the bags while at the distribution facilities. She told me that I needed to immediately dispose of the web and the food securely in an outside container and they did NOT want me to send it back to them! She was brief and I questioned as to what this may do to my dog and they said that since it's non parasitic that it would not affect her. She was then quick to get off of the phone with me. I was concerned and confused, so I googled about it. I learned that there a 100's, if not 1000's of complaints about Purina Beneful and the Purina brand in general about bugs in the food, making pets severely ill and also killing them, in most cases! Whole households of dogs dieing! I called Purina back and asked more questions. As soon as I started asking more questions about the bugs, the health and safety of my pet and taking her

He then started acting like it was no big deal and that since the bugs are grain based, they could be in any type of food. After sharing a photo of the "string/web" and conversing with friends via social media, I now have others telling me that this may possibly be a dead tape worm! I'm not too sure though. I have a photo of the string/web I can email to you asap. I also have the string/web sealed in a ziploc and in the freezer. I also kept the bag of food. While visiting my dog got ahold of it. Based on what was removed from surgery, it appears he ate one side, the narrow center portion and swallowed the round knob on the other side. In fact the treat looks like a small barbell. The end pieces when disconnected form a round thick shape that facilitate swallowing, but prone to lodging in the esophagus. The material as claimed is textured to remove tartar from teeth. This also increases the likelihood of obstruction. My dog has had hundreds of similar treats formed in a long narrow flat shape. Far less likely to become stuck. My dog suffered 7 hours before I was able to arrange a visit with a vet late on a Sunday. Two vets attempted to touch the object through without success. In the end they had to open him up and pull from the stomach side and push from the top side. My dog didn't die, but he isn't out of the woods as the aggressive approach required to remove the object needs to heal properly for him to pull completely through. My costs are at $1895 and climbing. Bottom line, the design exponentially increases the likelihood of choking or obstruction as compared to treats formed in long flat shapes. Soon after beginning the bag we noticed a change in bowel movements in both dogs. Their stools became loose, and sometime explosive and watery. Both dogs had increased water intake and were lethargic. We took away all treats and continued use of the food (we thought it was a treat causing the issue). When the problem did not go away after a few days we contacted the vet who prescribed Flagyl for both dogs. We halted using CANIDAE and began a boiled chicken breast and white rice diet along with the Flagyl. I contacted CANIDAE via email asking if they had any issues. They responded saying they test each batch, there were no issues on their end, and if we could send them the UPC and date code we could get a voucher for a free bag. I sent the information in, but have not mailed in the UPC to get the voucher. Their stools were getting better until we did one feeding with CANIDAE again, just to make sure it wasn't environmental. Prior to this, he has been sleeping a bit more and was more inactive than usual in the few days leading up to (b) (6) The diarrhea became worse throughout the morning and he began to have large amounts of blood in his stool by about 10am. He also became very thirsty and drank a lot and was quite lethargic by this point . I picked him up off the floor and he vomited the large amount of water he had drank. I took him to the vet where he continued to have bloody diarrhea and eventually started to vomit blood. His condition with treatment worsened and we made the decision to euthanize him the morning of (b) (6) Two days later, on (b) (6) our second dog, (b) (6) started having bloody diarrhea and was taken to the vet. EON-170044	6/9/2014 23:12	Purina Cat Chow Indoor	I ran out of the dog's usual food, so I mixed the remaining 1/4 cup of his Wellness brand dog food with 1/4 cup of Purina Cat Chow Indoor food. He had eaten small amounts of it previously without problem, so I didn't think it would be a problem to give it to him for 2 meals until I could buy his usual food. The following morning I gave him 1/2 cup of the cat food and again about 4 hours later he began vomiting repeatedly. Later that evening when I gave him regular food, he vomited another 8 times about 5 hours after he finished eating. Today he's been fine. Our cat has been lethargic, not eating or drinking, having bloody, mucousy stool for the last few days also---this made me wonder if it had something to do with the cat food. When I researched it, it looked like it was very likely that it could be the food. The bag was new--purchased the end of May & used for just a few days before the symptoms appeared in the cat. It was a fluke that I ran out of dog food & used it for him, which helped me put the pieces together.	5	Years	Beagle	Dog	30	Pound

EON-170025	6/9/2014 16:15	Evanger's Signature Series Slow Cooked Chicken Stew for Dogs	I have been a loyal customer of Evanger's for many years. If you just go by ingredient labels, they are a great food. I have seen complaints about the company, but our rescue dogs were doing well on the food, liked the food, and it was reasonably affordable for our rescue. Recently, I have noticed more and more issues with inconsistency in their canned foods. Sometimes runny, sometimes smells odd, sometimes a huge layer of fat (way too much). Last week, I opened a can of their Chicken Stew for one of the senior blind dogs in the rescue. I was shocked to find a huge piece of metal in the food and upon further inspection, noticed many smaller, sharp pieces of metal. It scares me because had it not been for the large piece, I might have missed the small pieces of metal and wonder if this has happened in the past. Quality control at Evangers seems non-existent. I attempted to notify Evangers, but so far they have not returned our emails or calls. I understand that thing can happen in manufacturing, but this could have been deadly for the dog had we not noticed. The fact that Evangers has not even responded says a lot about their company. After many years of being loyal customers and recommending their foods, we are done with their food and will never purchase again! Another interesting thing I noticed, any even slightly negative experiences or comments posted to their Facebook page seem to just disappear.

EON-169676	6/5/2014 13:36	Waggin' Train Apple & Chicken Wraps	I had been feeding (b) (6) Waggin Train Apple wrapped Chicken jerky for about 6-7 weeks. We were in the third bag. Around the beginning of November, (b) (6) appetite was decreasing until (b) (6), he didn't want to eat anything including the jerky treats or people food. I took him in on (b) (6) and he was down to 9 pounds 2 ounces from 12 pounds. He was vomiting and had been vomiting bile for 2 days before taking him in. The vet gave him an injection of cerenia for nausea and vomiting and to reduce inflammation. She increased the amount of prednisolone and added zantac twice a day. She asked for him to come back in a week or so, and to stay on a bland diet. She drew his blood. His WBC was elevated to 34,700 and his PCT was decreased with an increase in reticulocytes. She started him on two types of antibiotics: amoxicillin and metronidazole. His total protein and albumin levels in his blood was decreased and his alt, bun/creat ratio were elevated. Glucose, calcium and cholesterol were decreased. All other labs were within normal limits. On (b) (6), I took (b) (6) back to the vet for a recheck. He had been doing better through (b) (6) until just before (b) (6), when he stopped eating again. He was not his usual active self and had stopped jumping onto the furniture. The vet noticed that his heart rate was irregular. She started him on azothioprine and increased the prednisolone. She also gave him another injection of cerenia. More blood was drawn and his WBC was elevated more and his PCV had substantially decreased from 39.2 to 26.9%. Reticulocytes were up to 7.16% from 3.03%. His total protein and albumin had decreased slightly, and now all of his liver enzymes, AST, ALT, and ALP were significantly elevated. Bun/creat ratio was elevated. Calcium and cholesterol were still low. On (b) (6), (b) (6) started having bloody diarrhea. It had been full of mucous over the weekend prior. But he seemed happy in that he was barking and wagging his tail. He was eating a little bit of AID and some chicken breast. 			few ounces. He was eating chicken and pork chop but would not eat his dog food. The vet added imodium every 12 hours for 3 doses. On (b) (6), he went back for another recheck. He was having difficulty eating and diarrhea. He still had an arrhythmia. He could not climb stairs anymore. He showed increased abdominal effort with breathing and had severe muscle wasting. Blood drawn. PCT down to 18.2%, WBC up to 63,000. Total protein and albumin had decreased. Liver enzymes still elevated. Bun/creat ratio had doubled to 60. Calcium and magnesium were critically low. The vet consulted with another GI vet, and was concerned about peritonitis. She decreased the pred. Occult blood on stool was positive. On (b) (6), Vet performed an abdominal ultrasound which showed small fluid pockets around organs, liver and kidneys were NSF, intestines seemed very thickened. No tumor or ulcer evident. (b) (6) was received a blood transfusion of 250 mL. After transfusion, his gums pinked up, and respiration effort decreased. The vet ordered more amoxicillin and added sucralfate to be given 1/4 tablet every 8 hours. on (b) (6), (b) (6) stools were still bloody and abdomen was distended. He was very inactive and his walk was unstable. Appetite was still decreased. He had stopped vomiting and his stools had firmed. Weight was up 5.5 oz to 10 pounds 4 ounces. ALP enzyme was now up to 2165 and other liver enzymes were elevated. Albumin and Total protein continued to decrease. The vet decided to start (b) (6) on Hetastarch, 23 mls in IV every 6 hours for 3 days. I had to leave work early after 5 hours to go home and infuse (b) (6). WBC was down to 32,000 and PCT was up to 27% but still anemic. On (b) (6), Vet pulled catheter. He seemed better in that he was walking around, barking at other dogs, had a regular heart rate and abdomen seemed less distended. His weight was down to 10 pounds. She continued to have him take pred, sucralfate, metroindazole, and azothioprine. On (b) (6) (b) (6) weight was down to 9 pound 13 ounces. Abdomen was distended. Slight murmur of heart.

			Didn't want to eat and was very gassy. Drew blood and WBC up to 38500 and PCV down to 23.8%. Liver enzymes still elevated, calcium slightly better, creat was still low and phosphorus was decreased. (b) (6) did not want to take the cerenia. Vet had me start him on another round of infusing hetastarch via IV 23 mL every 8 hours for 3 days. On (b) (6), I came home to find (b) (6) extremely shaky, trembling and with increased respiration. I took him back to the vet who saw he also had a distended abdomen, weight down to 9 pounds 1 ounce, and tachycardia. He was having difficulty standing and showed no emotion when he went to the vet. The vet and tech were able to examine him without a muzzle for the first time ever. He was in shock and the vet did not think that even though we were trying to find compatible blood for another transfusion, that he would be able to survive. He was obviously in pain and did not have any quality of life. Although it was the most difficult decision we had to make, we decided to euthanize him to end his suffering.

EON-169666	6/5/2014 12:51	Blue Buffalo Blue Wilderness Chicken Recipe Adult	We have been feeding both our cattle dogs (age 10, age 6) Blue Buffalo dog food for about 3 years. Recently while eating the Blue Buffalo Freedom food, the older dog began experiencing hip stiffness and increased drinking. The veterinarian found nothing abnormal in her bloodwork or overall health, but she was drinking and urinating much more than in the past. Last week we changed to the Blue Buffalo Wilderness food, and one dog simply would not eat the food for two days. When she finally did eat the food, she picked out all the small pellets and left them on the carpet (which is highly unusual). The other dog ate the food without hesitation but has been experiencing ever more severe symptoms, beginning with gas and stiffness in the hips, and now two days of vomiting and diarrhea. She is extremely distressed and wakes us up numerous times in the night to be let out, often to be unable to go. I looked up online to see if anyone else had a problem with this food only to find hundreds of recent complaints filed against it. How can this be sold at all, let alone marketed as one of the best, healthiest, highest end foods. We selected it purely because of the premium ingredients and now seeing all the symptoms these other pet owners have had and the degree of similarity to the issues our dogs have had on this food, we are horrified. Please investigate what has gone wrong with this food and prevent other animals from this suffering.	10	Years	Cattle Dog - Australian (blue heeler, red heeler, Queensland cattledog)	Dog	45	Pound

EON-169108	5/31/2014 20:33	Waggin' Train Chicken Jerky	Some time in approximately March of this year, I purchased Purina Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Dog Treats at Walmart. I feed them to my dogs over approximately 3-4 week period. One day my dog, (b) (6), threw-up in the house (unusual). When I examined the throw-up I saw a large dark gray mass. It was the size half a small apple, solid and rubbery looking, but I was able to insert a stick in it. After that, I noticed that both of my dogs (who both received the treats) started eating grass on a regular basis. Not realizing that it was the treats, I bought a second bag. Half way through the bag, with the dogs still eating grass, I decided to throw them out. It has been about two months and they are still both eating grass regularly. (b) (6) throws up 2-3 times a month.	12	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	90	Pound

No adverse reactions at first but in the early hours of the morning, the dog began vomiting and defecating without moving away from it. Took the dog outside and tried to give her water, she refused and was unable to stand under her own power and began breathing laboriously. we prepared her to go the emergency vet and within ten minutes her eyes had become glassy. At this point she began spasming and trying to move. After approximately two more minutes she had stopped breathing. I checked her airway, found it to be clear, and began compressions and assisted breathing. This effort proved fruitless and the dog passed. The entire event took less than an hour. We are aware of foods and substances that are potentially harmful to dogs and keep them out of the house or out of the dogs reach. EON-169079	5/31/2014 12:09	Waggin' Train Chicken Jerky Tenders	After eating Waggin Tail Chicken Jerky Treats from Purina purchased at Sam's Club about three weeks ago, my dog became very ill. He was lethargic and had diarrhea with blood visible in his stool. I stopped feeding him any treats and took him to the vets, who advised a bland diet of chicken with rice. I was unaware that the jerky treats were the culprit at this point. He started getting better on the bland diet and I gave him a jerky treat. He almost immediately started having symptoms again. He threw up his food and I can hear his stomach loudly gurgling. He has diarrhea again. I went online and saw all the reports and realized that the treats are bad. He seems to be getting better now that he has had no treats. I have thrown them away and will never purchase again. I also plan to notify Sam's Club. EON-169068	5/31/2014 10:03	Friskies Surfin' & Turfin' Favorites	Both new food in April at Walmart. My kitties eat usually Special Kitty. Seeing this might be a better healthier deal we purchase Purina Surf-in and Turfin food. Started feeding all six cats on the (b) (6) and my Manx Siamese Cat (b) (6) was dead by the (b) (6). I was devastated as my cats are monitored inside and outside. We live back a long lane in the country and they never leave the house area and the closet homes are two or more miles away. Our cameras inside and out watch them and we interact with them all day every day. My other cats got sick and were throwing up and not acting right. I hurried and changed them back to Special Kitty and are doing much better now. Purina has offered and is sending me a check for $250.00 this week. Has me so concerned for other owners. This devastated me as (b) (6) was a Special one of a kind cat and was my Kitty Mother's first born as I have one from each of her litters. She is the Manx and the father to all was a Siamese. My cats were all fixed two years ago when I married and very healthy and very smart, not your usual cats. All had been inside and out cats and have been very healthy till the food change and they eat nothing we don't give them and it has always been dry food, once every six months a wet cat food treat in a can. No snacks of any kind. Daily their cat food we only feed them. When I saw (b) (6) laying under my van and the way he laid and died I thought to myself he had been poisoned. I have raised and took care of animals since age thirteen and know a lot. There were no bites, no marks and he seemed to lay down and have went to sleep. EON-169025	5/30/2014 22:30	Jerky Treats Tender Strips Dog Snacks Lamb	I came home from work early Wed morning and she had gotten a brand new, unopened container of Jerky treats off the counter and ate half of the container. The container is from Costco so it is 3.75lbs. Wed at 5am I woke up to her vomiting. There were whole, undigested jerky treats and some blood. She had 2 episodes of diarrhea and one more episode of vomiting. I later gave her some chicken broth and she was ok. Seemed a little tired but figured she had an upset stomach from all the jerky treats. By 9pm on Wed she was lethargic, panting and seemed out of it. she did not look good. she started salivating, ran outside vomited a ton of blood clots and collapsed to the ground. I rushed her to the emergency vet. She could not stand on her own she was so weak. They ran her blood work and her coags came back fine so she did not ingest rat poison. The X rays came back normal. she had not ingested a foreign object. They decided to do a blood transfusion since she was so weak and her PCV was 21. By Thursday am she seemed to be doing better. The abdominal ultrasound came back negative for free fluid and pancreatitis. I called back at around 3pm to get an update and she was stable. By 4pm she was weak, pale, panting and her heart rate was elevated. They ran her blood work again and she needed another transfusion. She had not vomited again but had a ton of digested blood in her stool. They decided to perform endoscopy and look at her stomach to see if there was a bleeding ulcer. They only found bruising to her stomach lining, digested blood and some diffuse bleeding. they went into her duodenum and could not find any active bleeding there either. Friday morning at 10am she was doing good again but by 11:45 she was weak, pale and her heart rate was up. They ran her blood and it was now 10 and it was 19 earlier in the am. She vomited one time with only a very small amount of blood but she still had a ton of melena, which means she is still bleeding severely somewhere in her small intestines. She just received her 3rd blood transfusion! She was very healthy prior to this. She had lab work	7	Years	Shepherd (unspecified)	Dog	75	Pound done in September and it came back good. She was eating well. No issues with vomiting or diarrhea or blood in her stool prior to this incident. She did not get into anything else that night. This is only the 2nd time in 6 years that she has eaten something that she was not supposed to. She did not get into any meds or anything else. I searched the house and yard to see but there was nothing. I have a foster dog who eats the same food and drinks the same water so it is not that. The only thing the foster dog did not get into was the treats. I am pretty sure the treats have caused this. Even the vets think it's the treats since there is nothing else that could cause this severe bleeding. From what I have read some of the contaminated jerky treats have caused severe bleeding. I am very concerned and think they need to be tested. I am afraid there might be other dogs that will get sick from this but will take a longer time since they are only getting one at a time, where mine ate half the container so it affected her much faster and more severe. Other dogs could slowly be bleeding and the owners don;t know yet.

EON-168460	5/27/2014 17:09	Waggin' Train Jerky Treats	My dog suffered for nearly two years with kidney failure. Around 8-9 years of age he began to slow down physically and have bowel movement problems; but, was still fairly active and I just attributed it to aging. He had his first hospitalization with the vet at the age of 10 His bloodwork at the time showed the beginnings of kidney failure and I was concerned because the news was out on the jerky treats. The FDA had not commented at that time and the Duck treats were never mentioned so I switched to Duck and limited the amount. About 1 year later he became very ill. The bloodwork at the time had not worsened and since he had in infection it was attributed to colitis. About 6 months later he became ill again and this time the bloodwork showed Stage3 kidney failure. I tried several things; but, unfortunately about 3 months later I had to Euthanize him. It was one of the hardest things I have ever had to do. I am sure the 'jerky treats' from china were a major factor in his death. The Vet would not rule that as the sole cause as he was 12 years old. I just know I fed him a lot of the treats over the years and his slow down physically and bowel problems, looking back on it, roughly correspond to the feeding of the treats. A good friend of mine has one of his litter mates who is still alive. He never really fed the dog much more than dry dog food and table scraps. I just felt the need to make a report. I have been reading of the ongoing investigation in the news. I did stop feeding the Chicken jerky when it first hit the news; but, started feeding Duck jerky as it had not been mentioned. Unfortunately with kidney failure the damage is not reversible. Thanks for listening and good luck with the investigation. I really hope you solve this thing. (Note: I do not have an exact date for the problem starting. Do to the nature of kidney failure associated with the jerky treats it takes place gradually over time; but, there does not appear to be an unknown option)	12	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	75	Pound

We typically give her 1 piece per day, or less - but we were camping and used more jerky than normal due to its convenience. She threw up several times over the course of a few minutes. There were noticeable pieces of jerky in the bile. Other treats were used, but from our history we know those are good to her system. EON-168360	5/26/2014 23:30	Waggin' Train Chicken Jerky Tenders	I purchased Purina brand Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Tenders as a dog treat. The day I purchased them I gave (b) (6) 3 treats which for a 40+ pound dog was the recommended serving. With-in 24 hours he was having terrible stomach problems, blood in his stool, inside of 48 hours his stool was nothing but watery blood, I stopped giving him the treats as I thought they could be cutting his throat and/or stomach. With-in a few days his bowel movements became stiffer and he began to eat better. After approx a week I tried to chip the pieces into smaller sizes and then fed him 1 treat. I purchased a new case on 5-11-14 and they began eating the Turkey food on 5-14-14. The same day 2 of the 3 cats developed diarrhea (the 11 year old and 1 of the 1-yr-old cats). The next day they ate the chicken flavor and both still had diarrhea. The third day they ate the Turkey again, only this time all 3 cats had diarrhea, and the 11 year old had uncontrollable vomiting. I took them off the food for 3 days, the vomiting ceased, but they still had diarrhea. I opened another can of the Turkey flavor, the oldest cat ran from the room and the other two refused to eat it. I threw the can away and took the product back to PetsMart and told them there must be something wrong with that particular case. They refunded my money, but did not seem concerned that there was something wrong with the product. On visiting PetsMart today, the shelf still had cans of the Turkey from the same stock number that I returned. All 3 cats are eating the chicken flavor, no vomiting and their diarrhea has finally cleared (after 13 days).	11	Years	Domestic Shorthair	Cat	12	Pound

She stayed at the vets for 2 days during which time she was given fluids into her tissue and the vet attempted to feed her without success. The vet called and wanted me to pick her up and bring her back home in an attempt for me to try and feed her. She had BUN, creatinine, phosphorus and WBC blood levels that were in the critical range. Once at home, I was unable to feed her due to lack of appetite. She was able to take fluids but vomited anything she took in by mouth. He threw up foamy yellow bile daily, ate grass constantly, had soupy stools, was very lethargic, and refused his food several times. This from a dog who has always been extremely energetic and INHALES his food when it's given to him. There is an undeniable difference between the bag we had before and the bag we bought in March. The kibble was shaped differently, had a stronger smell, was darker in color, and had a different texture. I just assumed the company had changed its formula and thought nothing of it. I figured it was intentional that it was THAT different. Had it crossed my mind that the change might poison him, I would have taken it back immediately. Unfortunately, our 3-year-old schnauzer, (b) (6), had started to sneak little pieces of (b) (6) kibble and she began to throw up yellow bile too. She has breed-specific food, though, so we kept her away from it for the most part and she thankfully hasn't shown any other symptoms. We took (b) (6) to the vet twice over this issue and the vet agreed that it was the food. EON-168020	5/22/2014 17:30	11" - 12" bully stick	On or about April 11th, I gave my 2 dogs each a bully stick that was unlabelled, purchased from (b) (6). After (b) (6) had ingested hers, I noticed that she smelled terrible. (I usually buy odorless bullies from a private pet store where they source them from Canada but they had run out and so I bought these particular bully sticks that night from Bulk Barn.) I assumed that the really stinky stick (b) (6) got was one that had been misplaced in the bin of odorless ones, as Bulk Barn carries both varieties. A couple of days later I noticed that (b) (6) was only eating about half her normal amount of food. This continued every day, where she left half her food behind, extremely unlike her. For a few days she vomited bile. She was hungry and interested in the food, so she had an appetite, but halfway through she would always stop and I couldn't get her to eat any more. She rapidly lost weight, 9 lbs in 3 weeks - highly unusual given her hypothyroidism. She ate less and less as the days/weeks went on. Her poops were dark and mushy but formed. I took her in for bloodwork on May 6th, where it was found that she had elevated liver enzymes. All other results were normal. I started feeding her a liver friendly diet, of cooked chicken, fish, potatoes, green beans, yogurt, etc. At first she was always interested in the food but still didn't eat much. I started adding canned dog food to entice her to eat more. That worked for a little while. She was also started on supplements to help bile and liver function, and digestive enzymes (from my vet, who had had success in treating liver disease with these supplements previously). She had an abdominal ultrasound done on May 9th, her liver size was	4	Years	Shepherd (unspecified)	Dog	92	Pound

			normal. No parasites in her stool. CBC all normal. She tested negative for EPI. Urine tests came back with bilirubin. On May 15th I started keeping daily notes on her food intake and behaviour. She was getting more and more distressed while eating, stopping, pacing, drinking water, then would eat a bit more then stop. Drank much more water than usual, and urinated more. I had a harder and harder time getting her to eat. She got to the point she refused solid food, and would only lick a bit of canned cat food mixed with water and mashed potatoes. She continued to lose weight. It clearly pained her to eat as she would stop often, lick her lips a lot, pace, drink water then come back to the food or more often than not, go lie down. She has nasty-sounding burps, like something is coming up. This happens on empty or full stomach. On occasion she has had dry heaves. On May 19 she had episodes overnight of pawing frantically at the left side of her face, to the point it bled all over her paw. On May 20th she got distressed while trying to drink water, could only lap a small amount before stopping, with her ears back, pacing, coming back to the bowl to drink a bit more, then give up altogether. I took her to my regular vet, had her bloodwork done and it showed that despite the two weeks of supplements and the liver friendly diet, her liver enzymes worsened. I then took her to the emergency department at the (b) (6) (b) (6) Over the past few days they have performed a number of tests including bloodwork, gastric scope, xrays, ultrasound and needle aspirates and so far the results are inconclusive. (b) (6) continues to deteriorate and I am desperately looking for answers. After doing some online investigation and reading of the FDA reports, I got in touch with Ms. Renate Reimschuessel of the Vet-LIRN and asked if bully sticks might be the culprit, as her symptoms seem to relate to the majority of dogs that were affected by jerky treats (GI issues and liver disease). She recommended that I submit this complaint and ask that it be fast-tracked to her attention. Please pass this on to her ASAP. Thank you. I truly appreciate any assistance that the FDA and the Vet-LIRN can provide.

At the time we did not know about the Jerky Treats problem. They could not figure out what made him sick, so they put him on a couple antibiotics and some real bland dog food. During this, 2 of my other dogs have gotten sick and diarrhea, but are older and seem to be getting better. That Tuesday night we heard about the jerky and how so many dogs have gotten sick and died. We were shocked that these treats were still on Walmart's shelves! Wednesday morning I called the Vet and told them about everything. They checked (b) (6) treatment and said the medicines given to him should correct the illness. I asked about my other dogs. They said keep an eye on them and if they show any signs of illness, bring them in immediately. They said they will make a note in their charts for the future. This probably ties into 2 of our dogs that got sick and died last year. They both got sick, and oddly enough we were giving them the same treats. Both had to be euthanized.	7	Months	Pug	Dog	11	Pound

EON-167985	5/22/2014 12:51	Dogswell Happy Hips	Approximately 2-3 months ago I began buying Dogswell Happy Hips Chicken Jerky Treats. I was giving them to my dog on an occasional basis (several times a week, but not everyday). About a month ago my dog experienced a 24-48 hour period where he could not get up and walk around, lost his appetite, experienced abdominal convulsions and rapid experienced rapid irregular breathing. We took him to the vet where he was examined. The vet could not find a specific cause for his ailment but did some blood work to help uncover the mystery. Nothing specific was found but the vet did say that his liver enzymes were elevated. After the exam and blood tests the vet found nothing specific and my pets illness was attributed to old age and maybe some arthritis. The vet gave us some arthritis medication which we gave the dog regularly. Two days ago 5/19/2014 my dog experienced the same type of illness and was taken to the vet again. This time the vet concluded via x-ray that my dog's bowel was inflamed and that he had some gastrointestinal distress. He gave us new easy to digest dog food and changed his medicine. Again most of my dog's problems were attributed to old age. EON-167949	5/22/2014 6:15	Trifexis (spinosad+milbemycin oxime)	I would like to suggest that you consider cross-referencing data about the jerky treat contamination with data about the use of Trifexis (spinosad +milbemycin) and other oral flea and tick treatments. I am happy to acknowledge that for many reasons, from a scientific perspective, my observations are not particularly compelling as data (I have listed several of the reasons in paragraph 2). Also, I am not passionately opposed to Trifexis (and similar products). Although I have switched brands, I continue to use oral treatments for the prevention of heartworm, fleas, ticks, etc. for my pets. Nonetheless, I do pay close attention to my pets' health and i believe that long-term use of Trifexis was a contributing factor in a progressive deterioration of my dog's GI health. The most obvious problem with my conclusion is that my dog is 14 years old. I understand that older dogs get sick more frequently and more easily than younger ones. I also acknowledge that my observations are correlative rather than causal. I have no direct evidence that any of the problems or symptoms related to my dog's GI tract were directly related to long-term use of Trifexis. But, I immediately after I stopped using Trifexis, my dog's symptoms abated and she began to recover. Approximately a year and a half ago, my dog developed problematic weight loss, diarrhea, severe ulcers, and several systemic GI infections. After, several unsuccessful diagnoses, and nearly 6 months of tests, she was diagnosed with persistent colitis. As a treatment, she was put on a restricted diet. At the time, she had been taking Trifexis monthly for approximately 2 years. For the first several months of treatment (on her restricted diet) she showed marginal improvement, but regular relapses. After several months, I noticed that the relapses occurred regularly the week following her Trifexis treatments. I brought it up to my vet, and we	14	Years	Pinscher - Miniature	Dog	8.5	Pound

			decided to switch her to a different medicine. Immediately, she showed dramatic improvement and has not had any relapses since stopping the Trifexis. I believe that while the Trifexis did not cause the problem, it exasperated and contributed to the symptoms and disease. It seems that there is a strong correlation between the rise in food related intolerance and bacterial infections and the widespread adoption of oral flea and tick medicine. It is a strong enough correlation that I think it might be a good idea to consider looking at a wide cross-section of the cases to see if there are significant trends that need further investigation.

The snacks were purchased mainly from Walmart who sold them in 25 quantity in bags. My yellow lab started to have seizures one morning, and I took her to the vet immediately to check for canine epilepsy. The blood test returned negative. She would constantly lick and lick her lips and walk around the house without finding a comfortable place to lie down. At one point, she wouldn't come back in the house because she seemed to be afraid of what was happening to her at home without an understanding of what is going on. She would stare straight ahead during these episodes as well. All the signs of canine seizures. However, the vet found nothing. This continued to happen every other month where this reaction would go on for half and hour or more. One weekend, my other golden retriever came to stay at my house for the weekend (she lived with my ex). I gave all three dogs the same treats on Thursday and by Friday, the golden could not stand up and would not eat. I immediately took her to the vet and was informed that she was going into kidney failure. She died that weekend. It was not until a bit later when I heard on the news about the FDA warning about certain jerky treats from China. I immediately stopped giving these port twists to my lab and my other golden, and threw the treats away. My lab never had another seizure after that.

EON-167907	5/21/2014 13:27	CADET Duck Breast Jerkey	(b) (6) became very sick in January of this year. Up to the point of becoming violently ill, the dog treat we gave him (probably 4-5 large pieces per day) was CADET Duck Breast Jerkey, purchased from Costco, with the product origin being China. The primary symptom (b) (6) evidenced was persistent vomiting, seemingly uncontrollable at the time, and resulting weight loss. After one week of unsuccessful efforts to resolve the issue in partnership with (b) (6) regular vet, we took him to see a specialty vet at (b) (6) in (b) (6). The internist who treated him, (b) (6) performed many tests--blood tests, tissue biopsies, an upper endoscopy to name a few. (b) (6) diagnosed (b) (6) as having severe inflammatory bowel disease--indicating that (b) (6) stomach and upper intestines were highly inflamed. He was placed on many medications--costly medications--as well as a highly restrictive hypoallergenic diet. After 8 weeks on the diet, he began to regain a bit of weight, and we were allowed to gradually add back single-ingredient foods to the daily feeding regimen. (b) (6) has had no reaction to any of the foods we've been adding in--pork loin, carrots, peas, bison, venison--all foods that typically don't create issues for dogs. We were about to add back in his favorite treat, the CADET Duck Breast that we still had ample supply of, when I saw a local news broadcast and read an article that shed light on the issue. I now feel fairly certain that my pet's health issues were attributable to this duck breast from China, which I'll be returning to Costco today. 			19080543, in that case number it has the code on the bottom of the can and the expiration date was October 2015. I began searching on-line and found a very informative web-site called Petfoodtalk.com and that was where I saw all of the posts of people who had gone through the same thing and one post was specific about the date on the can. I had two in my cupboard, I turned them over to my vet, maybe he could find something. When I contacted Purina and spoke to customer service, her name was Liz, she asked me if I wanted to file a claim. I was not looking for money, I wanted them to correct the problem with their food. There are people out there that cannot afford a $700 vet bill and would just put the cats down, because of them. The way it was explained to me was that sometimes, like with people, some foods upset your tummy. At that point I asked what would happen with my call and I was told I would be referred to the brand team. I asked if I could be contacted after they did their investigating to find out what is wrong with that batch of food. I was assured that they heat their food to a safe temperature and that there were no issues with their cat food. I then mentioned that I saw that there were no recalls on their food when I looked on the FDA website. Then Liz assured me there had never been a recall on Fancy Feast, I told her I also saw that. At that point I said that since I wasn't sure my phone call was going to go anywhere I would be contacting the FDA. Not even 15 minutes later a woman by the name of Mary called me from Purina and left a message on my phone. Her number is (b) (6) I tried calling her back today on the 20th and left a message. I did not want to have any more conversation with them or file a complaint until I went back to the vet to get (b) (6) staples out and speak with the vet about what happened. He tried to culture one of the cans but did not get anything to "grow" in it. He also told me and I quote, "I did some more research on this and found that there are a lot of cats this is happening to with the fancy feast, you're not alone." He also said that he is surprised that people are not doing more about this so that there is a recall on this product. Here I am today filing my complaint. My vet assured my that I'm not crazy. EON-167847	5/20/2014 17:54	Dingo Market Cuts Chicken Jerky 16 oz	We have 2 Mini Schnauzer's (b) (6) (6 years old who has been with us since she was 12 weeks old) and (b) (6) (Approx 1-2 years of age who we adopted in August 2013). Our dogs are on a diet of Purina EN and, due to the history of Pancreatitis in Schnauzers, our dogs are not allowed any human food. Our dogs are both inside dogs and did not get into anything they shouldn't have. Around lunch time on 02-21-14 both dogs were given a Chicken Jerky treat. It was Dingo Market Cuts Chicken Jerky, 16 oz "Made in the USA" brand. After arriving home from work (approx 3:00pm) I discovered that one of the dogs had vomited. I quickly found out it was (b) (6). by 8:00pm that night (b) (6) had vomited 2 more times, began presenting with diarrhea and uncontrollable shivering. I rushed her to the Emergency Vet near our home. (b) (6) was severely dehydrated and in apparent distress but a complete blood work up failed to show any reason for her condition. Even though we have both dogs on a strict diet we elected to go ahead with the pancreatitis screening, if for no other reason than to rule it out. The screening came back negative for pancreatitis. They wanted to put (b) (6) on an I.V. drip and keep her overnight but, because she's a rescue, I didn't want to leave her there unless it was absolutely necessary. In the end she was given fluids, an anti-vomiting medication, antibiotics and I was able to take her home with strict instructions to bring her back immediately if she didn't begin improving. I watched her through the night and followed up with our regular vet the next day. She recovered within 48 hours. The vet was 100% sure the "Made in the USA" chicken jerky treats were the cause of (b) (6) onset. She said if we had waited until the next day to have (b) (6) seen by our regular vet we probably would have lost her. She did not think (b) (6) would have made it through the night.	1	Years	Schnauzer - Miniature	Dog	14	Pound

EON-167843	5/20/2014 17:15	DreamBone Vegetable and Chicken Chews Mini	We have 2 Mini Schnauzer's (b) (6) (6 years old who has been with us since she was 12 weeks old) and (b) (6) (Approx 1-2 years of age who we adopted in August 2013). Our dogs are on a diet of Purina EN and, due to the history of Pancreatitis in Schnauzers, our dogs are not allowed any human food. Our dogs are both inside dogs and did not get into anything they shouldn't have. We had been giving them DreamBone Vegetable and Chicken Mini Chews for treats. We had a package with 2 chews left. On 12-28-13 my husband gave each dog a chew. Approximately 2 hours later both dogs vomited. (b) (6) (the older dog) was fine after that. (b) (6) (rescue) continued to vomit once a day for the next 3 days, but otherwise seemed fine. On the 3rd day, 12-31-13, after (b) (6) vomited for the 4th time she began to shiver. I immediately called my vet and took her in to see them. (b) (6) was severely dehydrated and in apparent distress but a complete blood work up failed to show any reason for her condition. Because of the strict diet we have the dogs on, we elected not to do the pancreatitis screening at that time. She was given fluids, an anti-vomiting medication, and antibiotics. She recovered within 48 hours. The vet suggested that I check the treats and find out where they were made. It was her feeling that the treats made both dogs sick initially but, for whatever reason, (b) (6) system wasn't able to recover like (b) (6) did. After checking the bag we found out the DreamBone Vegetable and Chicken Mini Chews are made in China. We have been giving these exact treats to our dogs for years. I've known about the jerky treats making dogs sick since 2007. I know for a fact that the DreamBone treat bag at one point in time said "Made in the USA". Obviously, over the years, that changed and I didn't catch the change.	1	Hours	Schnauzer - Miniature	Dog	14	Pound

My toy poodle has always eaten Taste of the wild since her adoption 1 1/2 years ago. About a month ago she got very ill, bloody stool, diarrhea. The vet recommended I take her off her food and feed her only rice and chicken while they did tests. She spent one day in their hospital on IV fluids and was put on antibiotics. In about 5 days she seemed to get better and I switched her back to Taste of the wild and that evening she went into distress with very bloody forceful diarrhea. That lasted a few days and I immediately took her off of Taste of the Wild. I again fed her chicken and rice and she recovered. The vet did an extensive analysis on her stool, sending it away to labs. My toy poodle's stool showed that she is a healthy dog. Obviously I am never feeding her that product again. I am so happy she is recovered; however, it seemed very important that you know of this incident in order to protect other dogs. She is now eating the kibble Acana and is doing very well.	3	Years	Poodle - Toy	Dog	10	Pound

He may have eaten about 6 pieces over a couple of days after he developed diarrhea initially followed by bloody stool. We initially had no idea what happened. He was in considerable pain during his bowel movement and besides blood in stool, there were also drops of clear blood. We stopped feeding him for a bit (basically skipped a meal) and then tried to help him recover by feeding his regular organic chicken mixed with plain rice and yoghurt for a couple of days after which he recovered. We had also stopped giving him the jerky since his illness. He seems to be recovering and we given him his other regular treats since with no ill effects. The recent articles about jerky treats causing illness (which we weren't aware of when we bought it) and the fact that his illness happened contemporaneous with us giving him the new treat makes it highly probable that the jerky was the cause.	18	Months	Poodle - Standard	Dog	45	Pound

			Vet visit on May 16: We brought the other cat <sup>(b) (6)</sup> to the vet on Friday May 16th, and it was agreed by the vet <sup>(b) (6)</sup> at <sup>(b) (6)</sup> <sup>(b) (6)</sup> in <sup>(b) (6)</sup> that <sup>(b) (6)</sup> ultrasound should be cancelled as this was clearly a case of the food making the cats ill. <sup>(b) (6)</sup> was seen by the vet and given rescue hydration and anti-nausea medication. Today is Saturday the 17th and she is not better and I am very fearful for her health as I write this tonight. <sup>(b) (6)</sup> was a healthy 8 year old cat. Both of these cats were normal, healthy, vaccinated, indoor cats prior to this food being fed to them. To date, the medical bills for treatment of both cats totals $751.86 Anecdotally, when I took the unopened cans back to <sup>(b) (6)</sup> on <sup>(b) (6)</sup> in <sup>(b) (6)</sup> to discuss the problem, I was informed that another woman had called in to let them know that her cat "was sick" from Wellness canned Chicken, which my own cats got fed two meals of.

EON-167528	5/18/2014 12:12	4 health beef and potato grain free dog food	(b) (6) became sick and over several day refused to eat with vomiting and diarrhea. Vet said he had a bacterial stomach infection from eating bad meat. Not sure if she identified type of infection or test used. Complications set in causing this to be an 8 week ordeal. complications - bad reaction to first antibiotic, infection got into blood stream, then pancreatitis, Four weeks later vet says I need to take him to specialist for ultra sound because she cant find any reason for him to be sick. I found a vet (not specialist) with ultra sound to check him out. Ultra sound found thickened intestinal walls. (b) (6) was also visibly anemic. Severl test, two week, 5 day stay at vet, i am once again told to go to specialist. Before I get to specialist 2 days (b) (6) is able to hold food down. Specialist ran test found nothing. Said since he was eating anemia was better to just keep doing what i was doing. I had been given canned dog food for irritable bowls about 2 weeks into this and the second vet gave me Royal canin Hypoallergenic dog food 20lbs gave him two bags of this and a dozen can of this before starting him on a 30lbs bag of puppy food. After puppy food was out and no vomiting for 2 weeks I started him back on the 4 health. A couple of days later he vomited once. Figured he had gotten into some scraps or something outside. Only a couple days later he vomited again. Same a few days later and I had closely monitored him and he hadn't eaten anything but his dog food. At this time I start to wonder why after a couple of weeks of no symptom was he vomiting again. I purchased a different brand of dog food and have had no further symptoms for 8 days now.	2.5	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	75	Pound

EON-167506	5/17/2014 16:21	Kirkland Signature Super Premium Maintenance Cat Chicken and Rice Formula	I recently purchased ¿Kirkland super premium chicken and lamb formula¿ for my cat. I mixed the new food with some of his old stuff and couple weeks later he began vomiting. He vomited for 3 days just bile. I took him to the vet and they did blood work, urinalysis, and sub Q fluids for dehydration. They couldn't find anything wrong and he continued to vomit. The next day they did an x-ray and stated that there was no significant findings. Total vet bill=$850 just to save a bit of money on this cheap food. I¿m in (b) (6) and purchased this food at Costco. At this point my cat was given more fluids Sub Q and an injection to suppress his vomiting¿I also started giving my cat food that I purchased at the vet (Gastro Moderate MCRC). So far he has not vomited today but he is eating very little and not drinking. EON-167505	5/17/2014 16:21	Beneful Original	Friday night, I bought her a bag of Beneful Original. She ate her first meal of it that night. The next morning, she ate it a little reluctantly, which was odd for her. She was trained to eat at mealtimes, and ate rather quickly other than this. Saturday through Monday morning, she became more reluctant to eat, and more sluggish. I didn't think too much of it, but it seemed odd. When I got home from work Monday night, she had vomited blood all over our room. I decided against feeding her the food again, but made sure she drank water. In the morning (Tuesday), I took her to the vet. They ran some tests and determined she had developed pancreatitis. Unable to get her to eat or drink that day, they recommended we take her to a pet ER nearby for the night. Upon picking her up, the ER staff told us she had taken a turn for the worse in the night. Her kidneys were failing, and due to her heart condition they couldn't treat her with dialysis. They were scared to give her her Enalapril because of the adverse effects to her kidneys. After returning her to the vet for the day, and discussing it with the vet, it seemed better to let her go. Her kidneys were beyond the ability to recover. It had been long enough without her having her regular medications that her heart was starting to deteriorate as well. I had her put to sleep in my arms at 6:30 PM on Wednesday. I have the remaining food still if it needs to be tested, as well as hard copies of records from her visits there. However, it might be easier to obtain the records from them directly.	12	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	15	Pound

The greyhound, (b) (6), just ate a small amount of it and the next day he vomited a large quantity of material but then seemed fine. Our smaller dog, (b) (6) ate much more of the bones. The next day he vomited a small amount of material several times and then started getting lethargic. We brought him to the vet emergency services and his bowel was all distended so they operated. His bowel was very inflamed and distended when they operated. They opened his stomach and took out bone pieces. He went into multiple organ failure and died about 24 hours later.	4	Years	Spaniel - King Charles Cavalier	Dog	30	Pound

EON-167503	5/17/2014 16:12	Fancy Feast Gravy Lovers Turkey	Within hours of (b) (6) eating Fancy Feast Turkey Gravy Lovers canned food she was lethargic and behaving abnormally. She is usually a very active and playful animal. She was withdrawn and hid in the closet for the entire weekend (May 9, 10 & 11) and in obvious distress. She drooled excessively and had several retching/gagging episodes. She had several vomiting episodes over the weekend. I stopped the wet food (Fancy Feast Turkey Gravy Lovers) on Saturday night (May 10). She continued to vomit occasionally for the next 24 hours. I gave her dry food only for a few days and then re-introduced the Fancy Feast Turkey Gravy Lovers (1 teaspoon) on Thursday night (May 15). Within an hour she was obviously not feeling well as she was withdrawn and hiding in the closet. Overnight she vomited all over the house. All day Friday I gave her only dry food and she is fine. This morning (Saturday May 17) I have fed her Trader Joe brand Tongol tuna (people food) with no salt. She is fine.	11	Years	Russian	Cat	12	Pound
EON-167483	5/17/2014 1:48	Savory Prime Chicken Breast Fillets Chicken Jerky	she developed a gastro-intestinal illness approximately 2-3 weeks after our other dog became sick. She had no appetite, would vomit anything she ate, had diarrhea, vet xrayed stomach which was had gas in it, and gave her meds to attempt to stimulate bowels. She looked like she might be getting a bit better after 4-5 days, then went downhill and returned to vet more test, unknown what was wrong but vet was pretty sure it was ingested. She died the next day about 7-8 days after initial sickness occurred. Unknown if this is related to the chicken jerky from china, but when saw the report the connection was too close to ignore. Initial date below of sickness is approximate, but I will be able to pinpoint exact date based on vet trips. The day she was starting to act a bit better one of the only things she ate was a piece of jerky. The next day she was again much more sick. Our other dog(lab) had gotten sick about 3 weeks earlier. Vet trip also showed gas in stomach, similar symptoms loss of appetite, vomiting everything he ate, diarrhea, continued drinking water. EON-167314	5/15/2014 19:12	Pedigree	My dog had been sick repeatedly with vomiting, lethargy, abdominal pain (which resulted in a trip to a vet ER), lack of appetite. and mucus in stool. Earlier in the year he had a bout of bloody diarrhea. Connected? I don't know. Unsure when exactly the problems started. I looked at the ingredients on the can label and discovered that it contains onion powder and garlic powder, both of which are known to be very toxic to dogs, especially onion. Any animal nutritionist or vet should know that fact. It can cause a form of hemolytic anemia. I found on a website (www.consumeraffairs.com) over 400 reports of dogs getting sick after eating pedigree. All with the same or similar symptoms which my dog exhibited as well. At least one person had a pet euthanized. This food is basically poison in a can (or bag). Please get it off the shelves ASAP and deal with Mars pet foods severely on behalf of all the animals that have suffered because of their negligence. Since switching to a different food that doesn't contain "poison", my dog is doing much better. He is getting back to his normal self.	4	Years	Mixed (Dog)	Dog	15	Pound

EON-166504	5/7/2014 17:15	Diamond Naturals Grain-Free Whitefish and Sweet Potato Formula for Dogs All Life Stages	I have been feeding my dog this food for about two weeks now. Everything was fine until last night. The dog sleeps in a kennel in the next room and usually sleeps the whole night through. He woke up last night whimpering/barking. I walked out to find dark brown vomit next to his cage, as well as dark brown diarrhea. I let my dog outside where he them vomited two more times- one of those times being a substantial amount. He also had another bowel movement that was thin and watery.	2	Years	Boxer (German Boxer)	Dog	65	Pound

EON-166501	5/7/2014 16:42	Taste of the Wild Sierra Mountain Canine Formula with Roasted Lamb	New bag of food was started with Wednesday evening's feeding. On Thursday, he suffered from severe diarrhea, starting in the early morning and lasting through the night. I did not feed him the food with Thursday evenings feeding, opting instead for something gentle on the stomach. He ate the food again on Friday and suffered from a lot of gas, which I thought was a little bit leftover from Thursday's illness. On Saturday evening, he ate it again. On Sunday afternoon, he vomited, throwing up approximately half of the food he was given on Saturday evening. The kibble in his vomit was solid pieces; very obviously undigested. I attempted to feed him again to see if he was hungry and he completely denied the food. Knowing something was wrong, we rushed him to the emergency vet. His entire abdomen was distended with massive amounts of gas. They opted for an exploratory surgery since there were no blockages identifiable in the xrays that were taken. Upon the surgery, all that was discovered was bleeding in his digestive tract and a bit of fluid in his abdomen, with no discernible reason for the issue (no perforations or torsions, no ulcers, etc)	11	Years	Shepherd Dog - German	Dog	83	Pound

EON-166396	5/7/2014 9:42	blue buffalo basics sensitive solution formula grain free turkey and potato recipe with life source bits	I had been feeding my cat blue buffalo cat food, basics turkey and potato recipe, for about 6 months. on (b) (6) my cat started acting slightly strange by being more cuddly and trying to pee on pieces of furniture, which he has never done before. On (b) (6) my cat woke up and was very lethargic, i noticed he went to the litter box and was there for a while so i went to check on him after several attempt of him trying to use the bathroom i noticed he was bleeding. i took him to the vet right away. they ran blood test and it came back that he had kidney failure. The vet said this was caused by stone not being able to pass and backing up causing his kidney failure. the vet strong kept mentioning his diet as the cause of this issue. after hearing the extreme cost of what it would take to save my cat and also being told he would never have a normal life even if everything was successful we made the painful decision to have the cat put down. I have been researching issues other pet owners have had while feeding there animals blue buffalo and they are a lot! i would like to bring a website to your attention  http://www.consumeraffairs.com/pets/blue_buffalo.html. not all reviews are bad but there are several other report in there similar to mine. I had never heard anything negative about blue buffalo food until after i had to put my cat down. if i had i would of done more research on the food. there should be warning labels on this food!
EON-166395	5/7/2014 9:42	Blue Buffalo	Cat was making frequent trips to litter box but urine clumps were few in number. Took to vet who determined that there were crystals in the urine. Cat food had been changed recently (one bag was not even completely eaten) to Blue Buffalo, I feel this was the cause of the problem which was strengthened by reading online reviews and the death of a relatives cat after eating Blue Buffalo. My cat is now on a Science Diet Bladder Health blend which can only be purchased at the vets office, this will have to be purchased for her the remainder of her life!	7	Years	Unknown	Cat	15	Pound

EON-166383	5/7/2014 1:12	Simply Nourish chicken and brown rice adult dog food-dry	i bought the simply nourish dry dog food and sweet potato chews/ treats at the petsmart in (b) (6), and after 4-6 days of feeding this food exclusively, my dog has constant diarrhea, slow and lethargic, vomiting and overall listlessness, constant thirst, this is the first time i have ever fed them this brand. I'm an ex veterinary tech and my dog is showing all signs of salmonella. liquid mucous stool, no energy, very thirsty, moving slow and constant stomach gurgling sounds, he's is currently up to date on all his vaccines as i am an ex veterinary technician i take the utmost care of my pets. he was perfectly fine before feeding him the new food. i also mix in some of the Nulo brand canned food into the dry food, i bought several Flavors of the Nulo canned food so i cannot pinpoint the exact flavor, i got several variety/flavors of the Nulo so they will have a little variety in their diet, the Nulo doesn't seem to be the problem i strongly believe it is the "simply nourish chicken and brown rice adult dry food". my dogs are always kept in the best of health and have regular vet visits. They are bathed and kept clean and reside indoors with us. they have they best of everything and i make sure they are healthy. I know that this simply nourish company uses deboned chicken....but my investigation shows they have been known to use dead, diseased and dying chickens. those are the so called Debonned chickens. this is terrible and was wondering what my next step would be in this matter. i have never had any problems until now and felt it was important to notify you, because our dogs are like family as they are to many people. not to mention the zoonotic factors involved. Thank you for your time and consideration on this matter. sincerely, (b) (6)	3	Years	Retriever - Labrador	Dog	100	Pound

EON-166310	5/6/2014 13:36	Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Tenders	(b) (6) used to love the Waggin Train Chicken Jerky Tenders and was never sick from them. When I heard that they were recalled I was shocked. But it did make sense because prior to giving her the Waggin Train Brand I had tried Milos Kitchen and Canyon Creek and both gave her diarrhea and intestinal distress. When I tried the waggin train one time and she did not get sick I thought we had a winner she ate them for quite a while. When I was in Walmart recently and saw them on the shelf I did not purchase immediately but called Purina to find out what the status was. They assured me that there was never anything found to be wrong with the Jerky and they were working closely in meeting all the guidelines for continued safety standards. So on my next shopping trip I tried a bag. I was cautious at first watching my girl like a hawk. But all seemed well. On the next trip I bought a larger bag. I gave her one that day and another that night. I did notice that they looked very dried out from what I remember and that they were no long full size tenders but pieces. The next morning I gave her another since they were so small. Within a few hours the diarrhea started then it turned bloody and the noise her intestines and stomach were making was horrendous. This continued on and off for just about a week. It was another week till her appetite is back closer to normal. I contacted Purina on 4/29 and provided the product information offered to send the product to them. They declined and instructed me to throw the product away Case#19070990.	9	Years	Chihuahua	Dog	13	Pound

On Thursday the vomiting continued and bloody diarrhea starting occurring. He was perfect health prior to the dog food switch. He has now been at the veterinarian's clinic for 24 hours on an IV, and they want to keep him another night on an IV because his symptoms still remain. He was swabbed for polvo and x-rayed upon the initial arrival. The polvo test came back negative and his x-ray showed his stomach being completely empty, so there is no sign that he has eaten something harmful.
